FAME AND GOLD THE LURE OF TWO DARING AVIATORS.

Porte and Hallett Expect to Be on Their Way Across the Atlantic by This Time Next Week.

Great Combination Vessel and Aeroplane Practically Completed in New York—Daily Tests Convince the Experts That the British Lieutenant and His California Companion Will Be Safer in the Air Than on the Sea.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HAMMONDSPORT (N. Y.) July 18.—The proposed flight across the Atlantic of Lieut. John Cyril Porte, pilot of the Rodman Wanamaker flying boat America, is the greatest achievement in outline ever undertaken for the navigation of air and water. The craft employed in the attempt will be the best of its kind ever built. The start will probably be made in one week. The lure of the game and the prize of $50,000 offered by a London newspaper are the reasons back of the plan to win fortune and fame—eternal fame.

PORTE IS CONFIDENT.

Referring to the "Vaterland" of flying boats Lieut. Porte says:

"In the first place, the simplest and clearest description that I can give of it is to say that it is a Curtiss flying boat of unusual size and with some unusual features. It is being built at the expense of Rodman Wanamaker of New York and Philadelphia, son of John Wanamaker, and an ardent follower of aeronautics. This year being the centenary of peace between America and Great Britain, Mr. Wanamaker felt that it would be a fitting celebration to link the continents with a flying machine.

"It was originally decided to use a big tractor biplane without chassis or boat, but with a body constructed water-tight, so that if a forced landing had to be made at sea the machine could have been kept afloat for some time, although unable to rise again. This original machine, although partially built, was discarded some time ago in favor of the flying boat type. This change was occasioned by a complete alteration of plans and not from any idea that the first type was not capable of making the flight from coast to coast, as we still think that the original machine was an entirely practical one. The reasons for the change of plan will be apparent later.

"I might point out here, to give an idea of the craft we shall use, that it has a wing area of 798 feet, more than twice that of the ordinary air-and-water machine. The average Curtiss flying boat has a wing area of but 360 feet. They weigh, totally equipped, about 2300 pounds, as against 5000 pounds for the trans-Atlantic craft. The spread of wing of the ordinary flying boat is thirty-six to forty feet; on the trans-Atlantic flyer it is seventy-two feet in the upper wings and forty-six in the lower. The width of the ordinary wing is five feet; on this machine seven feet.

"The hull is of white cedar, thirty-two feet long and with a beam of four feet. This, really nothing more than a boat, is designed with blunt nose and stream line form like the body of a huge fish. The curves were worked out by aero-dynamic laboratory tests, to attain the highest efficiency in both air and water. That is, to skim the surface of the water, to rise and cleave the air with the least resistance and—most important of all—to sustain us on the surface of the water even in a moderately rough sea, should we be obliged to alight for repairs or to overlook the wings or machinery at any time.

"This hull weighs only 550 pounds, though it probably has a carrying capacity more than four times as great as a launch of its weight. Despite its apparent fragility—its cedar shell coated with oiled canvas is only a quarter of an inch thick—it must sustain a load of approximately nine times its own weight. That is, about 4500 pounds of machinery, tanks of gasoline and oil, wings and passengers.

"In the front of the hull, with their legs down in the blunt nose, the operators will sit at the twin controls. These are of the wheel type, common to the Curtiss machines. A pull of the wheel toward the operator elevates the plane; a push in the other direction depresses it. A turn of the wheel to one side or the other operates the rudder for directional control. The lateral control is operated by a foot bar and in this way differs from the standard Curtiss control.

"Curtiss uses a shoulder loke to work the ailerons, of wing tips, which keep the machine on an even keel, the operator maintaining his balance by shifting his weight from side to side. But Mr. Curtiss agreed with me that the yoke system is not best for the large air craft, especially for a flight as long as the one I expect to make. It is wearisome upon the operator, as a great deal of power is required to manipulate large ailerons on a heavy machine. And since one's legs are the strongest part of one's body, it is best to use them for this purpose.

"The foot control is simplicity itself. If the right wing is higher than the left wing and it is therefore necessary to depress it, you push down with the right foot. If the left wing is too high you press down with the left foot.

"Back of our seats, in the hull, will be the sleeping quarters. That may sound odd—sleeping quarters on an aeroplane racing across an ocean, and, for the most of the voyage, perhaps, beyond the ken, let alone the vision, of the rest of the world. But sleeping quarters there will be. Not a beg chamber, but at least a mattress on which a chap may lie at rest for a time in the enclosed cockpit. The mattress will be a life preserver, too.

"Shall I sleep? I have been asked. Who knows? If things are going along as nicely as I hope they will, no doubt I'll be glad to have a little rest while my assistant looks after matters. It's going to be a long ride, you see, and probably tiresome, though I do not anticipate that the strain will be excessive. We shall be entirely enclosed, with sliding windows in front, which we can open for air.

"The tail of the hull narrows down to an extremely fine point at the stern, to which is affixed the rudder and elevating planes. There are four water-tight compartments in the

ZAPATISTAS ATTACK VILLAGES TWELVE MILES FROM CAPITAL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, July 18.—Fugitives who arrived here today from Contreras and Tizapan, villages a few miles from Mexico City, report a serious movement by the forces under Zapata. Contreras was attacked by the Zapatistas early this morning. The garrison, consisting of only seventeen Federals, was driven off and the Zapatistas to the number of several thousand started pillaging and burning the houses. Tizapan* is only about twelve miles from here and connects directly with the capital by an electric railway.

Many of the inhabitants of villages in the Federal District are fleeing to the capital for protection. They fear outrages and an attack by the Zapata adherents on the suburbs.

Federal troops were dispatched tonight from the capital to check the advance of the marauders. It is reported that all the members of the diplomatic corps accredited to the Huerta government are to be recalled on the establishment of the new provisional government. The German and Russian Ministers announced their intention today of asking for leave of absence.

Pascual Orozco and Gen. Francisco Cardenas, with 4000 men, began a new revolutionary movement today. Orozco is operating north of Aguascalientes and Cardenas is preparing to invade the State of Michoacan.

PACIFICATION OF MEXICO MY MOTIVE, SAYS HUERTA.

Retiring President in an Interview Says He Resigned to Give New Government Free Hand and Enable It to Bring About Conciliation Between the Contending Factions of the Republic.

BY GEORGE ADDISON HUGHES.

[BY MEXICAN CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PUERTO MEXICO, July 18.—"I shall ask and answer the questions," said Gen. Huerta today, in granting a request for an interview previous to leaving Mexico.

"First—Why did I resign? I resigned the Presidency of the republic because, after having arranged the international affairs, I believed it my duty to leave the country, giving my last proof of devotion exclusively as a son of my country and in the interest of peace. I carry with me the conviction that my resignation will serve as the means of conciliation between all sons of the republic.

"Second question—Why am I leaving the country when I can still serve it? My departure has no other object than to leave ample field of action to the new government, as my permanence here would give rise to conjecture which would result in prejudicing the progress of pacification in the new government. I declare to the world that the line of conduct which I have followed has no other motive than my heart's desire for the pacification of Mexico."

Huerta first appeared in the shadow of the Pullman car platform. His eyes were scintillating under the brim of his conspicuous democratic black-and-white soft check hat. He wore a $4 white Filipino jacket, with dark trousers and shoes. The general replied to my salute with a boyish wave of the hand, then beckoned the correspondents into the car. He smilingly but forcefully insisted we be seated. Gen. Huerta stood in the aisle, his elbows on the chairs on each side. He kept his check hat still on, although perspiration poured from his bronzed features.

HINDUS ON SHIP FIRE ON BRITISH OFFICERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BELLINGHAM (Wash.) July 19.—When immigration officers of Canada went out to the Komagata Maru at Vancouver, B. C., the ship with 352 Hindus on board, who have been seeking admission into Canada and who have exhausted all legal efforts to obtain it, this morning at 1:30, and ordered the captain to weigh anchor and proceed outside the three mile limit, the Hindus went to the engine room and forcibly removed the stokers.

The immigration officers suddenly made up their minds to act at once instead of waiting till later in the day.

Several white men were seriously injured attempting to board the Maru and two or three Hindus were shot. The white men were roughly handled by the Hindus on gaining the deck.

Armed guards were hurried onto a tug and when they attempted to board the Maru, firing was opened by the Hindus. A stream of hot water was turned on the Hindus from the tug but the armed officers made no further attempt to board the vessel. The tug was standing off from the Hindu boat at 2 o'clock to await reinforcements from shore.

Those injured are: Chief of City Police MacLennan (reported seriously;) Capt. Robertson of the Sea Lion, cut over the eye by flying glass; Inspector Scott, knocked unconscious; Detectives Ricci and Scott; Detective Tisdall, cut on lip; L. H. Taylor and G. L. Minnitt, both injured about the head, Taylor seriously; Detective McLeod, arm hurt; Detective McArthur, injured, fell overboard; Inspector Wisher, hit on head, badly cut.

It probably will be impossible to move the boat as the engines have been damaged by the Hindus.

MAY LINK CONTINENTS IN TRANS-ATLANTIC TRIP.

Airship Engines Must Pound Hardest for Twenty Hours to Win.

Experts Declare Voyage of Lieut. Porte and George Hallett of California Will Make History—Vessel May Be Plaything of Winds and Drown Occupants or Put Them in Niche of Fame With Columbus.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HAMMONDSPORT (N. Y.) July 18.—A week from tomorrow, wind and weather determining the psychological moment, Lieut. John Cyril Porte, a gallant British aviator, accompanied by George E. A. Hallett, a Californian, will start in an American-made hydro-aeroplane on a trip across the Atlantic Ocean. These two intrepid men will either make startling history, or they will be swallowed up by the ocean.

Many years ago a band of hardy Norsemen are said to have crossed the Atlantic in a heavy rowboat.

Some time later Amerigo Vespucci, in a frail cockle-shell of a boat, crossed the ocean, and the country he found, although he was not its first discoverer, still bears his name, despite tremendous efforts to change it to Columbia, in honor of Christopher Columbus, who was the third known explorer to land on these shores.

The hardy Norsemen are but a shadowy memory and very intangible at that. The present generation only hears of Amerigo Vespucci in old geographies and histories. Christopher Columbus died in chains.

Lieut. Porte and George Hallett will start on their perilous journey with the best wishes of all the civilized world, which has been watching with unusual anxiety the preparations for the unprecedented feat.

Both know they are embarking on the most hazardous of voyages. They are starting in the midst of the season of West Indian hurricanes, and cyclonic storms between the Azores and Spain during July are a dreaded risk, even by the stoutest boats. How will it be with a spidery airboat, that would be the merest plaything for the angry winds? Experts in wind and water navigation say the America will not survive ten minutes if it is forced to encounter the mercy of the waves. Once in the rough sea, it would have scant chance of rising again. If it cannot breast the pounding waves, what chance has it in a tropical tempest in the air, with violent currents twisting and tearing it from all angles?

In order to make the trip, the two engines in the America must pound their hardest for twenty consecutive hours, at the least calculation. This will endanger the light framework and eat up at least two-thirds of the fuel. In case an adverse head wind is encountered most of the way, the remaining one-third fuel will be exhausted before the boat could reach the Azores.

READY TO TAKE RISK.

Lieut. Porte and George Hallett have carefully weighed all these perils and possibilities and announce cheerfully that they will take all risks and believe they will succeed. It should be remembered that these are cool-headed men of long experience and unbounded nerve and courage, not untried notoriety seekers. They realize their lives may be snuffed out within thirty minutes after they embark, but they are going at the project with undaunted enthusiasm. Both have faced death in many forms, many times, and do not underrate their mission.

Assuming that the air currents are favorable, that nothing happens to mar the working of the machinery and that the fuel holds out, Porte and Hallett must drive a course as true as a bullet through twelve hundred miles of ocean and air and locate the tiny Azores. They must give unflagging attention to driving and balancing their craft and at the same time find their way over the vast waste with certain death beneath them at all times unless they hit the mark.

It must be borne in mind that the air line to the Azores is uncharted. There are no marks by which to determine whether or not they have been driven off their course. They cannot put in at a friendly port and inquire their way. Mountains, rivers and large cities are of vast assistance to the aviator in determining his whereabouts, but the trackless ocean affords no "land-mark" to steer by. In flights over the land, the aviator sets a mark and flies toward it. There are no such marks in the ocean and Porte and Hallett must drive straight ahead, through all kinds of weather, for if they seek to take advantage of friendly air currents, they run the risk of getting hopelessly off their course.

Pilots who drive the giant Zeppelins have found by experience that an airship must know its exact position every few minutes. Observations are made much more frequently than they are on a steamer, because swift wind drifts renders knowledge of the ship's position absolutely wrong in a few minutes. When shrouded in fog or clouds and the puppet of the capricious wind, an airship speedily drifts far from its course. An aeroplane, being lighter and moving much faster than a Zeppelin, is driven much farther from its course and can lose its bearings utterly in a few minutes.

MAY FIND OCEAN GRAVES.

So Porte and Hallett will start on an uncharted voyage, facing many dangers unknown to the navigator of the steamship. Their flight will sweep in a great curve. If the other end of that curve bisects the Azores they will succeed. If it does not they will find graves in the solitude of the ocean and other men must arise to make the effort.

This is the gloomy side of the picture and Porte and Hallett have studied it assiduously. There is the other side—that of favorable winds, of perfect working machinery, of absence of fogs and hurricanes. An airship traveling only forty miles an hour by its own power could cross the ocean in two days. It has been determined that there are fairly reliable air currents, corresponding to the gulf stream, known as trade winds, which may be used, even during the winter months, as far north as the Azores. When the higher air currents have been tested and charted, the trip across the ocean may be made in an airship in thirty-six hours. These currents have been demonstrated for centuries by birds migrating across the ocean.

Porte and Hallett put their chief trust in starting with a favoring breeze and the swiftness of their flight. Both men believe the craft and its engines will stand the strain. They are willing to take all the risks, modestly accepting the rewards of pioneers if they succeed and passing like men if they fail.

The America is pronounced by all experts a perfect marvel in aero-yacht building. Her hull weighs but 550 pounds and endures most surprisingly the immense pressure of water met while the great 3000-pound machine is flipping through the water at a rate of sixty-two miles an hour. No motor boat has yet been constructed whose bow can withstand such tremendous head-on pressure. The wings of the boat were manufactured at the National Physical Laboratory at Tennington, Eng., and are considered the final word. They will maintain an equilibrium of the twin propellor hydroplane when it is forced to fly with one propellor dead, owing to the disablement of one engine. The America, which has twin engines, has demonstrated its ability to remain in flight with one engine out of commission. The ailerons, or flippers, which are at the extreme ends of the wings, are single-acting. Lieut. Porte manipulates those on his side with his foot, while Hallett operates his with his shoulders. These ailerons have such a large area of surface that they easily keep the lateral balance of a great boat like the America. The America elevator and vertical rudder have been so cunningly constructed that the boat is instantly sensitive to the slightest touch of control.

The pilot-house in which Porte and Hallett will live is so constructed that it affords ample room for all the nautical and aeronautical instruments necessary. The cabin can be completely closed, by means of movable celluloid windows, against storms and adverse weather.

THE ENGINES.

The America's engines are mounted on either side of the hull, midway between the planes. They are the O.X., eight-cylinder, 100-horsepower type and make 1300 revolutions per minute in normal action. This will be sufficient to give the boat a speed of sixty-five miles an hour. The engines can be governed from the cabin.

The fuel supply is carried in a tank in the cockpit, which has a capacity for gasoline enough to last twenty-four hours. Looking the boat and her appointments over, experts say she is as perfect as possible in the present development of hydroplane building. Added to this, is the fact that she is to be handled by men of tried courage, of wide knowledge and who are enthusiastic. This is an asset of quite as much importance as the construction and equipment of the craft they are to fly.

Many aviators who have journeyed to Hammondsport to view the America and discuss her prospects say that if she goes successfully across the Atlantic, much of the credit will be due to George Hallett, the American mechanic. In his line he is incomparable and can make a Curtiss hydroplane run almost without a pilot. The criticism of Porte is that he is too cumbersome in his movements and often loses control of his machine when a quick movement would maintain her equilibrium. Hallett, on the contrary, is endowed with almost supernatural knowledge or instinct which enables him to do the right thing just at the right second. He is a native of Southern California and practically all his life has been spent in navigating the water and air. He knows every type of air machine and is admittedly the finest hydroplane mechanic in the world today. He is remarkably cool in crises. He and Porte are said to differ regarding handling the America, but they have agreed each to attend strictly to his own work.

Critics who are predicting utter failure for the projected trip across the Atlantic and a watery grave for Porte and Hallett might bear in mind the history of Prof. Langley's famous old aeroplane, branded a total failure eleven years ago. Eight years after his death the original machine was brought to Hammondsport and demonstrated that it could do more than even its gifted inventor had hoped or claimed for it. Glenn H. Curtiss made the demonstration in a puffy wind, utterly disconcerting to modern machines. He caused "Langley's Folly" to rise from Lake Keuka under its own power, carrying, in addition to the pilot, 300 pounds of pontoons and attachments in excess of the calculations made by its inventor.

Thus was demonstrated eight years after Prof. Langley had died of a broken heart, the result of failures and newspaper criticism, that he had really designed and produced the first aeroplane capable of flying with a man. In previous trials the Langley machine had been launched from a catapult on top of a houseboat and it was broken at each trial. The hydroplane put to a successful test on Lake Keuka was the original Langley machine, not a duplicate. No changes were made with the exception of replacing the old cloth with new and substituting new ribs in the wings in place of those broken when the machine was thrown into the Potomac River thirteen years ago. Some time after that it was removed to the Smithsonian Institution, where it reposed, classed as an impossible relic, until taken out for the successful trial.

CREDIT TO LANGLEY.

Scientists long ago accorded to Prof. Langley the credit due him. The Wright brothers, who succeeded where Langley seemed to fail, have acknowledged the debt they owe to this unassuming man who drew his inspiration from the clouds and gave to man the eagle's secret. He had worked out for them the problems in aerodynamics, and left for them in algebraic formulae the data upon which all mechanical flight is based. The successful flight in this city of the venerable machine proves all this to the public mind and is in the nature of a rebuke to those who laughed Samuel P. Langley into his grave after he had solved the problem of centuries.

FEAR SEASICKNESS! USE AEROPLANE.

SERVICE BETWEEN SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION AND CORONADO TO BE ESTABLISHED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, July 18.—During the exposition a hydroaeroplane passenger service between the Panama-California Exposition grounds and Coronado will be established. Persons fearing seasickness from a boat trip across the bay may sail over in a big tractor.

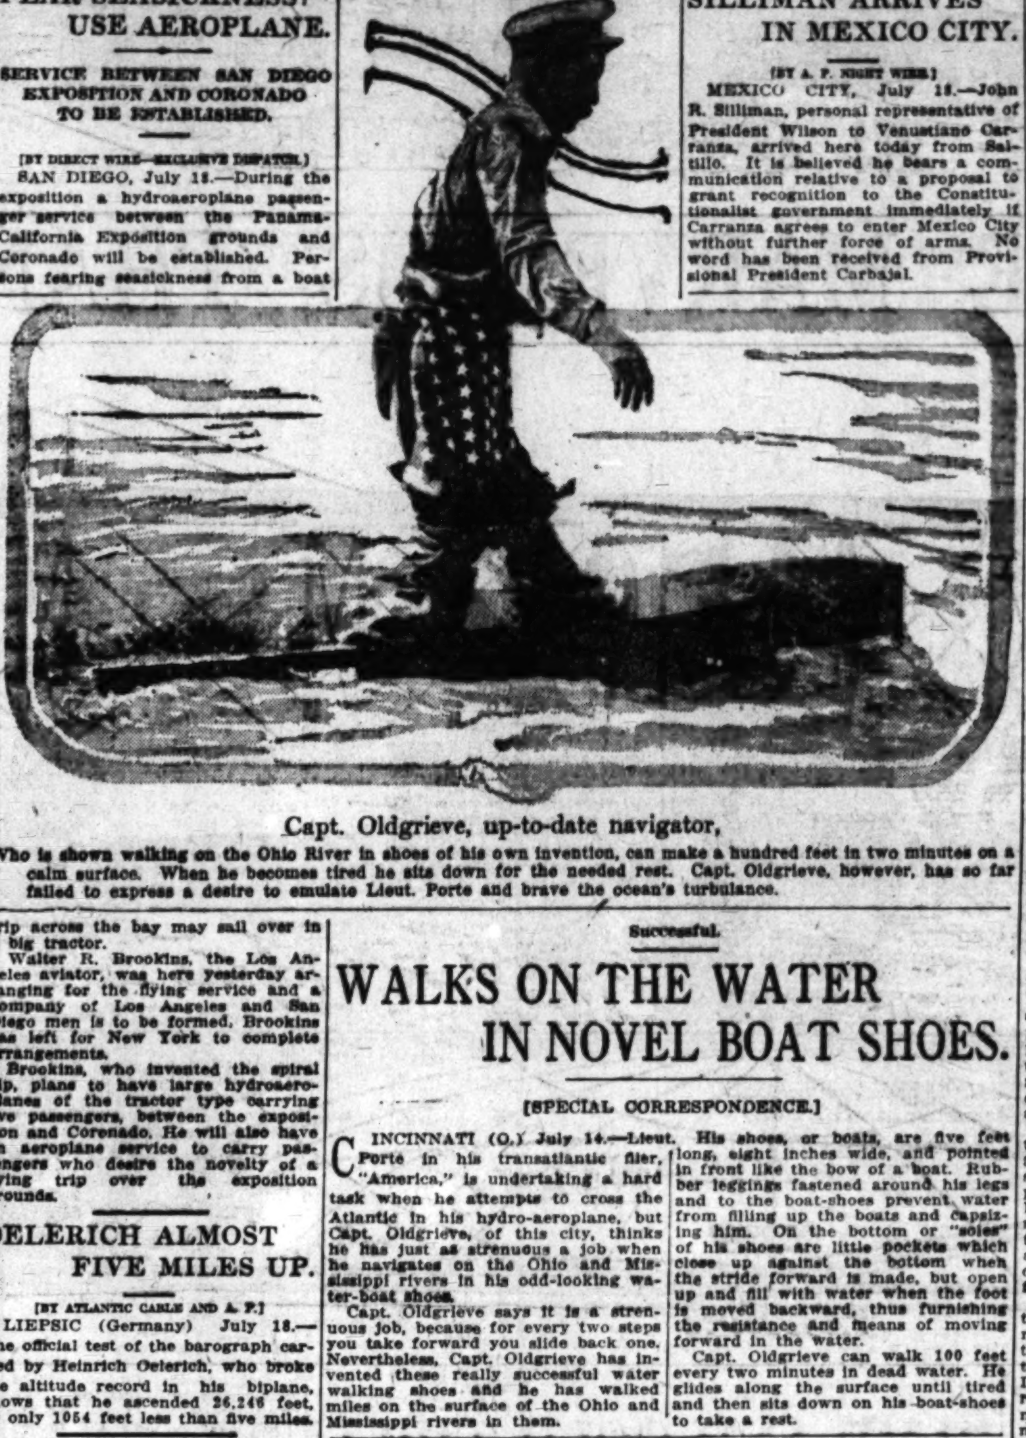
Walter R. Brookins, the Los Angeles aviator, was here yesterday arranging for the flying service and a company of Los Angeles and San Diego men is to be formed. Brookins has left for New York to complete arrangements.

Brookins, who invented the spiral dip, plans to have large hydroaeroplanes of the tractor type carrying five passengers, between the exposition and Coronado. He will also have an aeroplane service to carry passengers who desire the novelty of a flying trip over the exposition grounds.

SILLIMAN ARRIVES IN MEXICO CITY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, July 18.—John R. Silliman, personal representative of President Wilson to Venustiano Carranza, arrived here today from Saltillo. It is believed he bears a communication relative to a proposal to grant recognition to the Constitutionalist government immediately if Carranza agrees to enter Mexico City without further force of arms. No word has been received from Provisional President Carbajal.



Capt. Oldgrieve, up-to-date navigator,

Who is shown walking on the Ohio River in shoes of his own invention, can make a hundred feet in two minutes on a calm surface. When he becomes tired he sits down for the needed rest. Capt. Oldgrieve, however, has so far failed to express a desire to emulate Lieut. Porte and brave the ocean's turbulence.

OELERICH ALMOST FIVE MILES UP.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LIEPSIC (Germany) July 18.—The official test of the barograph carried by Heinrich Oelerich, who broke the altitude record in his biplane, shows that he ascended 26,246 feet, or only 1054 feet less than five miles.

MAN'S BODY WASHED ASHORE.

NO SIGNS OF VIOLENCE, BUT THE POLICE SUSPECT MURDER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—A man's body was washed ashore today at the Pennsylvania ferry slip, Jersey City, bearing numerous marks of identification pointing to Washington, D. C. Though the body bears no signs of violence, a possible murder mystery is suggested by the police authorities. It was found clad only in upper garments, of good texture, marked Washington, D. C., and a shirt, likewise marked. In the clothing were found a visiting card with the name George Van Buskirk, copies of a Washington newspaper of July 17, the address, "Sergeant, 1006 East street, N. W.," and a trolley transfer dated July 17, 8 p.m., on the Greenville and Fairmount line.

The man was almost 6 feet in height and weighed about 225 pounds, the police say. He had dark brown hair, a light gray mustache and false teeth. His general appearance denoted that he had been in prosperous circumstances in life.

THE DILEMMA OF MR. ASQUITH.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 19.—"Premier Asquith's present difficulty is that four members of the Cabinet, two of whom are particularly aggressive, have, at the last moment, funked the situation, and are prepared to go in the teeth of the Nationalists," says Reynolds newspaper, which is usually well-informed on the happenings of the inner ministerialist council.

"Happily," adds the paper, "a majority of the party support Mr. Asquith in his refusal to betray the Nationalist cause, and there is therefore some hope that the ministerial party will not be shattered despite the threatened revolt of a section of the Cabinet. It is possible that the debate Monday will be adjourned after Mr. Asquith's statement."

"UNMUZZLED" TALK ON WATER BONDS.

LIVELY INTEREST ATTRACTED BY MEETING; GLENDALE TO VOTE TUESDAY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

GLENDALE, July 18.—Preliminary to Tuesday's bond election, the Water Ownership League of Glendale met tonight at the Union High School. Known as the "unmuzzled meeting," the session attracted no little interest and produced, at times, both sarcasm and merriment.

Speakers were F. L. Muhleman, Madison B. Jones, W. H. Evans and J. C. Belden. Mr. Jones asserted that members of the Municipal League had circulated a statement that the trustees are trying to influence citizens by the representation that, if the bonds are voted, the cost of water will be reduced from $1.25 to $1 a month, to the average user. He broadly declared assertions used in the fight against the bonds in many instances untrue.

Friends of the bonds declare they will carry by two to one, while the opposition says it will poll as large a majority.

WALKS ON THE WATER IN NOVEL BOAT SHOES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CINCINNATI (O.) July 14.—Lieut. Porte in his transatlantic flier, "America," is undertaking a hard task when he attempts to cross the Atlantic in his hydro-aeroplane, but Capt. Oldgrieve, of this city, thinks he has just as strenuous a job when he navigates on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers in his odd-looking water-boat shoes.

Capt. Oldgrieve says it is a strenuous job, because for every two steps you take forward you slide back one. Nevertheless, Capt. Oldgrieve has invented these really successful water walking shoes and he has walked miles on the surface of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers in them. His shoes, or boats, are five feet long, eight inches wide, and pointed in front like the bow of a boat. Rubber leggings fastened around his legs and to the boat-shoes prevent water from filling up the boats and capsizing him. On the bottom or "soles" of his shoes are little pockets which close up against the bottom when the stride forward is made, but open up and fill with water when the foot is moved backward, thus furnishing the resistance and means of moving forward in the water.

Capt. Oldgrieve can walk 100 feet every two minutes in dead water. He glides along the surface until tired and then sits down on his boat-shoes to take a rest.

BRYAN ASKED TO PREVENT REBELS ENTERING CAPITAL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, July 18.—The Brazilian ministry, according to a report current here tonight, has sent a cablegram to the Brazilian Ambassador at Washington asking him to make representations to Secretary of State Bryan on the grave consequences likely to result from the entry of Constitutionalists or revolutionists into the capital. The minister urges that the United States take prompt steps to prevent this occurrence. Looting is feared should the Zapatistas come into the capital and much alarm has been caused by their active operations in the last twenty-four hours in the Federal district.

Caution.

CARBAJAL WIRES HUERTA NOT TO GO ON WARSHIP.

[BY MEXICAN CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PUERTO MEXICO, July 18.—Carbajal, at midnight, it is said, wired Huerta a request not to take either the German or English ship, explaining it might embarrass the administration by prejudicing the Constitutionalists against the power whose ship carries him away. A force of unnumbered rebels is reported nearing Puerto Mexico preparatory to an attack. The Federals here are 1300 strong.

stern. We shall be equipped with a hand pump for bailing."

THE ORIGINAL MACHINE.

The original machine for the Wanamaker expedition, on which work was started in secret several months ago, was to be driven by one 200-horse-power motor; it was to be launched by special devices and was to have no means of rising either from water or land. Once it alighted on the water, its flight was to be at an end.

The new flyer will be driven by two motors of 100 horse power each, and it will be equipped to raise itself from the water. The change of plan, although not accounted for by Lieut. Porte or any one else connected with the expedition, indicates that the craft may alight in mid-ocean and may possibly renew its supply of fuel from a ship stationed there for that purpose.

Passenger steamers are not permitted to carry gasoline, so once for all may be dismissed the thought that the ocean flyer may "drop down and take on supplies from a passing ship." If the ocean aeronaut counts upon replenishing his gasoline supply he must provide for an oil freighter in midocean as his "coaling station." Lieut. Porte does not disclose his plans in this respect. This and other secrets of his flight he says he purposes guarding from everybody until he has reached his goal. Naturally, he does not wish to have his most secret plans made public lest they benefit his possible competitors for the $50,000 prize of the London Daily Mail for the first crossing of the Atlantic in an aeroplane in seventy-two consecutive hours.

PORTE'S CAREER.

The aeronautical world generally concedes that Lieut. Porte stands a good chance—probably the best chance of any aviator—to succeed in this boldest adventure since the days of Christopher Columbus. Porte is a retired officer of the British navy. He was schooled to deeds of cool-headed courage through six years of service in submarines. At the age of 27 he had risen to the position of chief training officer in that service. His health being broken by under-sea confinement, he took to aeronautics as a business, since a pensioner's life did not meet his ideal of activity. At 30 he ranked the aeronauts of two continents in his reputation for reliability and for that reason—and for his nautical training which fitted him especially for this task—Mr. Wanamaker selected him as the one man most likely to pilot safely to port the first trans-Atlantic flyer on its maiden voyage.

If there had been newspapers in Columbus's day how much richer would be our history had the pilot of that trans-Atlantic expedition kept a diary and log for the Spanish journal enterprising enough to have secured Columbus for its correspondent.

The $50,000 prize of Lord Northcliffe's London Daily Mail was not the consideration which led Rodman Wanamaker to outfit this expedition. The prize goes to the aviators—to Lieut. Porte and the assistant pilot, whose identity has not yet been disclosed. But Lieut. Porte will be the captain and master of the expedition, and only through him will the details of the aerial voyage be made known. While Mr. Wanamaker is not interested in the $50,000 prize, he is determined to win the honor of sending the first expedition across the ocean, and the plans of Lieut. Porte will be kept within the limitation for the Daily Mail's prize.

UNION PICKETS IN STOCKTON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

STOCKTON, July 18.—For the first time since Judge Norton recently handed down an order restraining local unions from placing pickets in front of two restaurants, union pickets appeared on the streets here this afternoon in front of a large mercantile establishment and shoe store. The store is owned by a man who was recently acquitted by a jury of the charge of assaulting a union picket.

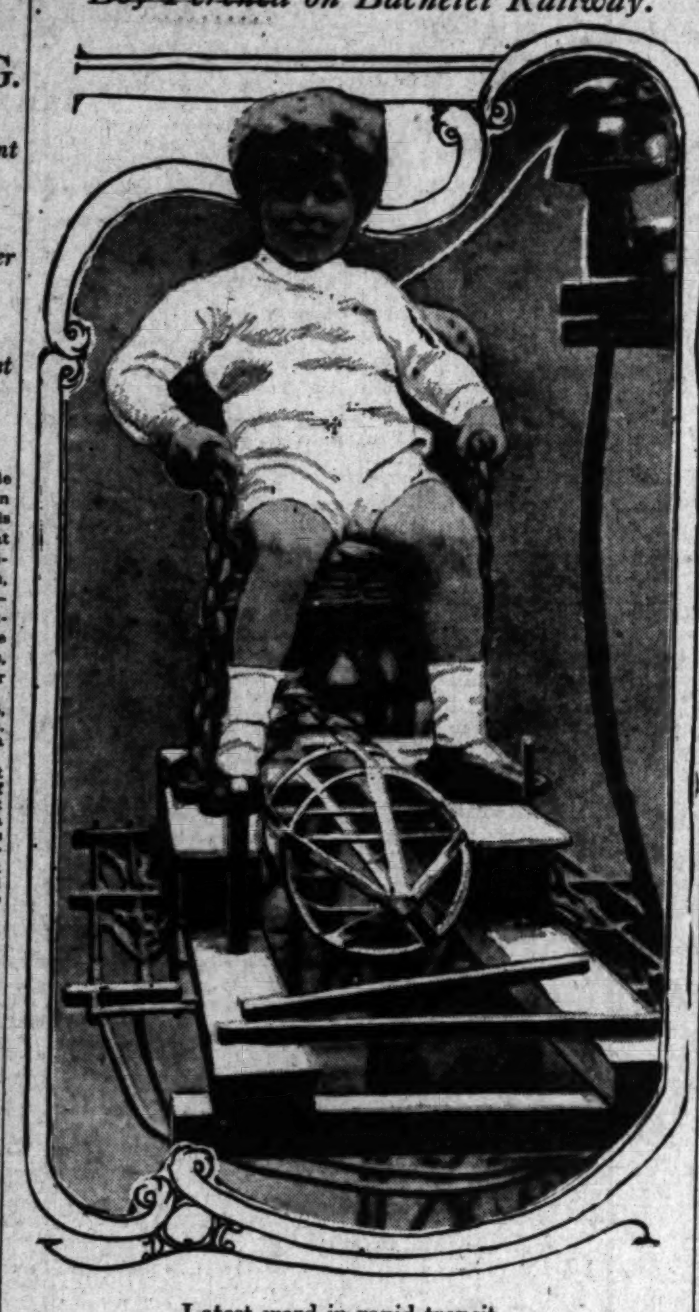
IN THE AIR FOR A DAY; BOEHM BREAKS REC

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, July 18.—The record made Saturday last by Reinhold Boehm at Johannisthal, when he remained in the air twenty-four hours and twelve minutes and flew 1350 miles, has caused members of the aero club to feel more confident that Lieut. Porte will accomplish his proposed trans-Atlantic flight in the air boat America.

Boy Perched on Bachelet Railway.



Latest word in rapid transit.

Invention of Frenchman now being exhibited in London, it is declared, will annihilate space, being capable of running at the rate of 300 miles an hour without friction, wheels or rails, the motive power being electric repulsion instead of propulsion.

Revolution.

FIVE MILES A MINUTE BY MIDAIR SYSTEM.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 5.—The demonstration of the Bachelet Levitated Railway, which has just been witnessed here, conducted by the inventor himself, has attracted a large amount of attention. The inventor, Emile Bachelet, is a Frenchman, but has lived a good many years in America, where he was employed twenty-two years ago in some big government works.

It has taken him exactly twenty-two years to overcome the disappointments and struggles he has been through to solve the problem of overcoming gravity, as he believes by suspension in midair without any visible means of support. The essence of the invention is the reverse of magnetic attraction, that is, magnetic repulsion. The discovery of this power, however, is not Bachelet's.

The car which Bachelet eventually hopes to see in universal use is suspended in the air during its entire transit. It is operated without engines, wheels, gearings or friction. On a track laid end to end with magnetic repulsion coils the car is at rest. Then the current is switched on and the car is lifted (or repulsed) from the coils a short distance in the air, and held there, resting on an invisible support of electric current. Placed along the track at intervals are solenoids, or pulling magnets, through which the car passes. Each magnet is energized at the critical moment and the car drawn forward. The speed is only limited by the air resistance, there being, of course, no weight to the car, no road resistance, no wheel friction.

The speed of the contrivance is estimated by the inventor at 300 miles an hour. It is his plan in the first instance to utilize the invention for the dispatch of mails and goods. For passengers he proposes the use of another system. In this method a double track of repulsing coils is used, but the solenoids are replaced by motors and aerial propellors.

MORE RECORDS BY TETZLAFF.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, July 18.—Teddy Tetzlaff broke two State records at the Potlatch automobile races at the Meadows today when he set a mark of 54 1-5s. for one mile and 1:49 3-5 for two miles on a one-mile dirt circuit. The races today were three and five-mile events, Arthur Klein winning the five-mile race for cars of 450 inches and under, in 4:15. Earl Cooper won the three-mile free-for-all and the five-mile free-for-all, his time in the latter race being 5:33 2-5.

RAID ON A FLAT.

Charged with violating the rooming-house ordinance, three men and three women were arrested in a raid by Patrolmen Trabilock and Condaffer on a flat at No. 106 West Tenth street early yesterday morning. The accused gave their names as Miss Virgie Thompson, Mrs. Helen Johns, Mrs. Alice Miller, George Morgan, E. H. Johnson and A. E. Gregory.

Experimentation.

CHANGE FOR THE WORSE IN THE PORTE AIRSHIP.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HAMMONDSPORT (N. Y.) July 18.—The trials today of the Rodman Wanamaker flying boat America were disappointing to Glenn H. Curtiss and Lieut. Porte. The tests of three days ago showed such an improvement and the boat was so near to expectations that it was thought one more slight change would result in complete success.

Unfortunately, the change made was not the right one, for today the America could not be coaxed to plane along the surface of the water. All that had been gained by fitting the so-called sea sled bottom was lost when six inches of it were trimmed away in order to correct a tendency to porpoise. A few minutes this afternoon proved that the change had been fatal and the planing surface must be restored before the trials are concluded.

Increased power will be given the America by installing a third motor located between the present lower planes and driving a tractor screw that will not interfere with the present propellers.

Complication.

FOREIGN WARSHIPS REFUSE TO TAKE HUERTA RETINUE.

BY GEORGE ADDISON HUGHES.

[BY MEXICAN CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PUERTO MEXICO, July 18.—The refusal of the German battleship Dresden and the English cruiser Bristol to carry the big Huerta party caused an embarrassing situation, prevented the ex-dictator's sailing today, and may maroon him here some time. There are a hundred persons in his retinue. No commercial ship depending on Mexican business is anxious to take any part of the party. The City of Mexico refused today and put to sea to avoid complications. The wireless is searching the gulf tonight in an effort to procure a relief craft. This will cost $100,000 under charter for a voyage to Jamaica. Attempts are being made to recall the City of Mexico, and English and German ships.

The invitations of the warships included only Huerta and immediate relatives. Carbajal was appealed to and offered the Zaragoza and Bravo, but the quest for another ship goes on.

Railroad Record.

ANOTHER CHANCE FOR NEW HAVEN.

McReynolds and Directors to Hold Conference.

Sale of Boston and Maine Stock the Issue.

Massachusetts to Intervene in Government Suit.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The New Haven Railroad is to have one more chance to avoid an anti-trust suit. Atty.-Gen. McReynolds agreed today to a conference Monday with a committee of the road's directors.

President Hustis of the New Haven made the appointment, but his telegram did not give the names of his committee nor explain what new plan might be offered.

The only point in controversy between the department and the railroad is how its Boston and Maine stock shall be sold. The Massachusetts Legislature put a condition on the sale of the stock. The New Haven directors have agreed not to accept that condition and Mr. McReynolds is insisting that the condition be accepted. How the committee expects to compose the difficulty no official here today would predict. It was certain, however, the department would not agree to any solution not providing that the Boston and Maine be sold.

Both the Attorney-General and President Wilson have taken the position that the Massachusetts condition is not unfair and does not violate the dissolution agreement between the department and the railroad.

INTERVENTION THREATENED.

The New Haven case assumed a new aspect today, when it became known here that the State of Massachusetts may seek to intervene after the government's Sherman law suit to dissolve the system is brought, and ask the courts to force the New Haven to make a conditional sale of its Boston and Maine stock. Massachusetts now has the right to buy the stock at any time. In recent legislation it preserved that right and gave permission to the New Haven to sell.

It is feared that if the government wins its case, the court might merely order the sale of the New Haven's Boston and Maine stock without restructions. If Massachusetts intervened it would be merely for the purpose of preserving its right of purchase. Atty.-Gen. McReynolds, it was believed, will not object.

MONROVIA ADDS UP ITS INCOME.

WANTS TO KNOW WHAT IT MAY SPEND FOR OPERATION THIS YEAR.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, July 18.—According to the annual budget submitted to the city today by the Budget Committee of the City Council, Monrovia will need $75,926.48 to run the municipal business during the ensuing twelve months. Of this amount it is estimated that the water department, municipally owned, will pay $26,221; business licenses, taxes on dogs, etc., $3400; public utility franchises, $2070; refund from bond account borrowed from general fund, $5694.99, and building inspections, $1200, making a total income for the year of $38,585.99.

With these figures there will be required by a tax levy $37,340.49 to bring the total to the amount figured in the budget, which will be an assessment of about $1 per hundred dollars valuation.

In its report the Budget Committee has slashed estimated running expenses ruthlessly, cutting down the various amounts requested from a third to a half. The sum presented by it will take care of the bare necessities of municipal expenditures only, and allows no money for street or other improvement.

The budget will be presented to the committee of twenty business men next Monday night, at which time provision is expected to be made for street and other civic improvements.

TRAVELERS RETURN.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Dorland are expected to arrive in Monrovia tomorrow morning from several months' trip to Egypt, the Holy Land, Europe and England. Dorland, who was former of Monrovia, is an enthusiastic antiquarian, and made careful studies of the Egyptian archeological treasures, as well as of the points of interest in the Holy Land and in Greece and Italy.

DEATH OF MISS STONE.

Miss Georgia Stone died at her home, at No. 225 East Avenue, last night, after an extended illness. The funeral services will be held next Monday morning at the crematory of Mountain View Cemetery, Pasadena. Miss Stone leaves a mother, Mrs. M. L. Stone, and sister, Miss Dorothy Stone, queen of this year's birthday celebration in Monrovia.

GLENDORA WATER WELL A GUSHER.

PLENTY OF WETNESS DEVEDOPED FOR USE OF CITY IN FOOTHILLS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLENDORA, July 18.—The Board of Trustees at a special meeting held Thursday, voted to accept the well in course of construction for the city at the present depth of 512 feet. The contract depth was 600 feet, it being the purpose of the Board of Trustees to have the well sunk to that depth should it be found necessary to obtain a good supply of water. The casing will be perforated and the well will be gotten ready for a pumping plant as expeditiously as possible.

The board has advertised for bids for a pumping plant and it is expected that a plant will be purchased and installed before the close of the month. Experts pronounce the well the best in the valley and are predicting a flow of 75-80 miners' inches.

With the completion of this well for the city and the installation of a pumping plant, Glendora will have completed the first unit in its municipal water system for which bonds were voted the first of the year. The next move on the part of the Board of Trustees will be the acquisition of the present distributing system owned by the Glendora Water Company.

Pacification of Mexico.

ficers stood behind him as familiar as youngsters in a game. Huerta looked at each of us, then smiled. From that moment through the half-hour with the correspondents the smile never left his eyes and several times he laughed. The general apparently enjoyed the situation. His magnetism was overpowering. He talked with us as one friend to another, but piloted the interview, diplomatically evading interrogations, speaking only of what he wished and saying as much as he cared to say each time. I raised my eyes from the note-book and found myself in an optical duel with him and with a daring search I tried futilly to find something of cruelty in his gaze. It is not there; of command there is a world and also of determination. His eyes were cheerful as those of a child.

Huerta seems absolutely content. If he has been shouldering a burden it has left no scars. If he is abdicating the dictatorship reluctantly he is a Mansfield. If he regrets parting from the Mexico he has ruled so long in the face of a mandate of the powers he expresses it neither in word nor action. His attitude is that of a plain business man on an ordinary journey. Huerta began the interview leisurely and jestingly.

"I will do the interviewing," he smiled. "I shall ask the questions and I shall answer. Get out your paper and pencils and take it all down." Then slowly studying each word and pausing long on each sentence, accentuating his paragraphs with pointed finger, he began. Huerta was patient, but obviously his words had been rehearsed as though at least he knew just how much he intended to say, and would permit no extensions. As I turned to leave the car for my own he halted me.

Huerta is quoted as having made the statement on his way from the capital that "the people of the United States are all right and I like them, but Wilson is not."

AUTO HITS CUR; DOES SOMERSAULT.

CAR RIGHTS ITSELF BUT TWO OCCUPANTS ARE SENT TO HOSPITAL.

Upset by a yellow dog, an automobile on "death curve" in Venice late last night turned turtle, threw out and seriously injured two youths, then righted itself, almost undamaged.

Virgil Cowland, No. 215 Rutland street, this city, is in the St. Catherine Hospital, Santa Monica, with a broken collar-bone, dislocated shoulder and other injuries.

Dan Cunningham of Ocean Park was treated at the Emergency Hospital, Venice, for severe bruises.

The direct cause of the mishap is dead. He was a very ordinary mangy cur, that essayed to cross the way in front of the automobile the two young men were driving. The machine struck the canine, swerved into a telephone pole and turned turtle. Both the occupants were thrown violently to the ground. Continuing its somersault, the car righted itself.

CRAPS FOR JUST ONCE.

Officers Stalk a Negro in Upstairs Room and Find Him Gambling With Himself.

"Come on, you little Phoebe."

"Be good to me, honey."

"Come on, Joe, you little Joe!"

These supplications, spoken with all Ethiopic fervency, floated from a room in a lodging-house near Third street and Towne avenue, yesterday. Two of Sergt. Hackett's "purity squad" stood stark still.

"Aha," says one. "Aha, this is where we get 'em."

They listened a few moments more. The bets grew. One man bet a dollar and the other in his turn went higher. Then they quarreled.

"Looka here, Mr. Man, I shore made mah point, yes sah, I did."

The other held he had not. The officers thought it about time to get busy. Softly they stole up the stairs. Outside the door from which the sounds came they stopped. The men were playing still. Then cautiously the officers got out onto the fire escape and one peeked into the window. He dropped his serious mien and the quiet was punctured by raucous laughter. The other man looked in. A lone negro sat shaking the "bones," competing with himself. The exciting game may still be going for all the officers know.

SUIT IN EQUITY IN NEW YORK.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—Suit in equity was instituted here today in behalf of certain minority stockholders of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, against directors of the road and the corporation, to compel them to answer charges of maladministration and misuse of funds.

The suit, which is brought by the law firm of Robinson & Lauber of this city, is somewhat similar to the action in Boston, which demanded restitution of $306,000,000 of which more than $100,100,000 was alleged to have been misused.

One of the two claims made asks that the individual defendants be compelled to account for all sums of money and shares of stock misapplied and misappropriated and all profits which they received by reason of unlawful acts.

The second claim asked that the defendants be enjoined from further management of the system.

Wife of Long Beach Citizen Files Suit in Dedham, Mass., Charging Desertion.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BOSTON (Mass.) July 18.—Five years after a romantic marriage, Thomas C. Holyoke, Long Beach, Cal., is defendant in a divorce suit. Mrs. Edna B. Holyoke, nee Bird, has asked her freedom in the Superior Court, Dedham, Mass. Holyoke, while a resident of Brookline, Mass., met Miss Bird at Houghs Neck, a summer resort, in 1908. The following year the pair slipped to Providence, R. I., in an automobile and were married. The marriage was kept secret several days. In her libel Mrs. Holyoke charges desertion. She is living with relatives in Quincy, Mass.

Holyoke, while a resident of Brookline, was well-known in Boston club circles and has many friends here.

It is believed he will not contest the suit.

Dairy Measures from a Pint to One Quart Short.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 18.—In his first annual statement filed today with Mayor James Rolph, Larry J. Dolan, sealer of weights and measures, said his bureau had rectified "a multitude of inequitable practices."

"Trade customs," he said, "were being used as a cloak to cover up these practices."

Among the abuses which Dolan says have been corrected to a very great degree are: The practice of selling butter by the roll in large or small sizes, which by tests showed shortages of from one to four ounces; sale of eight-ounce loaves at the same cost of 5 cents as fourteen-ounce loaves; general use among dairies of three-gallon measures from one pint to a quart short; use of scales fixed to weigh short, or which had become so from use.

Members of the Order of Shriners and Elks Are Asked to Join in a Quest for M. B. Hare.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SPOKANE, July 18.—Members of the Shriners and Elks lodges were appointed today to aid in finding a brother member, M. B. Hare, a mining man of Spokane, who has been missing since June 22. Two days before he disappeared Hare took his family to their summer home in Idaho, then he returned here and since has not been seen.

When his desk was opened a power of attorney in favor of his brother was found and a railroad time table with certain California cities checked. A brother, Paul Hare, telegraphed from San Francisco today that search in the towns marked on the time table had been unavailing.

WOOD LEG AS A BOND.

In Lieu of Room Rent the Proprietress of an Apartment-House Seizes Something Lodger Needs.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 18.—In lieu of room rent, the proprietress of an apartment-house seized the wooden leg of John Canfield of Talmage, Mendocino county, when he was in San Francisco. Canfield unpacked his old crutch and left the city grieving.

Today Chief White of the police force received a letter from Canfield asking the police to recover him his wooden leg with the plea that the loss is keeping him from making a living.

"I do not think that the law permits anyone to hold a fellow's leg," reads Canfield's letter, "for it is keeping me from earning a living and also from paying the bill, which I intend to pay as soon as possible.'

Member of St. Louis Merchants' Organization Demands That the Attorney-General File a Suit Forthwith.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

ST. LOUIS, July 18.—Demand that he institute suit against the Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis on a charge of violating the anti-trust law was made on Atty.-Gen. Barker of Missouri today by Edward M. Flesh, member of a commission firm that holds a membership in the exchange.

Complaint was made that a rule of the exchange adopted July 2 gave the "to arrive committee" absolute control over the prices of grain and shut out all competition. It was stated that no member of the exchange is permitted to pay for grain any price other than that fixed by the committee.

Marshall Hall, president of the Merchants' Exchange, denied tonight that the "to arrive committee" was violating the anti-trust law.

"The rule that is attacked," he said, "does not lend to restrain trade, but aims to give publicity to the prices paid in the country. It produces an open market, instead of a closed, secret market."

Mr. Hall said the rule restricted neither purchase nor sale.

RICHMOND CITY OF REFUGE.

Ancient Institution Established by the Mayor of the Virginia Metropolis for Deserters from the Navy.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

RICHMOND (Va.) July 18.—Richmond today became a city of refuge for deserters from the navy by order of Mayor Ainslie, who told Lieut. S. E. Parsons, U.S.N., in Justice Crutchfield's court, that the Richmond police would never arrest another deserter until the lieutenant's charge to Gov. Stuart that sailors on leave here were "hounded" was withdrawn and apologized for.

Justice Crutchfield ordered three alleged deserters released.

TWO BILLION NATIVE BIRDS.

ROBIN MOST NUMEROUS NEXT TO THE SPARROW.

First Census Taken in the Eastern States by Volunteer Observers Shows an Average of Fifty Pairs of Redbreasts to the Square Mile in Nesting Season.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Approximately 2,026,000,000 native field birds, exclusive of sparrows, inhabit the United States, east of the great plains States, according to partial returns announced today of the first bird census in the history of the government now being made by the Department of Agriculture. Apparently the most numerous of these birds is the robin, of which, it is estimated, there are 100,000,000 east of the Mississippi River. They average fifty pairs to the square mile, while all field birds average 1000 pairs to the square mile after omitting land planted in crops where there are small chances for birds to nest in timber land.

The census is being taken by volunteer observers.

The most extensive census of birds in forest land, which supports a much small population than an equal area of farm land, comes from Montana, where careful counting on nearly a thousand acres showed an average of one pair to each three acres. The arid lands of the Southwest show the smallest bird population. Land stretches in Arizona and New Mexico do not contain more than one pair to several acres.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SANTA CRUZ, July 18.—Delegates to the Christian Church convention of Northern California stood bareheaded today on Endeavorer Rock while the ashes of the Rev. W. H. Martin of Fresno, in compliance with his last wishes, were cast on the waters of the Pacific Ocean by the Rev. R. L. McHatton of Oakland.

A wreath contributed by the convention and blossoms sent by friends also were scattered on the waves, the wreath by Mrs. Mary Westover of Fresno, and the other floral tribute by Miss Hodgen of Woodland and Alonso Chance of Los Angeles. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Peter Colvin and the Rev. D. A. Russell.

The Rev. Mr. Martin served thirty-five years in California, holding pastorates at Woodland, Willows, Santa Rosa, Santa Barbara, Fresno and Whittier.

ENCOURAGING FEATUR OF THE STEEL T

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—An encouraging feature of the steel trade is the large volume of business that could be transacted if the mills would accept current prices for deliveries extending beyond the third quarter of the year, but as yet few consumers find incentive to anticipate future requirements. The American Steel and Wire Company has taken the initiative toward a better feeling by advancing wire products $1 per ton, effective today. The prospecting advance was preceded by some increase in specifications and contracts for both wire and nails. In the railroad field the principal point of interest this week was an in-

PEACE REIGN IN MEXICO PRACTICALLY IN EF

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18. — Although there has been no formal agreement as yet between the opposing factions in Mexico, an armistice is practically in effect throughout the republic.

Francisco Carbajal, Huerta's successor as provisional President, has decided to have Federal troops evacuate all points where revolutionists forces are concentrated and avoid further fighting. Gen. Carranza's forces are moving southward merely to be in position to maintain order in the territory immediately surrounding the Federal capital.

This information reached officials here today from various points in Mexico.

Senor Jose Castellot of Mexico, personal representative of Carbajal, spoke today of the evacuation of San Luis Potosi by Federal forces as a manifestation of the good faith of the Carbajal government toward the Constitutionalists and its desire to bring about peace without further bloodshed.

Until the commission appointed by Mr. Carbajal reaches Gen. Carranza, which is expected to be Monday or Tuesday, no definite developments relative to a further change of government at Mexico City are looked for.

The American government is bending every effort to bring about a peaceful agreement between the Carbajal government and the Constitu-

JUDGE KNITS ON THE BENCH.

For Why the Colorado People Want to Have Her Recalled.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER, July 18.—Recall petitions against the Mayor and virtually every other official in Colorado City were started today. Included in the list is Mrs. Mary Ammerman, City Clerk, and ex-officio police judge. The most serious charge against Mrs. Ammerman is that she persists in knitting and doing fancy work while sitting on the bench and that "such conduct is wholly inconsistent with the duties of a police magistrate." Additional charges against the woman judge are that she is a clerk for a fraternal order and does its correspondence on city time.

GRANTS RELIEF TO OIL MEN.

BILL IN OPERATORS' INTEREST TO BE CONSIDERED IN THE HOUSE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 18.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels and assistant to the Attorney-General Justice were before the House Committee on Public Lands this morning and gave their assent to the bill granting temporary relief to operators on oil lands to which the United States claims title.

Chairman Scott Ferris said the committee saw a chance to get the bill through the House on Monday and he urged that it be given fair play and that questions relating to the administration and regulation of industry could be threshed out thoroughly when the bill for permanent relief was considered before the committee.

Secretary Daniels was disposed to object to the bill granting temporary relief at first, thinking that the interest of the department in the navy oil reserves had not been sufficiently safeguarded, but, after consultation with some of his advisers, he withdrew his objections on the promise of the chair that he would see the Secretary of the Interior and prepare a navy amendment to present Monday before the bill goes to the House.

GRAIN CROP ESTIMATES.

It Looks As If We Shall Have Plenty to Eat Next Year Though All the Beeves and Cattle Die Off.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Estimates of grain crops of European countries, cabled today by the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy, to the Department of Agriculture, show:

England, including Wales—Wheat, 56,448,000 bushels, or 6.2 per cent. more than last year; barley, 51,092 bushels, or 3 per cent. less; oats, 89,827,000 bushels, or 1.8 per cent. less.

Italy—172,697,000 bushels, or 19.5 per cent. less.

Hungary, excluding Croatia and Slavonia—Barley, 69,559,000 bushels, or 12.9 per cent. less; oats, 89,544,000 bushels, or 10.3 per cent. less.

Prussia—Rye, 361,672,000 bushels, or 9 per cent. less.

New Income Tax Ruling.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Internal revenue collectors were notified today that, under the income tax law, "foreign corporations" include municipal and private corporations holding charters under laws of foreign countries. Fiscal agents of foreign governments charged with interest payment on that country's obligations will be held responsible for the withholding and payment of the income tax on such interest payments.

GROWING BOLDER EVERY MINUTE.

DEMOCRATS SEEM BENT ON IMPEACHING WILSON FOR NOMINATING MR. JONES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—With President Wilson still standing solidly behind his candidates, suggestions by several Democratic Senate leaders today for a party conference on the nomination of Thomas D. Jones of Chicago to the Federal Reserve Board met with such vigorous opposition that the idea virtually was abandoned. Some of the stanchest administration supporters discouraged the plan.

Reports that the fight might be ended by withdrawal at the request of Mr. Jones were persistent, but administration Senators denied any knowledge of their origin. The White House has disclaimed any such intention.

Democrats of the Banking Committee who voted for confirmation plan to file their report early next week, and expect a supplemental statement from Mr. Jones in answer to the majority report, which urged his rejection because of his connection with the International Harvester Company. No vote in the Senate is expected until late next week.

Announcement today by Secretary McAdoo that the three board members already confirmed would not be sworn in Monday as planned was taken to indicate that the administration hoped for confirmation of Jones and Warburg in time to organize the board at one time.

United States Treasury Condition.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The condition of the United States treasury at the beginning of business today was: Net balance in general fund, $148,894,564; total receipts yesterday, $2,620,879; total payments yesterday, $6,000,396. The surplus of this fiscal year is $6,291,051, against a deficit of $18,621,113 last year, exclusive of Panama Canal and public debt transactions.

Foreign Commerce During Fiscal Year but Slight Amount Less Than During the Previous Twelve Months—Amount of Gold Sent Out Exceeds that Coming In.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Foreign commerce of the United States during the fiscal year which ended June 30 aggregated $4,258,795,735, being $20,096,648, or less than one-half of one per cent. below the high record of 1913, and $401,208,392 above the highest record in any earlier year. Imports, according to preliminary figures by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, aggregated $1,894,169,180, an increase of $81,160,946, or 4.47 per cent. over last year; and domestic exports aggregated $2,329,731,886, a decrease of $98,774,472, or 4.07 per cent. Foreign goods re-exported were valued at $34,894,465, or $2,482,122 less than those of 1913.

Details of exports and imports are not now available, but for the eleven months ending May 31 there was a decrease in total exports of foodstuffs in excess of $70,000,000 and an increase in total imports of foodstuffs of over $52,000,000.

About 59½ per cent. of the imports entered free of duty, against 54½ per cent. in the year previous.

The excess of exports over imports for the year ending June 30 was $470,457,375 against an excess of $652,875,915 last year; $551,057,475 in the year ending June 30, 1912; $522,094,394 in the year ending June 30, 1911; $188,037,290 in the year ending June 30, 1910, and $351,090,880 in the year ending June 30, 1909.

Gold imports aggregated $66,538,659 and gold exports, $112,038,529; while silver imports aggregated $30,326,604 and silver exports $54,965,023 during the year.

June imports aggregated $157,772,972, a decrease of $6,436,542 under May; exports aggregated $157,119,451, a decrease of $4,613,168 under May.

GATUN LAKE'S RESOURCES.

The Panama Canal Will Never Go Dry So Long As the Great Artificial Reservoir Is Maintained.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Resources of Gatun Lake, the wonderful artificial reservoir which is the main dependence of the Panama Canal for its water supply, have proved ample to meet all possible demands after the most severe practical tests. Although the amount of water which ran into the lake during the last dry season, January to April, inclusive, was less than in any similar period for the last twenty-two years, being only 61 per cent. of the normal collection, the lake was maintained at its proper elevation throughout that period.

The dry season afforded the first opportunities engineers have had to determine the amount of evaporation from the surface of the lake at its full depth. The figures showed there was still sufficient water at the end of the dry season to have kept the lake level at seventy-nine feet above sea level, which would have given thirty-nine feet of water in Culebra Cut or about ten feet more than the draft of the biggest battleship.

At the end of the present rainy season Gatun Lake will be eighty-seven feet above sea level, and allowing for the known evaporation, leakage and seepage this would be ample for forty-one passages daily through the locks, using them at full length, or fifty-eight lockages a day when partial length is used, as would generally be the case. This is a larger number of lockages than would be possible in a singe day. Even in the great Sault Ste. Marie Canal the lockages last year averaged 41.7, while the Suez Canal reported only twelve per day.

This assurance of an ample water supply to meet all possible contingencies including the heavy drafts for power purposes, affords great satisfaction to Panama Canal engineers, especially in view of doubts expressed in foreign countries as to the successful operation of the canal in the dry season.

THE CANAL READY BEFORE AUGUST.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—According to Frederick Alcock, general manager of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, the Panama Canal will be ready for commercial traffic on or before July 31. Mr. Alcock, who returned yesterday from Colon, said that Gov. Goethals would most likely inform Washington of this possibility within a few days.

HAWAII'S HARBOR BONDS.

Treasurer Discusses With Lane Disposal of Securities to Raise Money for Improvements.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—D. L. Conklin, Treasurer of Hawaii, discussed with Secretary Lane the issue of $1,500,000 4 per cent. bonds recently authorized by the Hawaiian Legislature, which must be approved by Secretary Lane and President Wilson. The money is wanted primarily for harbor improvements, the need of which, it was stated, would be great as soon as the Panama Canal opens. It is planned to sell $750,000 of the bonds.

The object is to assist banks all over the country in taking care of employees who may need medical attention.

A GREAT DAY IN KANSAS.

Well, Ed. Howe Lives There, and Then, too, Bailey P. Waggener Is Celebrating His Birthday.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

ATCHISON (Kan.) July 18.—Bailey P. Waggener, a railroad attorney, is 67 years old today, and there are few children in Northwestern Kansas who do not know it, despite the fact that he is ill and confined to his bed.

Although Mr. Waggener had received strict orders from his physicians to forego his annual birthday jubilee this year, he leased every motion picture theater in this city and all the children—thousands of them—were admitted free. Many other amusements were provided. That Mr. Waggener might realize the appreciation of the children ,hundreds of the youngsters mailed him birthday cards.

The first Waggener jubilee was given fifteen years ago for Mr. Waggener's granddaughter. It was such a success that it became an annual event.

TO CURTAIL DIAMOND OUTPUT.

New York Dealers Agree to Do Something to Make the Gems More Costly to You, Sir, and to Me.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—Notices of the signing of an agreement between three of the largest diamond producing companies, controlling about 98 per cent. of the world's supply, to curtail their yearly output, have been received by diamond brokers here. The effect of the agreement, one broker said today, would be to put an end to competition between the three companies, with the result that prices would be materially increased.

PLAGUE IN NEW ORLEANS.

Sixth Case of the Malady is Developed in the Crescent City, and the Victim Is a Little Girl.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW ORLEANS, July 18.—The sixth case of bubonic plague was found here today when the illness of Helen Soell, aged 10, was diagnosed as plague. Her condition was serious.

Worth While Seeing

A genuine Knabe piano in genuine mahoagny case even though five years old is worth $465. An Angelus "pneumatic player action" is said by many piano merchants to be the finest in the world. Surely the combination, Knabe piano with Angelus, not yet two years old, playing 88-note music rolls is worth $485.

We have three such, and are giving an armful of music with each instrument, but these should be sold Monday surely. Will take easy payments, say $15 a month.

See this and ever so many other genuine sacrifice offers at the Closing Out Sale of Eilers Music House, 344 South Broadway; also see announcement, "More than fifty pianos from our High Schools, etc.," on Page 6, Part I, this issue.

New Kind of War

Perhaps the first strife was between billions of microscopic organisms or germs that still goes on. One army of these small soldiers used the soldiers on the opposite side for food, and soldiers, like missionaries, do not like to be served a la carte.

Quite natural a human body composed of warring germs should be warlike. The Plebeians of Rome began to fight the Patricians and their followers, the excuse being a desire to share in the government. Voltaire says: "In England thousands were slain to decide whether church dignitaries should wear the shirt outside or inside their robes."

Roman wars brought slavery.

English wars brought freedom.

Prophylaxis is the aim of a new kind of warfare, engaged in by a vast army.

In this we are imitating the Chinese by keeping well instead of getting well.

Keeping the teeth is of more importance than ever, since it has been discovered that fills and crowns are not so necessary as keeping the gums healthy and the surfaces of the teeth polished in such a manner that decay cannot start.

Watch for bleeding or receding gums, teeth slightly sore or loose and a bad breath—these are indications of Pyorrhea, "the disease that robs most people of their teeth." Dr. Homer makes claims for modern dentistry which ought to be glad tidings to many, viz.: That extracting, filling, crowning or removal of nerves can be accomplished painlessly by his analgesic method.

The Dr. has formed a dental association for the treatment of Pyorrhea, making full sets of solid teeth where formerly people have been wearing partial plates and various kinds of removable dentures to restore expression and prevent shrinking gums.

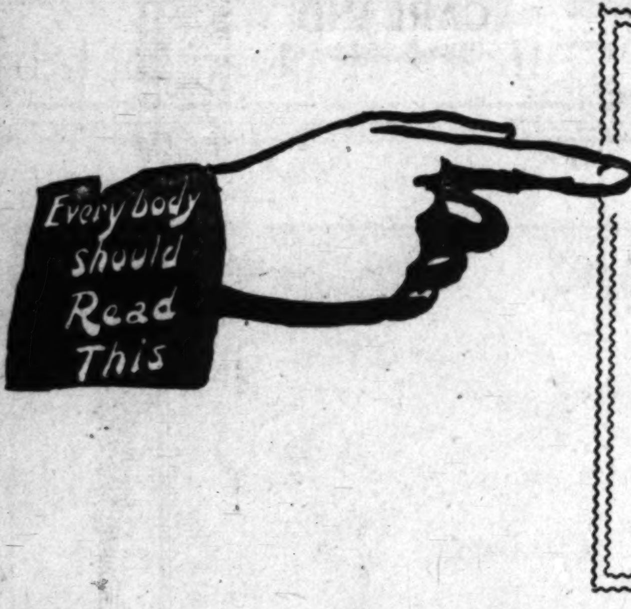
More Than Fifty Pianos From Our High Schools and From Our Public Schools Must Be Sold Right Away

Also Please Read What the Head of Our House Says

To close out every piano in Eilers music house before the shoe people take possession means that we shall have to sell more than twenty pianos each day.

It is a big job. There is no time to lose. So I asked our President to tell me what to say in the papers so that everybody would realize what a most extraordinary favorable opportunity this is for piano buying and how necessary it is to dispose of these fine pianos right away.

I am publishing his note. Maybe you won't believe me, for I'm a young man yet, but surely you'll believe the head of our concern, the man who is recognized as the foremost piano merchant in the United States. He has got to tell the truth, and if you will come here tomorrow morning you will realize that everything he says is positively so. This is his note:



Every body should Read This

"If everyone believed in advertising or if more people hereabouts knew us personally, we'd be entirely sold out by tomorrow noon. It's not a case of being busted, or being hard up for money, but we must quit running so many stores. We don't want to add shipping costs to our pianos here, and still have to sell them elsewhere. So will accept what they cost us and any price that's fair for used pianos.

"We'll make terms of payment as best suits the convenience of each buyer and we'll see to it that each buyer is always a thoroughly satisfied customer.

"What more can a man say?

"Just tell the people this and depend upon it,—we'll finish in a jiffy.

"Sincerely,

(Signed) "HY J. EILERS."

More Than 50 Pianos From the Schools

All of the elegant pianos from Los Angeles High Schools and Public Schools should be sold in one day. They're genuine Kimballs, all were brand new less than a year ago when the School Board rented them. All are especially selected instruments, too; selected for appearance as well as for superior tone quality. None better can ever be had. The School Board would like to have kept these pianos, but as we are to go out of business entirely here we had to arrange to have our pianos returned. They are now for sale.

Let us say in all earnestness that the low prices at which we are offering these fine Kimball pianos, beautiful mahogany, elegant English oak and some superbly figured walnuts, will never again be duplicated. No one in Los Angeles will ever live long enough to buy such fine pianos for so little again, and we'll take payments of only $6 a month for the smaller sizes and $8 a month for the elegant, largest sizes.

We cannot openly publish the sale prices of these beautiful pianos. It would hurt the Kimball reputation for years to come. But see them. You will arrange to secure one of them, for we state emphatically that these prices are lower, much lower, than we would ordinarily sell them to dealers buying them to sell again. We will also furnish the factory's and our own unconditional five years' guarantee with each instrument sold and will deliver each piano in positively perfect condition, like brand new, without a flaw or blemish, in perfect tune and regulation.

A Special Offer to Do Business Quickly

Price doesn't mean anything unless one can see the goods, so let me say merely in a general way that our regular and finest $1000 and some $1150 baby grand pianos and player pianos will all go for less than $600, and some for only $465, others for only $315, and we give armsful of latest music rolls free with each player piano. Payments as best suits any purchaser's convenience.

We'll take $112 ($5 a month) for new $250 upright pianos, nice mahogany cases, and we reduce everything else proportionately; will accept $30 each for the remaining old style ones.

SPECIAL FOR TOMORROW. Bring a few dollars to secure any piano, then arrange to pay the balance as best suits your convenience. We will not quibble over terms. No reasonable offer refused. See me or telephone me, A. G. Barnes. I'm in full charge of the big Eilers Music House now, and am going to get rid of every piano in this establishment, which was the largest in Southern California, for my hands aren't tied. Remember the place, 344 South Broadway.

THINK OF THIS.

If you don't get a piano or player piano now, chances are you'll never own one. Remember, also that every instrument sold under our hands is positively and definitely guaranteed with the famous Eilers money-back guarantee, assuring positive satisfaction to every purchaser. A. G. BARNES, Eilers Music House, 344 S. Broadway.

YACHT SEIZED BY A CRUISER.

American Boat With Arms for Dublin Captured.

United Irish League Sends Cash to Nationalists.

King Stays in London to Help Peace Makers.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

DONEGAL (Ireland) July 18.—It is reported that a cargo of rifles, numbering several thousand, which was being conveyed in an American yacht for the Nationalist volunteers, was seized by a British cruiser, which intercepted the yacht Friday night.

King George, who has been making great efforts to bring about a settlement of the Irish home rule crisis, this morning postponed his proposed visit to the great British fleet now lying at Spithead so that he might be in London to receive early reports of developments in the conferences going on between the various party leaders. It is understood that when the opportune moment arrives, His Majesty will throw his influence to the side looking for an amicable settlement. The belief prevails that such a settlement is not far off and the Liverpool Post, one of the best-informed newspapers on the government side, goes so far as to say: "There is really an arranged settlement of the Irish question. Details have yet to be adjusted, but the broad facts can be regarded as fixed."

Other authorities do not quite go so far, but satisfy themselves with the statement, "There is a near approach to a settlement."

The government is believed to have offered the Unionists, in case they agree to abandon their demand for a "clean cut" of the province of Ulster out of the operations of the Irish home rule bill, to arrange that the whole of Ulster, with the exception of the county of Tyrone, which has a great Catholic majority, should vote as an entity on the question of exclusion from the home rule government. The Unionists demand that Tyrone shall be included in this arrangement and this has been the cause of the deadlock.

Premier Asquith and Augustine Birrell, Secretary of State for Ireland, who are carrying on the negotiations on behalf of the Cabinet, have remained in town for the week-end. The Premier today had another audience with the King. The rest of the Cabinet Ministers scattered over the country for their weekly holiday.

FORWARD MONEY FOR NATIONALISTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—Ten thousand dollars of a promised fund of $100,000 was forwarded today by the United Irish League of America to John E. Redmond to be used for the Nationalist cause in Ireland. The full amount of the fund was pledged at a recent meeting of the National Executive Committee in this city and the league has begun a campaign to stimulate the members which have promised their support into prompt payment of their obligations. In September Mr. Redmond will meet the league at a convention in Philadelphia.

GUAYMAS TAKEN BY THE REBELS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) July 18.—Constitutionalists under Gen. Alvarado occupied Guaymas at daybreak today, according to unofficial advices received here. They received an ovation.

Entrance was made today partly because it is the anniversary of the death of Benito Juarez, who promulgated the Mexican Constitution. The day was given over to festivities at Guaymas, and throughout Sonora public offices were closed. Memorial services were held in nearly all towns.

Several hundred Federal sympathizers have left Douglas within a week and are said to be assembling in the mountains. An outbreak is expected.

DENIES CARBAJAL IS NEUTRAL.

Roberto Pesqueira Declares Only Unconditional Surrender Will Be Accepted from Huerta's Successor.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) July 18.—Nothing short of unconditional surrender of the Federal government will be accepted by the Constitutionalists, according to Roberto V. Pesqueira, recently confidential agent to Gen. Carranza in Washington, who reached San Antonio today en route to Carranza's headquarters via El Paso.

"Carbajal is not a neutral," said Mr. Pesqueira. "His is a strong Huertista, and his selection by Huerta as President ad interim was in pursuance of a plan to extort some sort of a favorable compromise from the Constitutionalists. He was put up as part of Huerta's plans to secure for himself and his friends all the favors possible, but the effort will be fruitless."

MORE CHINESE ARRESTED.

Federal Inspectors Take Eleven in Custody in Atlantic City—Raids Made in Other Eastern Cities.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) July 18.—Federal inspectors aided by the local police today arrested eleven Chinese whose papers they demanded to ascertain whether they were involved in the smuggling of Chinese into the United States. They will be given a hearing on Monday. The arrests here followed others made in Philadelphia, Saginaw, Mich., and other places in the government's effort to stop the illegal entry of Chinese into this country.

MEET NEXT IN LOS ANGELES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

EAST LIVERPOOL (O.) July 18.—Delegates to the annual convention of the Young People's Christian Union, in session here, completed their work today with the election of officers and the selection of Los Angeles as the place for next year's meeting.

GEN. BLISS SUGGESTS MEXICAN PRISONERS BE FREED IN SHORT TIME.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 18.—A suggestion that the 6400 Mexicans, principally soldiers, interned at Fts. Rosecrans, Brown, McIntosh, Bliss and Wingate, be released, provided definite assurances are given that they will not take up arms again was received by the War Department today from Gen. Bliss. The development of the past week and the collapse of the Huerta regime have materially strengthened the belief of officials here that the United States might now dispose of its expensive charges provided the Constitutionalist authorities will promise them fair treatment. It is estimated that in addition to the large sum already spent, it will cost the United States approximately one-half million dollars for the maintenance of the Mexican internes within a very short time. Gen. Bliss suggests that the more important prisoners, such as Gen. Salazar and Castillo be detained at least for the present.

NUEVO LAREDO WITHOUT PRIEST.

CHURCH USED AS BARRACKS. NO MORE RELIGIOUS MARRIAGES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

LAREDO (Tex.) July 18.—The Constitutionalists' alleged attitude toward the Catholic church in Mexico has resulted in an unusual situation today in Nuevo Laredo, Mex., opposite here. Weddings, baptisms and even funerals for Catholics either must be held without the customary religious services or else those services can be obtained only after unusual difficulties. The Catholics are awaiting the outcome of an appeal to Gen. Carranza to change the situation.

Soon after the occupation of Nuevo Laredo by the Constitutionalists under Maj. Sato, he ordered the occupation of the Catholic church. The priest, Father Iglesias, was deported to the American side.

The church since has been used as a barracks and civilians have been generally refused permission to enter.

Women of prominent families recently petitioned Col. Murieta, Constitutionalist commander, to give the church to the public for a primary school.

Murieta answered he would not permit the building to be used for any purpose other than as a barracks, nor will the priest be permitted to return to Nuevo Laredo.

Catholic residents are without religious services and the only clerical services they can obtain are those of priests from the American side of the river.

MORE REFUGEES IN VERA CRUZ.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

VERA CRUZ, July 18.—Among the Mexican refugees who arrived here today from the capital were Enrique Gerostieta, former Minister of Justice, in Huerta's Cabinet; Gen. Javier de Moure, one of the Federal commanders in the defense of Torreon; Jose Ignacio Limantour, a nephew of the Secretary of the Treasury under President Porfirio Diaz; several Federal officers of minor importance, and other suporters of Huerta. The refugees said emissaries of Venustiano Carranza and Emiliano Zapata had conferred in the capital recently, but that the purpose of the conference and its result were not known. They also declared Mexico City to be at the mercy of the adherents of Zapata should they determine to enter the place, as there were only a few police to oppose them.

The daily trains from the capital to Vera Cruz are now sent out under armed escort. A train full of soldiers is sent in advance and another follows.

"In the capital all is quiet and there is no indication of any anti-American feeling among the populace."

MADERISTAS IN EVIDENCE.

Prisons and Hiding Places in Mexico Are Being Depopulated—Carranza Gives Orders to Zapata.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, July 18.—Several State Governors appointed by President Madero and deposed by Gen. Huerta have just arrived in the capital or have been released from prisons where they were confined for many months. All of them have been in close communication with the Constitutionalist leaders and declared today that until Carranza arrived here no steps would be taken to establish a provisional government.

As the bulk of the Carranza forces are now in San Luis Potosi and the railroad to this city is in good condition, it is generally expected that Carranza and his troops will peacefully enter the Federal capital some time next week.

Carranza is said to have ordered Zapata and other chieftains in the south not to make any attempt to enter the capital.

START REGIMENTS TOWARD CAPITAL.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

MONTEREY (Mex.) July 18.—Seven thousand Constitutionalist troops were today ordered to march toward Mexico City to be ready to preserve order there in case of an outbreak.

The troops ordered to march toward the capital are under the command of Gen. Jesus Carranza, brother of the first chief of the Constitutionalists, and who has been operating in the neighborhood of Pachuca, which is only a few hours' ride by railroad from Mexico City.

Constitutionalist officials say they have 37,000 to 38,000 troops within twenty-four hours by rail of the capital.

CAILLAUX TRIAL ON TOMORROW.

WIFE OF FORMER PREMIER TO FACE FRENCH JURY.

Slayer of Gaston Calmette Said to Be Bearing Strain Well and Prepared to Undergo Ordeal, Which Will Be Sensation of Paris During the Coming Week.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, July 18.—Mme. Caillaux, wife of the former French Premier and Minister of Finance, will be taken tomorrow from the St. Lazare prison to the Conciergerie adjoining the Palace of Justice, to await her trial beginning Monday, for killing Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, on March 16.

The prisoner is to be lodged in the cell occupied in 1902 by Mme. Therese Humbert, while under trial on charges of swindling the French public out of several millions of dollars.

Mme. Caillaux's health appeared today to be much better than when she was arrested in March. It is reported she intends to apply for a divorce after the trial, whatever its outcome. As she is said to consider that by so doing she will show the greatest mark of her love for her husband, since by remaining with him she thinks she would prove an obstacle to his political career.

The trial is expected to last at least five days. The space in court usually occupied by spectators is to be given up almost entirely to newspaper men, 142 of whom from all parts of the world have been allotted places in the press box.

Oddly enough the seat immediately behind Mme. Caillaux's position in the prisoners' enclosure, will be occupied by a reporter from the Figaro.

FEW PLACES FOR WOMEN.

Women are not to be allowed in the public section of the court, but a few places have been reserved for them in the passageway leading from the jury-room to the jury box.

Some commotion was caused today in legal circles by the report that the authorities intended to place strong detachments of municipal guards both inside and outside the Palace of Justice in order to prevent the possibility of disturbance as it has been stated that the Royalists intended to make a demonstration. Detectives wearing barristers' gowns and caps also are to be stationed about the courts.

Interest in the trial increases in intensity as the hour approaches for the appearance of Mme. Caillaux. The newspapers again recite the series of political and judicial scandals which attended the killing of Calmette, while many columns are filled with discussions of the case and rumors that some of the most prominent figures in the political world are to be examined in court.

The testimony of President Raymond Poincare will be read.

The vital legal question in the case is that of premeditation. The prosecution, directed by Prosecutor-General Jules Herbaux declares that the crime was deliberately planned by Madame Caillaux in order to rid her husband of a formidable opponent. The defense, on the other hand, will seek to show that Madame Caillaux intended only to teach Calmette a lesson and that his death was an accident. Her counsel is Fernand Labori, who became famous as the defender of Capt. Dreyfus.

QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

The questions to be put to the jury are, first:

"Is the accused guilty of willful homicide?" and, second:

"Was the homicide premeditated?"

If the jury replies "yes" to the questions, the sentence must be death. If the reply is "yes" to the first and "no" to the second, without extenuating circumstances, the sentence must be hard labor for life. If extenuating circumstances are admitted, the term must be hard labor for a period fixed by the judges and ranging from five to twenty years.

The presiding judge has the right to ask the jury, "Is the accused guilty of inflicting injuries which caused death, without having the intention to kill?" If the answer is "yes," the sentence is two years, which, however, could be suspended under the first offense law.

BRIBERY IN JAPAN.

More High Officials of the Shipbuilding Companies Are Punished for Corrupting Naval Officials.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

TOKIO, July 18.—More high officials of shipbuilding companies were sentenced today for forging documents and bribing Japanese naval officers to influence the allotment of construction contracts.

Kenzo Iwahara, former manager in New York of the Mitsui Products Company, and retired Vice-Admiral Tsurutaro Matsuo, were each sentenced to two years' imprisonment, while Giychi Iida, managing director of the Mitsui company, and Jotaro Yamamoto of the same concern, were sentenced to eighteen months. The sentence of Iida was, however, suspended.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ST. PETERSBURG (Russia) July 18.—Russia is about to recognize as legitimate the emigration of her surplus millions to countries other than those in Europe and the Ministry of Commerce submitted today to the Cabinet a bill to abolish some of the penalties hitherto attaching to unauthorized emigration.

The bill in its preamble specially refers to the 218,000 emigrants from Russia to America last year and to the fact that $50,000,000 was remitted to Russia in 1913 by Russian subjects who have settled on the other side of the Atlantic.

In place of the expensive passports, which heretofore have been necessary to everybody desiring to depart from Russia, permits will be issued at the cost of only 10 cents in future. The fine of $7.50 half-yearly now inflicted on absentees, who have been more than six months abroad, is to be abolished in the case of those returning on board Russian steamers. The bill also provides for the establishment of a fund to assist emigrants in Russian ports and abroad and for the appointment of a special commission to defend their interests in foreign countries.

Emigration agents, by one clause of the bill, are made liable to imprisonment for holding out false inducements to emigrants.

King's Cousin Wedded.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 18.—A romantic courtship culminated here Thursday in the marriage of Prince Louis of Bourbon, cousin to the King of Spain, and Miss Beatrice Harrington, a pretty London girl. The wedding was celebrated quietly in a London church without the knowledge of the royal family of Spain.

ASK JURY TRIALS.

"Wonderful Madame Cleo" and Her Husband, Pulled from Under the Bed, Plead Not Guilty.

Mrs. Frances Pelz, the "clairvoyant" arrested by the police, Friday, at her handsome home at No. 140 West Eighty-first street, was arraigned before Police Judge White yesterday and pleaded not guilty to "telling fortunes" without a license. Her husband, who was found under the bed in the "seance room" and who is said by the police to be the source of his wife's "occult powers," also pleaded not guilty to the same charge. Both asked for jury trials, the date of which have not been set.

Frank Dominguez, counsel for the couple, says their testimony will be that they knew that Policewoman Tarbell and Officers Houston, Hilf and MacPhillips were to make the "raid" and that the husband was placed under the bed, not to clip off the envelopes handed to him by the seer and copy the questions for her, but to hear the conversation which would pass between Mrs. Pelz and the "customer."

The police say that Mrs. Pelz has practised "clairvoyancy" in the city for many years past and has built up a fair-sized fortune as a result. They say besides the luxurious house in which she was arrested, she owns eighteen lots near-by. Mrs. Pelz was formerly known as the "Wonderful Madame Cleo," with parlors in Mercantile place.

Politics.

CLUBS INDORSE FREDERICKS.

Joint Conference Behind Him for Governor.

Will Make Fight for Republican Committee.

Candidate for Appellate Judge Wins Handily.

Capt. John D. Fredericks for Governor.

This is the slogan adopted yesterday at a joint conference of committees from the Young Republican Club, the Women's Republican League and the Republican League of Los Angeles County.

The committees, to which was left the task of indorsing candidates for office, decided to indorse only one and that one the head of the Republican ticket.

The indorsement will be given more force at a great meeting next week, when the three organizations will gather to lay plans for furthering the candidacy of Capt. Fredericks.

The three organizations decided to oppose the ticket placed in the field by the Stanton-Beveridge-Youngworth forces for Republican county committeemen. The new County Committee is to be formed of candidates from each of the Assembly districts. The anti-Stanton ticket was placed in every district in the county some days ago, and not until the closing hours Thursday night was there opposition and then not in all of the districts.

The Republican contest for Committeemen will furnish one of the interesting features of the campaign in the county. The Young Republicans, Republican League and Women's Republican League will unite their precinct forces to defeat the opposition.

PRESIDING JUDGE.
MIDDLECOFF WINS PLACE.

Eight years is a long time to wait. In a Republican convention in 1906 Walter W. Middlecoff, an attorney in the Washington building, then practicing in Stockton, aspired to the nomination for the Appellate Court. He lost out by a narrow margin. This year he will win the office without a struggle. After the election in November he will be presiding judge of the Appellate Court, Second District. His tenure of office will be sixty days.

It so happened that Judge Conrey, Judge Craig and Gesner Williams sought the same office, but for a different term. Judge Conrey, the incumbent, holds office only until the election. He and his two opponents are seeking the long term. Middlecoff, seeing that no one else was running for the short term, and being of a patriotic turn of mind, decided that no office so important should go begging. In the last few days of petition circulating he gathered enough names and yesterday it was said that his petition is efficient.

As he is the only candidate he will be elected. Middlecoff attended U.S.C. in 1888, was admitted to the Supreme Court of California in 1892 and the Supreme Court of the United States in 1903. He is 43 years of age.

C. C. Legerton, a fledgling attorney, will become a Superior judge by virtue of the same short-term rule. He has no opposition and will be elected for about sixty days.

Since the primary law provides that no independent candidate may run for non-partisan office, whatever is the result at the primary will be, the result at the November election.

GO BY DEFAULT.
PEOPLE NOT ADVISED.

There will be no contests in Santa Barbara county against Superior Judge S. E. Crow, Sheriff Nat Stewart, Recorder Mark Bradley, Auditor S. B. Schauer, Tax Collector Harry Sweetser, Clerk C. A. Hunt and Treasurer W. B. Metcalf. The right to enter in the primary race for these offices closed and no opposing candidates appeared.

There are not many persons in the county who realized that under the primary law these offices cannot be subject to contest after the August primaries. The general belief was that other candidates could enter for the fall election. These are the most important offices in the county, and have always been subjects of warmly-fought contests.

The offices contested are County Surveyor, where a three-cornered race is on; Superintendent of Schools, where Miss M. V. Lehner, incumbent, is opposed by Mrs. Muriel Edwards of Santa Ynez; Assessor, in which Clio L. Lloyd, incumbent, has against him W. R. Kearney, Santa Barbara, and Coroner and Public Administrator, a joint office, is being contested for by A. M. Ruiz, incumbent, and Charles McDermott of Santa Barbara.

The registration is apportioned among the parties as follows: Republican, 4198; Democrat, 2221; "Progressive," 1462; Prohibition, 423; decline to state, 966; Socialist, 418; independent, 9.

CITY BRIEFS.

A. Stephen Vavra yesterday was appointed administrator of the estate of James Chapman, more familiarly known as "Tamale Jimmy," who died last Wednesday, which, it developed yesterday, amounts to $3000. Chapman was a well-known character in the city. He said little and thus obtained another nickname of "The Hermit." The body was cremated yesterday.

The dual occasion of the fifty-first birthday anniversary of Postmaster Clark McLain and the twenty-fifth year of service of three carriers—Alexander L. Petrie, Loyal T. Lincoln and Charles R. Dillman—was celebrated yesterday with a banquet at the Teacup Inn.

Two more echoes of the talked-of proposal to construct a municipal railway were heard yesterday. If some have their way at the mass meeting to be held at the Longfellow school next Monday night, the city will be asked to construct a Lake-avenue line of its own as the nucleus of such a system, while Horace Dobbins, president of the Pasadena Rapid Transit Company, is working on another project that is to be broached to the Commissioners next week.

Miss Martha Pohnert of No. 614 North Mentor avenue and Miss Elizabeth Pike of No. 1276 North Michigan avenue expect to leave August 8, each to take up a term of seven years' missionary work in the interior of China.

KNIFE PIERCES SKULL.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FRESNO, July 18.—A pair of electrician's pliers was called into service early this morning to remove a knife-blade driven into a man's skull, no surgical instruments of sufficient strength being available at the emergency hospital. Marion Rodriquez drove the blade of his pocket knife into C. Perez's skull in the course of a fight. The blade broke, leaving an inch in the victim's head. When taken to the hospital it was found necessary to borrow a pair of pliers from the city electrician's office with which to remove the steel. Rodriquez is in jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

sixty hours, but he is sure that the gas cannot last that long with the added weight. He will carry about 800 pounds of sand ballast.

The Florence has a capacity of 40,000 cubic feet. James M. O'Connell will be the skipper and will carry as passengers George B. Harrison and L. B. Howard of Los Angeles. The Florence has never before left the earth and its pilot is proceeding carefully with the inflation of the new bag.

Al Carter will pilot the Venice, the smallest of the three big passenger carriers. His wife will journey with him. The couple were married but a short time ago and as a promise at the wedding Carter will take his wife with him tomorrow. It will be her first ascension.

The Fairy is the motorcycle, as it were, and its lone passenger, Louis Irvin, is to dodge about in the skies by himself. He is held off the earth by only 12,000 cubic feet of gas, and but little ballast is carried. The little basket looks like a go-cart, being hardly a yard square, and not over three and one-half feet high.

The terrier ran into Robert Hazzard's yard, and viciously attacked Hazzard's small son, biting the boy on the cheek and hand. Two dogs playing with the boy were next bitten, with them howling to places of retreat, the terrier sought other dogs to bite.

The wounds inflicted upon the child were cauterized by Dr. C. C. Violett of Garden Grove. Price searched high and low for the terrier, but it was not until the next day that the terrier was found under Price's house. The dog was killed and his brain was sent to Dr. Brem, State Pathologist, in the Brockman building, Los Angeles. Dr. Brem has not found rabies bacteria in the brain given him for examination, but is continuing his examination.

Today Dr. Violett took the Hazzard child to Dr. Black of Los Angeles, and started Pasteur treatments, which will last for three weeks. Dr. Violett and Dr. Black are satisfied that the dogs suffered from rabies.

Every dog in the Bolsa-Westminster neighborhood is under suspicion. Some will be killed without further ado and others are to be given the bullet at the slightest sign of disorder in their behavior.

It was the plan of the smugglers to sell the feathers secretly to Los Angeles milliners.

MASON PLANS IN HIGH TONE.

Great Church Auditorium to House Secessionist.

Splendid Angling on Pier Attracts Sportsmen.

Chief and Stenographer May Sue for Their Pay.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, July 18.—Dr. O. H. L. Mason, formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, now head of the Calvary Presbyterian Church, composed largely of former members of the First Church, who followed Mason when he left following the airing of charges, today signed an agreement with the Long Beach Improvement Company for the erection of a $75,000 four-story church auditorium for the congregation. The officials of the church promised to lease the structure for ninety-nine years after the building company has constructed it according to specifications.

The new structure will be the handsomest church edifice in this city, it is expected, and work will be begun on it right away. It is to be built on Ocean avenue at the northwest corner of Cedar and Ocean, facing the open sea. It will be of monolithic concrete of Graeco-Roman type, and will contain an auditorium seating 1500 persons, and an auxiliary auditorium on the roof seating 1000 persons. The halls will be rented on week days and will be occupied by the congregation and pastor on Sundays. Dr. Mason's congregation has grown to almost 1000 members.

GOOD FISHING.

Long Beach went a-fishing today, with surprising success. Fully 600 persons angled from the wharf, some catching sixty pounds of fat sea trout and greenback mackerel, while about 4000 pounds of albicore were landed by 125 followers of Isaak Walton, who put to sea in boats. It was the greatest fishing day in years.

The score of the boats which went far out into the channel for the succulent albicore was: Tillicum, 74; Eagle, 75; Pastime, 45; Tourist, 55, and Albatross, 50 fish.

THREATEN TO SUE.

The city of Long Beach, harassed by more than a hundred suits as a result of the collapse of the auditorium last year, is to be sued again by Mrs. Cora M. Morgan, stenographer, and probably by Sam Browne, acting Chief of Police, if the city does not immediately pay their bills on account of the probe on blind pigs.

Mrs. Morgan made an impassioned but futile appeal to the Council last night for $1005, which she said was due her for stenographic work at the beck and call of Mayor Whealton and the other two members of the Police Commission. Councilman Callahan asked if it was not true that the commission had agreed to give her only $250, and she stated that this sum would not pay for the transcript. The Council adjourning without a promise to pay, she now threatens to sue the city. And Sam Browne is about in the same box, as his bill for $545 is unpaid.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The annual picnic of the Southern California Colorado Society will be held in Long Beach two weeks from today. On August 1 at least 2000 former residents of the Rocky Mountain State will gather and enjoy a reunion.

Dr. H. R. Smith, a taxpayer on Broadway, last night notified the City Council that he protested against the acceptance of the lighting system on that street, being informed that the work was not according to specifications. The Council referred the protest to the Board of Public Works.

City and County Co-operate to Build Good Highway—Abundant Water Supply.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GARDEN GROVE, July 18.—The property owners have entered into an agreement to pave two blocks at the heart of the city along the entire distance between the twenty-foot paved strip which the county is putting down and the curb. The work has been begun. The county good-roads strip is about completed, which gives an all-paved highway from Anaheim to Santa Ana through this place.

The plan to consolidate the three local water companies did not materialize exactly as suggested. But two of the companies will evidently consolidate and make provision for the supply of the central part of the town with abundant water. The mains are being laid along Ocean avenue and the work will be pushed.

SPILLS CAR OF DYNAMITE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN BERNARDINO, July 18.—With the contents of two cars of dynamite spilled over the desert at Daggett when a Salt Lake freight train was derailed, a wrecking crew faces a situation that must be handled with gloves and gingerly the men went to work clearing the line for the operation of regular traffic, which was held up at Barstow, nine miles west of the scene of the wreck.

Besides the two cars of dynamite, which contained eighty tons of explosives, one car of fruit was derailed. No one was reported injured. Back of the derailed cars was three more filled with dynamite, the train carrying a total of 400,000 pounds of the stuff branded, "handle with care."

BABY BURGLAR GATHERS LOOT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, July 18.—A lad of 7 years, whose name is being withheld by the officers because of his tender years, is reponsible for two daring daylight burglaries in this city within the past week. According to the police the boy confessed and assisted them in recovering practically all the loot.

The boy entered the home of F. S. Haupt on Terracina boulevard while the family was at the beach and secured two gold watches, a bicycle and other articles. The place was entered and another watch was taken. From indications, the officers had no reason to believe that the tricks had been turned by a "kindergarten kid."

ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLING CHARGE.

MAYOR NAMES INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE ON REQUEST OF MINISTERS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

UPLAND, July 18.—Persistent rumors of the illegal sale of liquor in the dry city of Upland have caused considerable stir, on the part of the pastors of the various churches, and a committee, composed of Rev. R. C. Stone, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and of A. P. Harwood, a well-known temperance advocate of this colony, was before the last meeting of the City Trustees, asking that some action be taken by the board to ascertain whether or not there is ground for the rumors.

Mayor Woodbridge asked the committee if anything in the way of tangible evidence was at hand to work upon; stated that it were unfair, otherwise, to "put the matter up to the City Trustees" for attention. A considerable discussion followed and a committee, consisting of J. F. Anderson, A. H. Johnson and C. V. Lambrigger, all members of the board, was apointed by the Mayor to run down the rumors and to warn any violators of the law, if found, that they will be prosecuted.

OXNARD GROWS STILL GREATER.

PROPERTY ASSESSMENTS INCREASE STEADILY—DAMAGE TO HAY BY RAIN.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OXNARD, July 18.—The total assessed valuation of the city of Oxnard for 1914 shows that the city has maintained the same increase in wealth this year as last, the figures being almost $250,000 more for 1914 than for 1913. The total assessment of the city is $2,414,089.

The total assessment for 1913 was $2,178,593, and for 1912 it was $1,924,840. These figures do not include the assessed valuations of public service corporations, which are taxed by the State. In Oxnard last year the assessed valuation of these properties was $133,000. The personal property tax amounts to $1950 this year, an increase of $225 over 1913.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The California Counties Oil Company, operating in the Casitas, has cemented the eight-inch casing at a depth of 1805 feet and is now shut down waiting for the cement to set. Operations will be resumed July 27, when the hole will be opened and drilling carried forward.

Much damage to hay as the result of this week's rain is reported, but ranchers believe that their loss in quantity will be made up by increased price later on.

Fire destroyed a large hay barn and 125 tons of barley hay and seventy-five tons of alfalfa belonging to the Oxnard Improvement Company. The barn and part of the hay was insured.

With the purchase by the city of a milk-tester, the city physician will be able to make tests of milk furnished by local dairies at any time complaint is made. The State inspector has arrested dairymen here on several trips recently, but his tours of inspection are too far apart to insure standard-grade milk, and the purchase of the tester has been ordered by the Trustees to insure a uniformly high grade.

HORSEMAN KILLED BY AUTO STAGE.

DRIVER ARRESTED ON CHARGES THAT HE WAS ASLEEP AT THE WHEEL.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

IMPERIAL, July 18.—W. F. Reaves, 26 years old, was killed here yesterday when an automobile driven by Art Moore, who runs an auto stage between Imperial and Brawley, ran into a cart Reaves was driving. Reaves was thrown violently to the ground, crushing his skull and left lung and he died in half an hour. It is alleged Moore was dozing.

Moore was taken in custody by an officer, but was released on bond of $2500. Reaves was a native of Illinois where his people live. He was a member of the Odd Fellows' lodge and that order will take care of the remains. His friends state that Reaves was to have been married some time during August to a young lady in Illinois.

Crowd of Bride's Friends Under Arrest.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, July 18.—Asking $50,000 for a charge of lead shot that lodged in his back, Stephen W. Circle, a miner of Goffs, filed suit in the Superior Court here today against Fred Leiser, whom he alleges was back of the shotgun when it was discharged in his direction. The defendant is already charged with assault on the criminal calendar.

The two men fought with their fists over a mining claim, it is alleged, and when Circle was washing his bruised face he charges that Leiser fired at him, the charge hitting him full in the back. Circle says the doctor pulled 140 pellets out of his hide and, according to his claim for damages, he considers each worth something over $350.

Leiser is manager of the California-Louisiana Mining Company and is said to be able to pay the $50,000.

PAYS PENALTY.

Passengers on the westbound Santa Fe trains today brought a story of a most revolting attack on a young girl passenger by one of the negro porters on No. 9, the brute then jumping from the moving train and fracturing his skull.

The negro, William Black, is now confined at the home of Mrs. A. Burkhart in Winslow, Ariz., and should he live he will face a serious charge. The name of the girl, who was en route to Bakersfield, was not learned. The assault occurred between Albuquerque and Winslow.

JOKE ON JOKESTERS.

A few minutes after they were married, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brecht left the home of Louis Allen at No. 170 Eleventh street for Riverside, outwitting a crowd of friends who were gathering for an old-fashioned charivari.

Unaware that they had left, the young people started the noise and the neighbors turned in a riot call to the police. A squad of officers had placed the party of young men under arrest when the owner of the house arrived in his night shirt to explain the joke.

Ray M. Monk, who holds degrees from the University of Michigan and the University of Sydney, Australia, faces a charge of issuing a forged check of $70 on the Appleton Land, Water and Power Company of Hesperia, with which concern he sought employment when he arrived here without funds from Mexico recently. Monk is a civil engineer.

FATAL COLLISION OF TWO AUTOS.

ONE MAN WILL DIE AFTER CATAPULTING THROUGH WINDSHIELD.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ANAHEIM, July 18.—O. E. Poling of Long Beach was perhaps fatally injured shortly before midnight when the automobile he was driving collided with that of M. W. Tilley of San Diego at the western city limits of Anaheim.

Tilley, en route to San Diego, accompanied by a party of National Guardsmen, was entering the city when Poling, in an endeavor to pass a heavily laden auto truck, swung into their car, totally demolishing both machines and throwing the occupants violently to the ground. Poling was projected through the windshield. Later the victims were removed to the Anaheim Sanatorium where it was ascertained that Poling had sustained a broken skull, and but little hope is entertained for his recovery, as he is still unconscious.

The members of the other party were able to proceed on their way in another car, as the soldiers had to report for duty at San Diego this morning.

WOMEN TO TRY WOMAN.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN DIEGO, July 18.—Women jurors are to try the case of Abby Grant, who is charged with maintaining a disorderly resort. It is the plan of Deputy City Prosecuter Gordan Ingle to have women juries to try women defendants, and he will make the first test of this in the case of the Grant woman. The prosecutor as well as Chief of Police Wilson maintain that male juries are loath to convict pretty women, hence the jury composed of women.

WATER COMPANY GUARDS REST ON ARMS FOLLOWING COMPROMISE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, July 18.—The armed guard, which for nearly a week, night and day, has held down the division box on Hellman avenue, the battle-ground of the warring ranchers of the Cucamonga section, was called off today following a meeting of the directors of the Old Settlers and Cucamonga Water Company directors, at which the differences of the two factions were mediated, and tonight, for the first time in many days, the men who have been obliged to sleep on the hard weir box, will enjoy the comfort of their own beds.

The litigation was settled temporarily by a compromise, in which the Cucamonga company agrees to turn twenty miners' inches of water over to the Old Settlers instead of the fifteen inches recently awarded by the courts. Heads of both companies admit that a final settlement of the trouble will necessitate further action, and it seems not unlikely that the case will again be taken to court.

MONSTER BARBECUE.

ECONOMY is the forerunner of thrift, and thrift paves the way to independence. "A penny saved is a penny earned."

Out of every wage, however small, some portion should be saved by the prudent.

It may require rigid economies or even self-denials, but, systematically practiced, it is a source of pleasure and soon will pay for a city lot or an acre of ground on some fast electric line.

The little house would soon follow, diverting the rent to a loftier purpose and afford great satisfaction.

The garden, cow and poultry all aid in promoting the "income" and reducing the "outgo." The acre or two "near" the city will soon be "of" the city and wonderfully valuable.

Or, to go a step farther, consider the security that follows upon possession of a few acres already producing an income sufficient to take care of the payments. The family thus secured need have no fear of the future.

Those who enjoy a broader independence should consider the safety secured in ten to twenty acres of fruit or farm land in fertile Perris Valley. All chairmen of committees for the Coleman home fete are requested to meet at the home of ex-Senator Dorsey tomorrow at 2 o'clock, p.m. This meeting was originally called for Tuesday, and all interested persons are urged to note the change.

Postal Station Burglary.

Thieves entered the postal substation at No. 2170 Sunset boulevard, located in the store of J. M. Wallam, some time during Friday night and stole $42.11 in postage stamps, with a lot of jewelry and trinkets. No money or blank money orders were taken.

In Room Twenty-three.

Poles Organize.

Poles of this city have recently organized branch No. 1751 of the Polish Alliance of North America, which has headquarters at Chicago. The local lodge has twenty-nine members and will hold meetings temporarily at No. 2708 Mozart street. All Poles are eligible to affiliation.

More Chinamen to Go Over.

Yee Wing, a Chinese picked up by Inspector Blee at San Jacinto, was committed to the County Jail yesterday on the charge of having in his possession a fraudulent certificate of residence. The bond was fixed at $2500 by Commissioner Williams. Four contraband Chinese were found at Alhambra by Inspectors Blee, Brasee, Conaty and Nardini. They will be deported.

Cycle of Promotions.

W. R. McGonigle, entry clerk at the office of the Collector of Customs, having resigned to become wharfinger at San Pedro, the vacancy will be filled by the appointment of Miss Olive Conger, who has been connected with the office for some years. John L. Westland will take Miss Conger's place, and, in turn, will be succeeded by A. Perkins, and his position will be filled by G. S. Quate, formerly an inspector at San Diego. All of the changes in the local office are in the line of civil service.

His Bond Approved.

Receiver O. R. W. Robinson of the local Land Office received information from Washington yesterday that the bond of his successor, Alex Mitchell, had been approved by the authorities of the Land Office. The bond is for $40,000, an increase of $15,000 over the bond of Receiver Robinson, on account of the volume of business transacted by the office. During the year closed June 30, Mr. Robinson handled over a quarter million dollars. The change in the office, including the installation of John D. Roche, the new official who succeeds Register Buren, will take place August 1.

Big Import Business.

On account of the rush of importations by Los Angeles merchants, in anticipation of the coming fall and winter trade, there is a congestion of goods at the appraisers' warehouse, and it has been necessary for Collector Elliott to wire to Washington for authority to hire additional help to handle the merchandise. The importations indicate that local business men are preparing for a big season and are laying in the stocks calculated to attract the "nimble dollar." It will all be handled, however, in good time, and without any unusual delay. It has been some years, however, since there has been such a glut of importations at the local warehouse at this season of the year.

"FOLLOWS LEADER" TO BURNING PIT.

SMALD BOY AT SUNDAY-SCHOOL BARBECUE IS SEVERELY BURNED IN PLAY.

Nine-year-old Everett Watts, who lives at No. 122 North Avenue 20, yesterday awakened earlier than his parents. Only two other days in the year may he be depened upon to rise so early—on Christmas morning and soon after dawn of the Fourth. Yesterday was the Sunday-school picnic.

At the Second Presbyterian Church at Broadway and Daly streets, 150 of the Sunday-school pupils gathered. The pastor, the Rev. E. L. B. McClellan, and the teachers were kept busy marshalling their gay and care-free wards. The colorful throng boarded cars and were taken to Eagle Rock Park.

The big feature of the picnic was to be a barbecue. The night before two of the churchmen had gone out and dug a wide pit and buried the beef under glowing coals. The pit was opened yesterday and the cooked beef sliced and served. The children were waited upon first. When they had finished the teachers and chaperons sat down to the rustic tables.

The pit drew Everett Watts. It was the first time he had been to a barbecue. He called friends and they watched the burning coals for a moment. Then one of the friends suggested playing "follow the leader." It was taken up. "We will start right here," the leader called. The hazard of the jump had evidently appealed to him and he jumped, making it safely. The smaller Everett came second. He did not think he could make it, but, undaunted, he was determined to make the try. He stepped back from the pit to take a good run. He started, ran and then paused at the brink. "Scaredy-cat," called one of the boys. Everett said not a word but retraced his steps and once more ran for the pit. He jumped clean, but fell a good foot short of the other edge.

The force of the leap buried his legs in the coals up to his knees. Screaming with pain, he floundered to the edge he had attempted in his jump, and there willing hands helped him to the cool ground.

Everett's stockings and shoes had been burned off and his legs frightfully seared.

He was taken to the Receiving Hospital where soothing unguents were applied.

HELD FOR TRIAL.

Ernest A. Henson, charged with violation of the Mann white slave act, in inducing Mrs. Harriet Willets to come to San Bernardino from Chicago, and with whom the complaint alleges he has lived unlawfully, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Williams yesterday, and in default of $5000 bond was committed to the County Jail. The woman and H. R. Horn, who were arrested by the Federal officers with Henson, are still in jail in San Bernardino. It is understood that they will be held as witnesses against Henson.

GIVES ANALYSIS OF CITY BUDGET.

INTERESTING COMPARISONS IN FIGURES SHOW HOW THE MONEY IS SPENT.

Some interesting comparisons of percentages in the new city budget with that of last year have been prepared by Assistant City Auditor Fountain.

The figures show that this year the appropriations for outlays amount to 12.25 per cent. of the totals; that salaries amount to 58 per cent. and that expenses are 29.75 per cent.

The departmental totals are segregated as follows: Outlays, $685,547; salaries, $3,239,926; expenses, $1,663,273, making a departmental total of $5,588,746. The general expense fund is fixed at $250,000 and the reserve fund at $1,100,000, making a grand total of $6,938,746.

There are increases in the appropriations for the various departments as follows:

Auditor, 11 per cent.; building department, 1½ per cent.; Civil Service Commission, 20 per cent.; election fund, 100 per cent.; electrical and fire alarm bureau, 46 per cent.; fire department, 3½ per cent.; garbage collection, 13½ per cent.; health department, 12½ per cent.; public library fund, 7⅝ per cent.; Mayor, 24 per cent.; park department, 15 per cent.; playground department, 15⅝ per cent.; police department, 6 per cent.; city prosecutor, 32 per cent; street-sweeping department, 24 per cent.; street-lighting department, ½ per cent.; tax collector, 22 per cent., and reserve fund, 10 per cent.

Funds and officials that get a reduction in percentages are as follows:

TO TEACH IN ORIENT.

Priest, Formerly of This City, Stops en Route to Take Chair in Chinese College.

Rev. Edward Lunney, O.F.M., former Los Angeles priest, a member of the Franciscan order stationed at St. Joseph's Church, is visiting relatives and friends here prior to leaving for China, where he will take a professorship of languages in one of the Franciscan colleges. Father Lunney was a Los Angeles boy, having graduated from St. Vincent's College and after his ordination labored in the vineyard of Los Angeles until transferred several years ago to Joliet, Ill.

There he was a professor in the St. Francis Solanus College for about two years and was then appointed chaplain to the State penitentiary. In this work he made numerous friends and the Prison Post, a publication issued by the prisoners themselves, devoted frequent mention to the priest they considered their benefactor. In a few days, Father Lunney will leave for San Francisco, where he will be joined by Rev. Father Junipero, O.F.M., of St. Boniface's Church, to leave for the Orient.

WHAT AND WHY IS COLEMAN HOUSE?

CHARITABLE ASSOCIATION TO BE EXPLAINED WITH EACH TICKET.

What and why is Coleman House?

This is the suggested title of a little pamphlet which will accompany each ticket purchased for the elaborate afternoon and evening garden party fiesta at the beautiful residence of ex-Senator Stephen M. Dorsey, the 28th inst., for the benefit of the Coleman House.

There are many who know something of the worthy work of the Coleman House Association, but comparatively few realize its wide scope and many aids to foreigners in becoming good American citizens. It was established by Mrs. Joseph E. Coleman two years ago to teach the poor and needy immigrant the ideals of true Americanism.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock the chairmen of the various committees will meet at ex-Senator Dorsey's residence, No. 2619 Figueroa street. Tickets may be secured at many places about town. Each will be numbered, the lucky holders winning prizes of chickens, ducks, pigs and other animals or fowls in the "barnyard raffle."

Miss Willie Kerns, chairman of the fiesta, yesterday added the following names to the list of patronesses: Mrs. Charles Wellington Rand, Mrs. R. J. Waters, Mrs. Herbert A. Cable, Mrs. W. J. Ford and Mrs. Gavin W. Craig.

Mrs. Hugo Eckhardt and Mrs. H. Phelps Reed will preside at the cigar and cigarette booth. Mrs. C. Tabor Martin and Miss C. Colwell will assist.

NEED OF SCHOOLS.

President of State Normal School at Chico Gives His Views to City Club.

"The Greatest Need in Our Public Schools" was the subject of Allison Ware, president of the State Normal School at Chico, before the City Club yesterday. He urged establishment of standards for school efficiency and said that after generations of experience there are not yet proper standards for testing the results of the public school system; that fifty-eight counties in this State are each groping about, experimenting, making mistakes, and striving as best they can to do well without standards.

"In the purchase of school supplies," said the speaker, "the schools of California waste over $500,000 annually, because there is no standard except that of high-pressure book company salesmanship."

Mr. Ware declared that the absence of standards makes it impossible to judge the efficiency of work that has been taught for a hundred years, and makes it more difficult to judge the worth of new educational departures.

"I claim to be an optimist," said the speaker, "but as a constructive optimist I would not be blind to the greatest need of our schools, the establishment of common-sense efficiency standards. We have put too much trust in sweet-breathed good intentions. It is high time for us to substitute knowledge for guesswork, products for processes and standards founded upon cold facts for speculative promises based upon personal opinion."

Mr. Ware is a candidate for the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction, but did not refer to his candidacy in any way in this address.

Mr. Ware commented upon the remarkable growth of Los Angeles and Southern California. He said: "I used to doubt it, then I believed it, but I marvelled at it; now I know the reason for it. You are growing great, not only because of your resources and your climate, but most of all, because you have learned in a large measure the art of community building. You have learned that beauty pays, that cleanliness is worth while, that parks, playgrounds, good water supplies, boulevards and school buildings are investments rather than expenses. For that reason, this city has become a world capital for successful people everywhere, who are seeking a pleasant place to live.

SPARRING ON RATES.

City Mails to Gas Companies Proposition They Probably Won't Accept; Time-Saving Sought.

Copies of the stipulation on natural gas rates adopted by the City Council on Friday were mailed to the officials of the three gas companies by City Attorney Stephens yesterday. This stipulation provides that the companies shall be allowed to distribute natural gas and charge 61 cents per 1000 cubic feet therefor, pending the decision of their appeals to the court on the 40-cent rate fixed by the Council, and that the companies must give bond to refund to consumers the difference between the 61-cent rate and that ultimately fixed.

All of the companies have clearly signified their intention of refusing to enter into such a stipulation. They were willing to serve natural gas, under stipulation, at a 68-cent rate.

It is probable that Judge Wellborn will appoint a master in chancery to hear the application for an injunction to restrain the city from enforcing the 40-cent rate for natural gas. If this is done, the proceedings may be carried through within a comparatively short time.

ORIOLE QUARTETTE CONCERT.

The Oriole Girls' Quartette of Miss Margaret Goetz gave a musical programme at the Regent apartments Friday evening to an audience of about 100 guests. In the quartette are Misses Madelene Wadsworth, Jenny Lind, Grace Morgan and Gertrude Pentland. Helen Bruhn played accompaniments.

Romance of Rank.

OTLAND'S SOVEREIGN PEER SIMPLY BURIED.

[illegible] which was reared yes-[illegible] grave bears, in ac-[illegible] last wish, this sim-[illegible] "John Sutherland [illegible] Caithness, Died May [illegible]

[illegible] HERE?

[illegible] this man to voluntarily [illegible] from his native [illegible] deprive himself of [illegible] that [illegible] English peerage above [illegible] Earl of Warwick? [illegible] now, as was stated [illegible] Corridan H. Putnam of [illegible] dead man's closest [illegible] found in the motto on the armorial bearings of the House of Caithness: "Commit thy work to God."

"If you had known the Earl you would not ask the reason for his voluntary expatriation," said Mr. Putnam. "A modest man, he held all titles as dross, and preferred to live as one of the plain people of earth. His life was devoted to good works."

But, reading the history of the family, one is fain to find some reason more subtle; some predestination working in the blood of the man whom Americans had known for thirty-nine years as plain John Sutherland Sinclair.

In 1379, Sir Henry Sinclair, the founder of the House of Caithness, was created Earl of Orkney by King Hakon VI, of Norway, and with the brothers Zeno, Venetian adventurers of the time, sailed for the West to seek a strange land of which vague rumors were heard.

That they visited Greenland is certain. That they may even have landed on the mainland of the Americas is believed by many historians, due to certain cryptic entrances in the journal of Nicolo Zeno, which is now preserved in the archives or Norway.

STRANGE FASCINATION.

Thereafter, America seems to have had a strange fascination for members of the House of Caithness. The eleventh Earl of Caithness was a lieutenant-colonel in the British army during our Revolution and sustained wounds in the Carolinas which were directly responsible for his death some years later. A scion of the family died in New York October 23, 1776, a lieutenant in His Majesty's foot.

It is a far cry from the sturdy Norse, who pushed the prow of his eagle-beaked "keeles" beyond the outermost Hebrides, to the man who lies buried on a hillock looking out over the sea that washes the western shores of the continent on which his ancester possibly set his foot 600 years before.

It is a longer cry from the regal state, which his ancestors maintained among the coot-haunted crags that look upon the North Sea, to a head of the house who would prefer to live as a plain American. Beside this act of self-abnegation, the story of the Fairfaxes, the Lord Fairfaxes of Maryland, pales to insignificance.

CRYPTIC ROMANCE.

No stranger page of romance perhaps ever floated into the ken of the people of the West. But the writing upon it is cryptic and there is apparently no key. Corridan H. Putnam, the dead Earl's friend, holds a possible key, as also does Mrs. Putnam. So does the Hon. John W. Forbes of Bronte cottage, Peterhead, Scotland, a cousin, who came here for the funeral and who left yesterday for Scotland, though he had intended to remain here until letters of administration are granted for the estate. By agreement Mr. Putnam asked for these letters.

"I am pledged to secrecy. But there is no material for a story in the life of the Mr. Sinclair we knew," asserted Mr. Putnam. "There was no romance, no tragedy. He was never married and if there was a love affair in his life no one seems to know it.

"That he was the Earl of Caithness is a fact which I must admit, as it is engraved on his tombstone."

Among the strange and entangling lapses in the record of the dead Earl of Caithness is the fact that the English Who's Who and the various peerages, as Burke's, are strangely reticent on matters connected with his life. There is a startling paucity of details, such as characterize the sketches of other men of equal or even lesser rank.

The Who's Who of 1914 gives no residence, simply: "Caithness, seventeenth earl of, created 1455, Sir John Sutherland Sinclair. Baron Berriedale, 1455, baronet, 1631, son of sixteenth earl and Janet, daughter of Roderick M'Leod, M.D., born 17 Sept., 1857, succeeded father 1891, educated Loretto, Aberdeen University; heir, brother, Hon. Norman Macleod Buchan; club, Union."

LONG ACROSS THE WATER.

In the Who's Who of 1900 and also of 1901, and again in that of 1907, the residence of the Earl of Caithness is given as No. 59 Inverness Terrace, Hyde Park, W., London, in the very heart of the fashionable district.

The late Earl of Caithness and his coat of arms.

Under a plain name he lived in Los Angeles, died a few weeks ago, and was laid away in Hollywood Cemetery in a spot which had been selected by himself while rambling about the city and environs. In his simple career here there was no hint of his distinguished identity.

Scotland and England.

NOTABLE HISTORY IN HOUSE OF CAITHNESS.

MUCH of Scotland's history, as well as that of its neighboring kingdom of England, is compressed into the bald details, as given by Burke's Peerage, of the lineage of the House of Caithness.

In the twelfth century two important families of Sinclair, or St. Clair co-existed in Scotland, distinguished, respectively, as the Sinclairs of Rosslyn, in Midlothian, and the Sinclairs of Hermanstoun, in East Lothian.

From one of these sprang Sir William Sinclair, or St. Clair, the accredited founder of the House of Caithness. He sat in the Scottish Parliament at Scone in 1283 and was created Baron of Pentland, a title which still survives in the family, by Robert Bruce.

As the old chronicles tell it, Sir William was a mighty hunter and two of his dogs, Help and Hold, outran and slew a milk-white buck which the King had long unsuccessfully hunted in his royal preserves of Pentland. In token of this achievement Sir William was made baron of the royal preserves.

Sir William was succeeded by his son, William, who, with his brother, John, fought staunchly at Bannockburn, and after Bruce's death were entrusted the task, with Sir James Douglas, of conveying the great leader's heart to the Holy Land for sepulchre. All three met death in Spain fighting the Moors, but Bruce's heart was finally recovered by Sir William Keith and buried at Melrose.

Sir Henry Sinclair, the greatest name of the House of Caithness, was the son of John. He was created Earl of Orkney by King Hakon VI of Norway in 1379 and later usurped the title of Prince of Orkney, reigning in regal splendor on the island.

In an invasion of the Faroe Islands the newly-created Earl of Orkney rescued the shipwrecked Venetian navigators, Nicolo and Antonio Zeno, and took them into his employ. Vague tales of a continent far to the west came to them and Sir Henry outfitted three ships and set out to sail beyond the rim of the world. Nicolo Zeno's chronicles, which is still in print, state that they at last came to be a country where the inhabitants wore furs and spoke a strange tongue. Various cryptic entrances in Zeno's chronicles have led some to believe that Sir Henry and his party even reached the mainland of America.

When James III of Scotland married Margaret, the Orkneys were transferred to the crown, and the Sinclairs were deprived of the earldom and given that of Caithness instead, together with the castle of Ravenscraig in Fife and the castle of Rosslyn in Lothian. These were great days for the family, one daughter of the house marrying the Duke of Albany, the second son of James II.

The second Earl of Caithness, William, fell at Flodden, September 9, 1513; the third, John, was killed May 18, 1529, in an attempt to recover the Orkneys. Another Earl was one of the assize that sat at the trial of Bothwell, the consort of Mary, Queen of Scots. The eleventh Earl was mortally wounded in our revolution, while an heir to the title died in New York October 23, 1776, a lieutenant in His Majesty's foot.

Letters All for Sinclair.

Numerous letters were received by the Earl of Caithness at the Hotel Balboa, but all were addressed to John Sutherland Sinclair. They came from Scotland, Montreal, Berriedale, N. D., where he farmed as a young man, New York and often from other places.

That he wished his identity kept secret is proved by the fact that even the letters from Scotland gave no outward hint that they were destined to a peer of Great Britain.

EARLDOM COMPRISES MANSIONS AND ACRES.

ORIGINALLY the suzerainty of the House of Caithness included the Orkneys and the entire northern portion of Scotland from sea to sea. In the thirteenth century, an outrage committed on the Bishop of Caithness, whose great castle at Braal is still one of the wonders of the Highlands, caused the loss of the county of Sutherland through regal decree.

Later, the Orkneys were taken over by the crown, and gradually the holdings of the family pared down. But the Earldom of Caithness still includes hundreds of thousands of acres in the county from which it takes its name, as well as a castle in Aberdeenshire and one in Lothian. The value of all property runs well into the millions of dollars. All property in Scotland is entailed to the oldest son and the title holder.

The official seat of the house is Menie, Belhelvie, Aberdeenshire. The successor to the title of Earl of Caithness has long lived at Auchmacoy House, Ellon, Aberdeenshire, a mansion that came to the family from the Earl of Buchan, on the distaff side, in the fifteenth century.

The present Earl dropped the surname of Sinclair and took that of Buchan in 1911. He was known, before he succeeded to the title, as Hon. Norman Macleod Buchan, and was born April 4, 1862, and was educated at Trinity Hall, Cambridge.

The full title to which he succeeds is Earl of Caithness, Lord Berriedale of Scotland and Baronet of Nova Scotia. The last title is an echo from the old days when Sir Henry Sinclair sailed far over the seas to a new land in the West.

The Earl of Caithness is twenty-seventh in seniority among the earls of England and Scotland, ranking above the earls of Warwick, Verulam and Strathmore, and just below the Earl of Suffolk and Berkshire and Earl Spencer.

The armorial bearings of the House of Caithness show a shield, with quarterings for Orkney, Caithness and Sinclair, supported by two griffins, beaked and armed, with a cock as a crest, and the motto, "Commit thy work to God."

Besides the successor to the title, the dead Earl leaves two brothers and four sisters. One brother, Charles Augustus, is rector of Hempsted, Gloucester; the other, George Arthur, is connected with the legal department of the Board of Trade and resides at No. 21 Sunderland terrace, Westbourne Garden, London. The sisters are the Ladies Margaret Helen, Meredith Isabel, Euphemia Wilhelmina and Mary Jessie.

PEOPLE THROTTLED BY PRIMARY LAW.

August Election Costing More Than All Voting Two Years Ago.

Expense Piles Up as Benefits Simmer Away Under "Reform" Measure that Confounds Public—Complicated Work of Putting Machinery in Action—Printing Bill Bigger Than Ever.

THE primary election of August 25, at which nearly 700 candidates will be voted for in Los Angeles county, will cost more than all the elections and election expense of 1912. In that year Los Angeles county spent $115,000. To place the balloting machinery in running order and to maintain it until the product is ground out this year, a fortune will be spent in Los Angeles county from the taxes paid by the people. The direct primary law will be found an expensive toy.

The vote, which starts with registration, progresses through a labyrinth of petitions, and winds up on the register at the polling place, will cost more to handle under the new system than ever before in the history of the State. The voter will be confronted with the longest ballot in history. It will be nearly three feet long, with hundreds of names that are neither known nor acceptable.

There are sixty-seven political subdivisions in Los Angeles county. That means there will be sixty-seven varieties of ballots in this county, for no two will be alike. A voter looking over his ballot in Assembly District Sixty-one, for instance, may step over into Number Sixty-two and peruse a sample ballot that is considerably different. And so on.

The nightmare system of rotation is to be followed in each Assembly district. In the first the names of candidates are run in alphabetical order, but in each succeeding district the top name is dropped to the bottom and the second name lands at the top. This is true of every candidate in every district in the county.

It will cost Los Angeles county a mere $5000 or so to print the 330,000 official ballots that will be sent to the polling places and the 330,000 sample ballots that will be distributed.

It will cost about $80,000 for election officers in the 763 voting precincts of the county.

An item of $8000 will be spent in this county for postage at the coming general election. An illustration of the tremendous election expense is shown by the one statement of the Secretary of State that the full text of all the constitutional amendments, referendum and initiative measures and the bonding act will be mailed to every voter in the State. The mailing will cost 4 cents for each printed summary of the fifty or sixty measures to be voted upon at the general election. There are more than 1,100,000 registered voters in California, or

VOTERS NEED BIG BRAIN ON INDEX TO BALLOT.

NOW is needed a genius to tell one how to vote. When you get in one of those booths, with a sheet of paper a yard long and half as wide before you; when you scan a maze of fine print and intersecting lines, and have a legal maximum of three minutes in which to decorate it with an assortment of marks that will represent your free elector's choice, what're you going to do?

If you're a student by nature and training, you may figure out the sample ballot by increasing your light bills and burning the midnight juice. If you have a good memory, you may recall something about it when you get inside the booth. But if you are not mentally endowed, you're up against it. Something, besides a ballot and your elector's choice, is needed. But what?

Why not a card index for voters? Some persons might be able to get a fe wmarks down in three minutes, thereby.

Or public classes of instruction? One could get a liberal education in learning the ballot.

Or physical culture classes? Great dexterity with the forearm and hand that will wield the pen would be invaluable in the hour of need.

Some student has a great opportunity. A careful voter's guide, a key to the puzzle, might net a fortune.

More booths would help. Why not have enough so that every voter might take the day off, tackle the job seriously, and in the course of a few hours know something about what was being done?

But, until some genius comes forward, you're up against it!

Direct Primary Law Costs More Than It's Worth and Produces No

WIN POSITIONS VIA FREAK LAW.

Santa Ana Candidates Are Elected at the Primary.

No Independents Allowed to Seek Office.

Tax Collector and Surveyor in Without Fight.

By a freak provision of the new primary law, three Orange county officials are congratulating themselves. They are as good as re-elected. J. C. Joplin has only a Socialist against him for County Treasurer, while Tax Collector J. C. Lamb and Surveyor J. L. McBride have not even a Socialist to go against them in the primaries on August 25. As the offices are non-partisan, no one will be allowed to run "independently" for them after the primary.

Joplin is "the old man of the Courthouse" in Santa Ana, and though a Democrat in a strong Republican county, he has been elected three times out of four times up, and on top of that, he has re-election for another time assured. He is the only county official, except Supervisor H. E. Smith, who has served over two terms. Lamb and McBride are Republicans. Lamb has been in office for seven and a half years, McBride three and a half.

In several of the smaller townships of Orange county, only one nomination appears for justice of the peace and one for constable.

The list of nominations in Orange county follows:

Assembly, Seventy-sixth District—Joe C. Burke, Republican; Edward A. Chaffee, Prohibition; Justin H. Stewart, Socialist; Hans V. Weisel, Progressive.

Judge of the Superior Court (Vote for two)—Lee A. Daniel, W. F. Heathman, W. H. Thomas, Z. B. West, R. Y. Williams.

County Clerk—B. Hoffmaster, Parke S. Roper, W. B. Williams.

Auditor—William C. Jerome, Cal D. Lester, Mrs. Minnie M. Wilson.

Assessor—A. E. Hawley, James Sleeper, Edward L. Vegely.

Coroner and Public Administrator—Dr. D. W. Hasson, A. C. Pritschau, Theodore A. Winbigler.

District Attorney—E. J. Marks, L. A. West.

Recorder—J. M. Backs, E. E. Duncanson, M. D., Justine Whitney.

Sheriff—Bruce Anson, C. E. Jackson, C. E. Ruddock, Howard A. Wassum.

Superintendent of Schools—R. P. Mitchell, Viola S. Norman.

Surveyor—J. L. McBride.

Tax Collector—J. C. Lamb.

Treasurer—J. C. Joplin, D. Edson Smith.

Supervisors, Second District—George W. Moore, T. B. Talbert, L. E. Van Winkle, John Winters; Fourth District—L. E. Smith, Fred W. Struck; Fifth District—J. P. Greeley, George Jeffrey, Jasper Leck.

REMOVAL COMPLETE.

Officers of Occidental College Occupy Quarters in New Buildings. Hope to Sell Old to City.

The removal of Occidental College to the Eagle Rock campus is now complete, the task having been finished yesterday. President Baer and Dean Burt are now occupying their offices in the new buildings. The library has been placed in Fowler Hall. A contract for $5000 worth of fixtures has been let for Science Hall, and it will take all the time between now and the opening of the college in September to get the building ready. The old buildings at Highland Park have been cleaned and closed, ready for delivery to the city, should they be purchased for High School purposes. The City Assessor has placed a valuation of $182,000 on the property, and it is offered to the city for $150,000.

PLAN "SUGAR WEEK."

Points of Superiority of the Beet Product Will Be Shown in Window Displays.

"Sugar week" might well be the name applied to the week beginning the 27th inst., during which period the allied sugar refineries of Southern California will make a concerted effort to increase the popularity of the product. Every grocer in the city is expected to make a fine window display of beet sugar or beet sugar products and to those who make the best, a large prize of sugar will be awarded. Several of the exhibits will portray the refining process, as far as possible, while others will prove that the beet sugar is not only as good, but even superior for canning purposes to the cane product, which sells for more than the beet sugar.

Primary Law Throttles

will be at the time of the general election. Figure it out.

COMPLICATION GROWS.

There are virtually six parties in the field in this campaign. They are Republican "Progressive," Democratic, Socialist and Prohibition. The non-partisan candidates are classed as belonging to one party for election purposes.

The presence of six political parties adds to the complication of the machinery and to the expense. The election supplies are greater in quantity, larger in size and more expensive than ever before. One item alone, that of sending twelve large envelopes into each voting precinct, one for the used and one for unused ballots, is an added expense. Since there are 763 voting precincts in Los Angeles county, this means nearly 10,000 of these large red-taped envelopes.

A recital might be carried on indefinitely.

In the matter of getting candidates before the people, the twelve candidates for Governor alone were required to gather about 50,000 signatures to their petitions. It is safe to say that over 1,000,000 signatures were attached to petitions of candidates and measures during the open season from June 16 to July 16.

Most of these signatures were obtained at an expense of 5 cents apiece. The candidates and those interested in measures had to pay it. Figure that out. Then deduct a reasonable percentage for volunteer signatures attached to petitions of well-known and much-desired candidates.

WHAT IT COSTS.

It is said that a candidate for Congress cannot make a complete canvass of his district, place his name on the ballot, and conduct a modest campaign for less than $5000. Most of the candidates spend twice or three times that amount.

Think of the cost to make a Statewide campaign for State office, with headquarters in Los Angeles and San Francisco, lesser stations elsewhere, a corps of paid workers for months, long trips, publicity, traveling expenses, and all the work and workmen necessary to get a candidate's name and what he stands for before every voter in the State in a primary campaign.

The high cost of voting, leaping higher with the addition of frenzied, fanatical ideas, is only a part of the story.

If peace of public mind is worth anything, it is worth while ridding the community of the pestilence that comes with our "new freedom." During the thirty days of nominative petition signing, the public was racked with constant attacks from petition peddlers. Candidates aspiring to dignified offices were compelled, under the primary law, to stoop to practices that would have ruined a candidate a few years ago.

The humiliation that comes to a conscientious public citizen through the political mendicancy that he must submit to is forcing a situation that will eventually find only two classes of men seeking to serve the public: Those who have money enough to buy office and time enough to play politics; those who merely want office, and whom the public does not want.

ALL IS UNNECESSARY.

The ways into which we have fallen are sad indeed. The luxurious grafting of ideas to the structure of our political machinery have proven not only impracticable, but unnecessarily expensive and unnecessary altogether.

A vote is an expensive commodity under the direct primary law. In the first place, an institution is maintained where that vote is placed upon record. To show the utter unfamiliarity of the "reformers" with the requirements of that institution, one need only to be told that the Registrar of Voters in Los Angeles county is allowed $13,000 to assemble the votes, segregate them, put them on record in the precincts in which their owners live, check all petitions and handle all the clerical work necessary to the primary and general elections.

This work will cost several times $13,000, but to have appropriated more would have been an admission that the new primary law, burdened with every conceivable "reform" notion, was more costly in its operation. The politicians who put it over in the last session of the Legislature hope that the people won't find out the actual cost until after the election, and then it will be too late for the discovery to injure any members of the clique that fathered the primary law.

BY FALSE PRETENSE.

A feature of the direct primary law that has met with Statewide criticism in this campaign is that which permits candidates of one party to seek nomination by other parties. Many candidates are running for three party nominations and some are running for more. The "Progressive" Legislature passed the law and it is mostly "Progressive" candidates who are taking advantage of it.

It is bad enough to be forced to submit to the present method of putting any candidate on the ballot, but when a candidate forces his name upon three ballots, the expense is trebled and the people have to stand for it. The votes that the candidate procures upon the three ballots at the primary are not accumulative. The only advantage to be gained is that if a candidate of one party also receives the nomination of other parties he may have his name appear on the general election ballot as the candidate of all parties from which he received indorsement at the primary.

The permission given candidates to seek votes under this false pretense makes the expense of checking greater, adds to the work in public offices and adds to the expense of printing the ballot.

PEOPLE PAY THE BILL.

Another idea which has been proved as one of the prominent weaknesses of the law is that which makes the general public pay for the gathering of the organization of the political parties. Heretofore, each political party arranged its organization at its own expense. Now the whole people must pay. The filing fee in case of committeemen, as in the case of other candidates, does not begin to pay the cost of checking the petitions of these candidates.

A complete set of supplies, a complete set of literature must be used at the primary election; another and entirely different set is used at the general election.

The direct primary law, so far as it has operated in the 1914 election, has proved a failure. It has demonstrated that it is more costly than the original law, far more costly than the old convention method of naming a ticket, and the only certain thing it proves is that the system is more complicated, the ballot more unintelligible, the voter more thickly confused, the public nuisance of election harder to bear.

It was devised in the interest of the "people"—to give them a chance of voting their choice. Then it turns right about and provides that candidates must hire verification deputies, to gather the names of voters. In no instance is the individual voter permitted to exercise his initiative. It is involuntary on his part, this voting business. He votes only for candidates who have money enough to buy a place on the ballot.

The story that will be told after the November election will contain a sad commentary upon the experiment with the primary law. Lumped together, the public expense with that of the individual candidates, the aggregate will mount far into the millions. Compared with the tremendous output of capital to corral and hogtie the elusive vote, the popular pastime of notifying a vast majority of the army of the would-be-employed that they are not wanted, will prove out of all proportion to the benefits derived.

VOTER CONFOUNDED.

One direful effect of it all is that the average citizen is so confused by the complicated disease known as the direct primary that he refuses to take more than a passive interest in the election. Instead of educating the voter to his responsibilities, to the unlimited power of his ballot, instead of making the selection of candidates simpler and more honest than the old method, the direct primary law confounds the average intelligent voter, attempts to blind him with a lot of promised privileges he doesn't get, and then soaks him in the midriff after it is all over by shoving a monstrous statement of "account rendered" under his nose.

Day and night, for several weeks there will be a large army of clerks working in this county to prepare the ballot, feed the engine of votes and prepare for the elimination contest next month. These same clerks have been working in night and day shifts to check the names of candidates who filed petitions, and that terrific task being completed, are now arranging the larger work.

Through it all runs a demand on the part of the great army of unrest that the Constitution be changed or thrown out and a new one substituted, that this, that, or the other amendment be tacked on, that the Legislature pass this law and do not pass that—and this uneasiness finds expression in the thousands of names attached to petitions—always at a nickel a name—that will burden the general election ballot. But that is another story.

The people will mark in November every candidate who supports the present direct primary law.

Waters conducted a winning campaign there.

Harold Bell Wright, the novelist, was sought by many Imperial Valley friends to enter the Congressional race against William Kettner in the Eleventh District, but he decided that the pen was mightier than the ballot, and besides, James C. Needham seems to be in fair shape to trim Congressman "Bill."

This is something else again. Under the primary law, according to the interpretation of Arthur Young, independent nominations may not be filed for non-partisan offices after the primary election. However, up to September 24, nominations for independent candidates may be filed for partisan offices, providing the candidates were not candidates at the primary.

Something to worry about: The petition panhandler of yesterday is now trying to earn an honest living.

THE WATCHMAN.

POLITICAL TIPS.

President Wilson is said to be tired and intending to take the Presidential yacht Mayflower for a brief trip that he may recoup his flagging energy. The members of Congress are also tired—tired of the long-drawn-out session, and tired of the President's dictation as to what measures must be enacted before he will permit an adjournment, but there is no yacht at the government's expense for them to utilize for a week-end recreation. The country is also tired, and it cannot go out to sea and forget the things that are being done and undone by the Democratic administration. All things come to an end some time, but in the present instance it is like waiting for the mountain stream to cease to flow.

How much interest the present administration has in the business prosperity of the United States is shown by the Navy Department. Secretary Daniels has for months been haggling over the price of bunting for flags, determined that the American manufacturers, paying American wages, must meet the prices quoted by foreign concerns, paying foreign wages. Now he has favored German manufacturers of kerosene engines for one of the lightships on the Atlantic Coast. The foreigner bid $6000, and a Massachusetts company bid $6250, while a New York company bid $7250. The German bidder got the order simply because the government can import articles free of duty. Anybody else than the government would have to pay $700 duty on the engines, which, added to the purchase price, would make them cost $6700. It was a good opportunity for the administration to emphasize its lack of respect for the principle of protection to the industries of this country, and true to its nature, it took it. Some German shipbuilder should bid for the building of the proposed new dreadnoughts and see what would happen.

Representative George J. Kindel of Colorado, elected as a Democrat, has issued a statement announcing that he has quit that party and that the present administration is one of incompetents. He has thus followed the example of Representative Kent of this State, but he really goes further than Kent, as he announces that he will hit a Democratic head wherever he sees one. First he is going into the Sixth Maryland District with lantern slides and various material in an effort to defeat the re-election of Representative David J. Lewis, who opposed Kindel's movement for a reduction of the parcel post rates. Then he is going to help Senator Bristow of Kansas fight the Democratic horde determined to defeat his re-election.

Mr. Bryan has a supporter in W. Morgan Shuster, the recent short-lived financial adviser of Persia, who says that Colombia should receive the $25,000,000 which the present administration proposes to pay as a salve for the wounds suffered by the separation of Panama. If Colombia gets this money, he says it will mean a billion dollars of business with the United States. Mr. Shuster should put out a schedule of his finding that the people may understand where the billion dollars comes from, as the foreign business of Colombia with the United States has amounted to only about $11,000,000 a year. There is a lot of hot air somewhere.

The Democratic revolt in Louisiana has stirred up things in Washington, as it promises the defeat of every representative except possibly two in the northern part of that State. It is said that if President Wilson were running for office today the Progressives would carry the State 2 to 1, and it is predicted that this will be the case in 1916 if Wilson is a candidate for re-election. The Democrats, however, are cheering themselves with the knowledge that the only important offices to be voted for this year will be for members of Congress. To save itself the administration has reopened the New Orleans navy yard and has spent $260,000 upon it, and is spending $350,000 in reconstruction of the New Orleans customhouse. The sum of $60,000 is also being spent in fitting up a demonstration farm to show the Louisiana people how the former sugar plantations can be converted into stock farms.

Charles Nagel, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor, says the Wilson administration is simply piling laws on the statute books, many of which are theoretically intended only for local conditions, but which practically touch interests far beyond their immediate jurisdiction. "The country needs," he says, "an affirmative, constructive policy, but is getting a theoretical one."

Gov. Glynn of New York went to a clam bake the other day and improved the opportunity to declare that the workmen's compensation law will do more to throttle Socialism in New York State than all the sermons that can be preached or all the editorials that can be written. His political creed, he says, "is to give everybody a chance to walk on his own legs."

Mayor James G. Harvey of Hazleton, Pa., is liable to be ousted from office because of an ante-election promise that he would vote for and support one John Fierro for the office of city treasurer as a recompense for Fierro's support during the campaign. As the promise is in writing, and it is against the laws of the State to make promises before election, it looks as if they had got him. Moreover he promptly appointed Fierro a city magistrate and designated him to preside in the police court, but dropped him immediately after a vote was taken at a religious meeting at which the question of Fierro's retention in office was raised, everybody voting in the negative. Fierro is now engineering the recall.

Secretary Lane of the Interior Department says that his duties in Washington must have the right of way over everything else, and no matter how much he wishes to go to Alaska to investigate the leasing of water power sites, he must stand by till what are known as the conservation bills are out of the way. These bills provide means whereby the resources of the West and North may be opened up and developed, instead of being tied up and allowed to waste. Mr. Lane, though not worth as much money as Mr. Bryan, can live on his salary and has a good deal of respect for the duties of his department.

Down in Macon, Ga., they evidently do not check up the voting list very often, as at a recent election in Bibb county 2000 voters cast ballots for a man who had been dead for ten years and elected him a member of the County Democratic Executive Committee. A relative of the dead man subsequently informed the officials of the mistake that had been made.

In England and Germany, where the diplomatic corps is under the civil service, it has been found necessary to determine in advance of the appointment of a new man to a diplomatic post whether or not he has sufficient revenue of his own to live upon regardless of his official salary. In England he must have a revenue of $2000 a year, and in Germany he cannot marry unless his wife brings him at least $2500 a year. Those countries pay less salaries to the lower officials in the diplomatic service than does the United States, in fact for the first two years abroad the young man in the diplomatic service of Great Britain gets no salary at all. By introducing such a custom Mr. Bryan might economize enough in the State Department to pay Colombia that $25,000,000.

Because:—

—this type of land under a great gravity irrigation system is not available at even twice the price in any other good farming section of the West.

—because a 100 per cent. farming and fruit land offering on the main line of a transcontinental railroad at away-below-market prices is quickly recognized as a mighty attractive investment in these "high cost of land" days.

—because Milford Valley has a rich, red, soft, loamy type of soil—an abundant, never failing water supply—the most healthful climate that the west offers—dependable markets—closely suburban to a modern, rapidly-growing city. And this land is being settled by a highly desirable, prosperous, intelligent class of people.

No matter where you've been located—in California's richest valleys or in the most fertile parts of the middle west or south, the money-making possibilities of Milford land, water and climate will open your eyes. The Milford Valley opportunity is limited—and every single acre will be taken before you realize it.

Our little parties of six to ten people go up on our low rate excursions twice a week and almost without a single exception every man purchases after being on the ground only a few hours. And the majority of the buyers have been well-to-do California ranchers with 20 to 30 years experience.

Arrange now to go and see land at $30 an acre that should be worth $200 to $300 an acre when in alfalfa—that will produce 500 to 600 bushels of potatoes to the acre—the same type of soil that in various parts of Utah today is netting up to $1000 an acre in fruit and celery. Go and see why shrewd Californians are buying and locating on this land. The land is sold on a cash basis. Water stock is sold at $70 per share with the privilege of twelve years' time to pay for it, and experts assert the yearly cost of maintaining this splendid gravity system should not exceed 30 cents per acre. Your crops should pay entire cost of land and water shares in two years. Write or call for illustrated booklet and testimonial letters. Special excursions at low home-seekers' rates.

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Chamber of Commerce yesterday filed a protest to the City Council against the proposed ordinance governing oil wells, holding that this would be a practical confiscation of property values.

New protests have been filed against the electric power rate resolution of the Board of Public Utilities, which has been approved by the City Council.

Both railway companies informed the Fire Commission yesterday of their willingness to aid in every possible way toward giving fire apparatus right of way through the streets.

Bonds for the improvement of Sunset boulevard from Main street to Marion avenue will be offered for sale at the City Treasurer's office tomorrow at 11 o'clock. A fund has been raised by property owners to purchase these bonds so that there may be no further delays in securing this improvement.

Portraits painted by the court painter to Louis XIV of France furnish a legal fight between an uncle and his niece for their rightful custody. The niece has had them for fifteen years, receiving them from her father. The uncle says he is the next in line and should have them.

At the City Hall.

CHAMBER FILES ITS PROTEST.

IT OBJECTS TO PROPOSED OIL WELLS LAW.

Says Ordinance Would Be Unjust to Persons Engaged in This Class of Business and City as Whole Would Not Benefit—Wells Becoming Exhausted.

L. M. Cole, president of the Chamber of Commerce, filed with the City Clerk yesterday a letter to the City Council in which the chamber makes protest against the provisions of the proposed ordinance relating to the drilling, operating and pumping of oil wells and the erection and maintenance of oil derricks in the city of Los Angeles.

The letter states that it is the unanimous opinion of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce that the proposed ordinance seems to be for the purpose of preventing the possibility of any further operation of oil wells, and in no way intended for the regulating of operation, with the exception of section 5.

"It is the further opinion of the board," says the protest, "that the passage of this ordinance would be unwarrantable confiscation of all values now existing in connection with these wells, and in view of the knowledge of the great importance of the oil industry in this city has had on its development, not only on the product itself, but the influence it has had in centralizing Los Angeles as the headquarters of the industry in the entire West, the board feels it would be unjust to persons engaged in this business and the city as a whole would not be benefited in any way by the confiscation of these property values.

"This seems especially true in view of the fact that the oil deposits within the city limits are gradually being exhausted, and it is only a matter of a few years until the derricks will be entirely removed without any action of this kind by the City Council.

"I am instructed by the board of directors to bring this matter to your attention, with the recommendation that said ordinance is opposed by the Chamber of Commerce."

HERE'S A TASK. MAKE HALL BEAUTIFUL.

Time has been when Los Angeles citizens pointed to their City Hall with pride, but that was many, many years ago. The old rookery is an object of chagrin these days, yet President Handley of the Board of Public Works, who is also custodian of the building, plucked up his courage yesterday and announced that he has determined to undertake the plan of making a "City Hall Beautiful" for the 1915 exposition year.

With no special appropriation for the task, it seems formidable, but Mr. Handley proposes at least to take off the rough edges. The main stairways in the corridor are to be rebuilt, the interior woodwork in the corridors, at least, is to be oiled and varnished, and the crazy-patchwork of asphaltum that has replaced the broken tiling from year to year is to be dug out. All the vari-colored flooring on the main-floor corridors is to be taken out and a plain block colored cement floor is to be laid, while the marble is to be used to repair the floor on the second-story corridors. Other changes are to be made to put the old pile in as presentable a condition as possible for 1915 visitors.

WILL SELL BONDS. FOR SUNSET BOULEVARD.

After years of effort it really looks as though the improvement of Sunset boulevard is to be completed. The bonds for the improvement of this boulevard from Main street to Marion avenue are to be offered for sale at the office of the City Treasurer at 11 o'clock tomorrow. Through the efforts of some of the property owners largely interested, arrangements have been made for the purchase of these bonds, so that unless some unforeseen hitch develops, the sale will be made tomorrow; the City Council will on Tuesday instruct the City Clerk to draw demands for the damage claims allowed, and the City Treasurer will notify the contractors to proceed with the work.

The awards of damages amount to $69,949.57. The contract for the improvement calls for $150,386. The contract was awarded nearly a year ago to the Barber Asphalt Company. The company is allowed 120 days after its start of work to complete the contract.

NEW PROTESTS. AGAINST POWER RATES.

New protests have been filed with the City Clerk, for presentation to the City Council, against the electric power rates fixed by the Board of Public Utilities' rate resolution No. 11, which demands, says the protest, a payment of 50 cents per kilowatt hour in addition to the regular charge for current used, in certain cases.

The protests, which are in printed form, thus indicating that an effort will be made to have many of them placed on file, allege that the provision cited will aid power companies to freeze out the small and isolated plant; that it is exorbitant and would cause many plants to be put out of commission, and that it fosters a "power trust" and kills competition.

The Council some time ago approved the board's rate resolution and the new schedule went into effect the first of July.

WILLING TO AID. FIREMEN'S RIGHT OF WAY.

The Fire Commission received yesterday notification from both the Pacific Electric Railway Company and the Los Angeles Railway Corporation that they are willing to do all within their power to give fire apparatus and firemen right of way in passage through the streets. The former company states it has issued orders bearing on this point to all of its employees to whom the situation would apply. Supt. Lewis of the Los Angeles Railway says in his statement to the board:

"We are glad to at all times be of any assistance to your department that lies within our power. Prompt discipline will be administered for any violation of the rule upon receipt of information regarding the same."

The Fire Chief recently notified the commission that there is a general disregard of the provisions giving fire apparatus right of way and that it has been only through rare good fortune that serious accidents have not occurred and human lives lost through the situation that has developed.

ABOUT THE HALL. MUNICIPAL ITEMS.

The Dayton Heights Improvement Association petitioned the Fire Commission yesterday to establish a chemical hose company in that district and provide such other means as are possible for better fire protection. The subject was referred to the Fire Chief for a report.

With the establishment of the new fire companies and increase of numbers in the old companies by the middle of August, the eligible list of firemen on file with the Civil Service Commission will be more than exhausted. The Fire Commission determined yesterday to ask the Civil Service Commission to call immediately new examinations for firemen.

The fire loss for the past week was $20,025, according to a report filed with the Fire Commission by acting Chief O'Donnell. There were sixty-eight alarms turned in, of which eleven were false. In fifteen cases there was no loss and there were twenty-two grass fires.

The Board of Public Works gave its approval yesterday to the recommendation of City Electrician Manahan as to the location of 118 new arc lights for street lighting in Boyle Heights and in the district lying west of Main street and north of First street. These are a portion of the 500 lights to be installed under the new contract with the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation and the Pacific Light and Power Company.

An anonymous protestant, evidently a woman, has filed with the City Clerk an appeal to the City Council and the Park Commission for the prohibition of smoking by men when seated on park benches. The protestant says she cannot sit in Central Park without having vile tobacco smoke puffed into her face, so there.

So great has been the demand for the Harbor Commissioner's illustrated book, "The Port of Los Angeles," that the entire edition of 3000 copies has been exhausted. This book, which was compiled by C. H. Matson, secretary of the commission, contains a vast array of statistics and pertinent facts concerning the harbor of Los Angeles and tributary territory. It has been placed in the hands of 147 foreign consuls and before practically every owner or operator of steamship lines in Europe and America.

OLD HEIRLOOMS IN LITIGATION.

MEMBERS OF FRENCH FAMILY IN FIGHT FOR PAINTINGS.

Legal Contest Begun Several Years Ago in St. Louis Renewed Here in Superior Court—Uncle and Niece Lay Claim to Portraits of Distinguished Ancestors.

Photographic copies of seven oil paintings of the ancestors of the Benoist family, said to be the work of a court painter in the time of Louis XIV, were exhibited yesterday in the litigation between Conde L. Benoist and his niece, Eugenia Benoist, for recovery of the heirlooms. The case was submitted on briefs for a decision on Wednesday.

Judge Cabaniss, who tried the case, intimated that the trustee under an agreement had given the portraits to the defendant, believing that he had a right to do so and that the defendant had received them believing she was entitled to them. Her uncle, however, contended that they are his property as the next of heir, under the agreement.

An interesting fight was precipitated in St. Louis in 1910 over these heirlooms, and at that time it was predicted it would be renewed when Sanguinette Benoist, the father of the defendant in the present action, died. He passed away several years ago.

Conde L. Benoist values the painting at $4000. They are life-sized, and portray ancestors of the Benoists in France. Charles S. Benoist, the nephew of Conde, and a cousin of Eugenia Benoist, represents the latter

TAKE NOTICE, SAM!

The attention of Samuel Gompers is invited to the fact that the income of the General Federation of Trade Unions in Great Britain was $325,440 for the fiscal year ending June 30 inst. Cannot the cockney anarchist manage to get his fins into the British Trade Union treasury and add another brick block to his Chicago possessions?

PSYCHOLOGICAL.

Gen. Funston reports the better health of his army at Vera Cruz. The American soldiers and sailors are probably relieved because they see a chance of doing something or of coming home. Watchful waiting is great for Presidents, and grape juice sustains Secretaries of State, but it is mighty hard on an army suspended between the devil and the deep blue.

THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Mr. Bryan is out in a formal statement for woman suffrage. Perhaps he imagines that a President who smashed the Democratic platform with respect to Panama Canal tolls will yet keep the faith with regard to the single term. In that event the Secretary of State has no means of knowing where the lightning may strike during the next Democratic convention, and he desires to be prepared for the worst. Those who expect much are sometimes greatly disappointed.

EAST AND WEST.

Much of South America lies east of Boston. All of North America lies west of Boston. If an aviator were to fly due north from Boston he would skirt the western coast of Greenland. If he should fly due south he would come almost within sight of Valparaiso. Reno is about 150 miles and San Francisco about 300 miles west of Los Angeles. All of Oregon and Washington are west of us, and Salt Lake about 200 miles east of us. If we sailed due south from here we would, when opposite Panama, be about 2000 miles west of that city, and when we entered the Tropic of Capricorn we would be about 3000 miles west of Chile, about 1800 miles east of Otaheite and equidistant between South America and Australia.

SUBMARINE DREADNOUGHTS.

As soon as one inventor perfected a gun and an explosive which would hurl a projectile that would rend a hole in any armorplate, another inventor developed an armorplate that would resist the impact of any projectile, until the old puzzle of the schools as to the effect of an irresistible force meeting an invincible substance has become an obsolete topic of discussion even in country debating societies.

Aeroplanes that would hover above a dreadnought and drop bombs that would send her to the bottom of the sea, if they hit her, are now to be guarded against by making new dreadnoughts that will be submarines as well, and can journey with comfort and at a fair rate of speed hundreds of feet below the surface of the ocean.

Indeed, it may come about that all ocean steamers will be constructed as submarines so that when a tempest rages the ship can quietly drop below the stormy surface and pursue her journey without a roll or a pitch.

WHEAT AND CORN.

The bumper crop of wheat this year in the United States has resulted in wheat being 10 cents per bushel cheaper than corn in Southern Illinois and 30 cents per bushel cheaper in Central and Western Kansas.

The wheat commands a good price, for European crops are off 100,000,000 to 150,000,000 bushels, and in Argentina and India the crop is 100,000,000 short in exportable surplus. The 900,000,000 bushel bumper crop in the United States will enable us to export 225,000,000 bushels of wheat this year or 100,000,000 bushels more than last year. In Asiatic Russia the new wheat is held for storage both as a military and an economic precaution.

France, says the Boston Monitor, experienced losses in wheat, but they will not have effect on the international market because the French government will retain the duty of 36 cents until native wheats are nearly exhausted and then it will let in only enough to make up the deficiency. France's tariff is the most practical in the world.

SIXTY MILLIONS INCOME WIPED OUT.

Information compiled by the Wall Street Journal shows that since January 1, 1913, forty-five industrial corporations and twelve railroads passed dividends and eighteen industrial corporations and two railroads reduced them.

The total consequent loss to holders of railroad shares is $25,111,309, which is 3.8 per cent. on the $667,408,563 stock affected. The loss to industrial shareholders is $34,535,111, which is 6.5 per cent. on the $525,382,200 stock capitalization that has been made, under the policies at present prevailing at Washington, wholly or partly dividendless.

The aggregate of the capital that has become non-productive to investors is a little less than $1,200,000,000. The aggregate loss of income is a little less than $60,000,000.

These figures should help to explain why the income tax failed to yield the revenue which government calculators had estimated.

MEXICO—THE COMING NEW NATION.

President Wilson has had his way. Victoriano Huerta, late President of Mexico, is seeking asylum under a foreign flag.

Wilson's Mexican policy has cost the United States millions of dollars, the lives of hundreds of American citizens, besides the lives of the gallant young American sailors and marines who died at Vera Cruz in obedience to the call of duty. The United States has gained nothing by the officious intermeddling of President Wilson in Mexico—nothing whatever.

Of ex-President Huerta it may be truthfully said that nothing in his official life became him like the leaving of it. He retired with dignity and carrying with him the respect of all impartial people and the regard of those by whom he was surrounded. He fought as long as it was possible to fight and then he acquiesced in the inevitable in order to avoid a further sacrifice of the blood of his countrymen.

Impartial history will lay at the door of President Wilson the sacrifices of blood and treasure, the breaking up of industries and the general demoralization with which the unfortunate southern republic has been visited during the latter portion of a sorry period of nearly four years of devastating war. If the United States, or, to speak more accurately, President Wilson, had been content to follow the example of the nations of Europe and recognize Huerta as President de facto of Mexico, in accordance with international law and usage, and regardless of the methods by which the Presidency was obtained, and if President Wilson had further abstained from his active and successful efforts to prevent Huerta from obtaining money with which to conduct a campaign against Carranza and Villa, and if, above all, he had, under his oath, enforced the neutrality laws of the United States and continued the embargo against the shipment of arms into Mexico through Texas, instead of permitting the Constitutionalists to be supplied with guns and munitions of war, the rebellion against Huerta would have ended before it had assumed proportions of magnitude.

It may be possible, however, that the egotism and obstinacy of Wilson will have an outcome beneficial to Mexico; but that outcome cannot be safely assumed in advance.

"God works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." The resignation and exodus of Huerta and his appointment of a successor who will turn over the government unconditionally to Carranza may relieve the people of the City of Mexico from the horrors of a siege which could only have ended in a holocaust of pillage, rapine and bloodshed; but the world must wait to see the actual outcome.

The Constitutionalists will now enter into possession of the government of Mexico, with full power to change its constitution, make its laws and fashion its domestic and foreign policies. Carranza and Villa avow it to be their purpose to enact laws that will put an end to peonage and land monopoly, and provide for the distribution of great landed estates in small holdings among the toilers. Whether they will succeed in accomplishing this or not remains to be seen.

It was demonstrated in our own experience that it takes years of time and patient endeavor to educate a slave into a freeman, and to implant in him a desire to till as his own the acres he has cultivated as a bondman. The industrial and political reconstruction of Mexico will be watched with deep interest in the United States, and will be accompanied with the sympathy, good wishes and assistance of the people of this country. The Times honestly regretted the action of President Wilson in refusing to recognize Gen. Huerta as President de facto of Mexico, for it believed then, and still believes, that such would have been the simplest solution of the problem that was presented. The Times favored not armed intervention, if it could be avoided, but co-operative, benevolent mediation by the powers of Europe and the United States. The Times welcomed the mediation offered by Brazil, Chile and the Argentine, and was glad that our State Department accepted cheerfully the decision against the United States which the mediators rendered. The Times hoped that Carranza would have consented that the mediators should extend their powers and duties so as to determine all questions at issue between Huerta and himself. But it was perhaps too much to expect that the victors would forego a result that had been accomplished by the arbitrament of arms, and resubmit the issue to adjustment by peaceful arbitration.

The Times gives voice to a wide and sincere sentiment among the American people when it hopes that the new President, Carranza, will succeed, on right lines, in discharging the duties on which he is about to enter. He has a difficult task before him; and if God sends him the wisdom and patience to accomplish the restoration of his country and bring her to her rightful place as second of the nations of America, he will win the plaudits of a watching world.

But there is still before Mexico and the nations a period of waiting.

THE STOCKTON SITUATION.

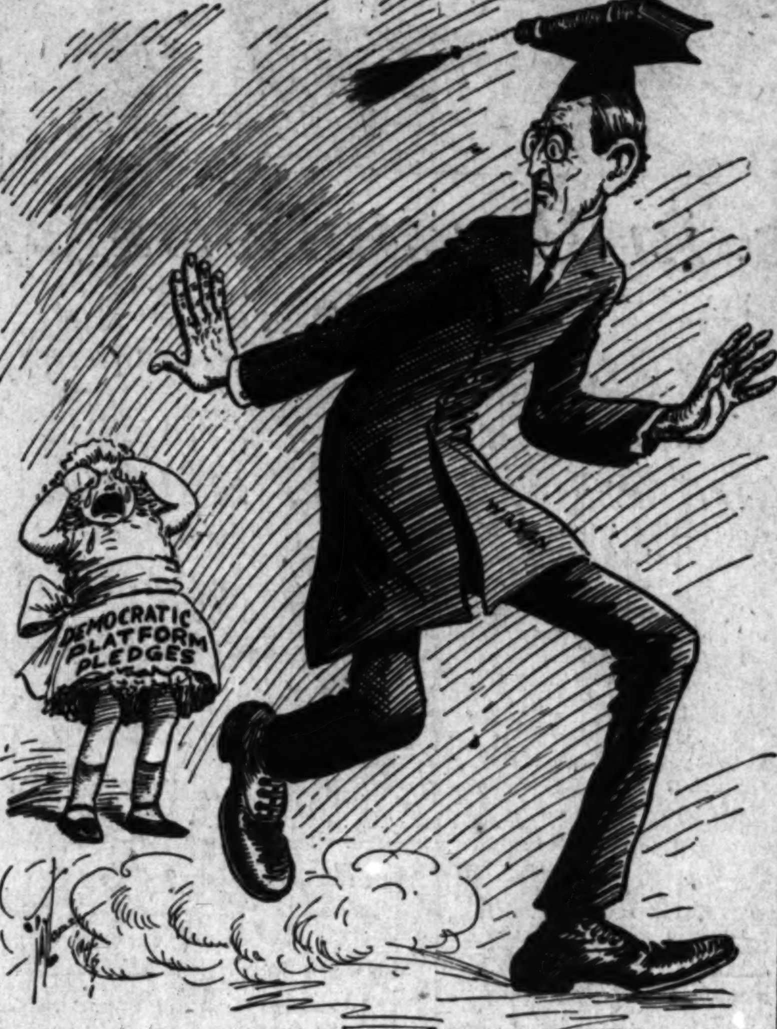
The business men of Stockton are making a winning fight for open-shop conditions, and full presentation of the situation may be found in Part VI of this issue of The Times.

For almost fifteen years Stockton has been known as the "strongest union city west of the Mississippi." With the exception of a few of the industries, all of the businesses were thoroughly unionized, and the picket and boycott were used to intimidate those who did not abide by the rules and regulations laid down by the walking delegates.

The business men found that the efficiency of their help not only decreased under the union system, but that the city did not grow and develop as its natural resources and transportation facilities, unparalleled in the interior of California, warranted. Merchants and manufacturers, looking for new locations, were not attracted to the "strongest union city in the West."

Stockton is the county seat of San Joaquin county and the metropolis of the grape belt. It is surrounded by rich territory, and is not equalled by any place on earth in the production of vegetables, such as asparagus, beans, potatoes. Since the early mining days it has been the gateway to the mining counties, where, of recent years, apple orchards have developed that produce a fruit equal, if not superior, to the famed fruit of Oregon and Washington. Stockton is the only interior city in California with three transcontinental railroad lines passing through it, and in addition it has a navigable channel running to the ocean.

Abandoned.



But in spite of those opportunities, and scores of others, it has been tardy in growth. The business men, and many of their employees, long ago came to the realization that such prosperity as that justified by the resources and location of Stockton was impossible as long as the city was union-controlled.

For that reason the Merchants, Manufacturers and Employers Association was formed and the open-shop declared on July 8. Since that day many of the union employees have quit and remained out of work; some of them have continued at work and voluntarily relinquished their cards, and practically no difficulty has been experienced to find open-shop workmen to take the places of the strikers.

The people of Stockton are not making a fight against the unions, but are making a fight for open-shop conditions. They acknowledge the right to organize to the unions, but claim that the same right is possessed by the employers.

The trouble was that union agitators practically dictated to all of the employers in Stockton They incited the employees to a rebellious attitude toward those employers who were trying to preserve harmonious and agreeable relations with their help. The situation became unendurable when the union agitators attempted to ruin the large industries of Stockton—one a flour mill and the other the leading hotel—by the boycott and picket, and it was obvious to all, excepting the union "business agents," that both the hotel and the flour-mill management were in the right.

Since the open shop was declared professional union strike promoters, some of them unfavorably known in many quarters where violence has attended their presence, have been rushed to Stockton. Help has been enlisted from the McCarthy-Tveitmoe crowd at San Francisco, and the attitude of the union leaders has been such that the owner of the official union paper had voluntarily relinquished the union indorsements of his paper. On the floor at a union meeting he declared that he could not approve of the attitude and methods of the so-called union leaders.

The Merchants, Manufacturers and Employers Association of Stockton has approximately 350 members, and they are united in the affirmation that never again will they submit to the absolute union dominance. They know that the loss they may sustain in business by having the unions make war against them will not be any greater than was their loss when the unions controlled all phases of industry, deliberately lowered the standard of efficiency among the employed, and continually made trouble between the employees and the employers. Additionally, as American citizens they propose to exercise their right to enjoy the independence and liberty accorded them by the national Constitution.

AFTER HUERTA, WHAT?

Secretary of State Bryan, the professional optimist, sees a subdued, peaceful glow shimmering over war-grimed Mexico; sees all the lions and lambs and jackals at last lying down in one peaceful family, lulled to rest by the cooing of innumerable peace doves. Would indeed the vision were true! But neither watching nor waiting nor wishing nor dreaming can halt the procession of events, nor stultify the law of cause and effect.

The gentle shepherd of the Democratic fold is feeling pleased with himself, with the world in general and with the improved prospects for future vaudeville engagements. Why not? The one and only object of eighteen months of Wilsonian foreign policy, backed by the prestige and power of the whole United States, has at last succeeded. Victoriano Huerta has been forced from his insecure seat in the Presidential chair of the Mexican republic; chiefly, not by the persuasion of Wilson, but by the armed forces of Gen. Villa. The price has been a heavy one, and the most rainbow-hued optimist hardly believes it has yet been paid in full.

After Huerta, what? How does the future of Mexico appear to those who stop, look, listen?

It may be the beginning of the end, but of an end no prophetic eye can more than dimly vision. Could the elimination of Huerta really reconcile all the Mexican factions, bringing them to accept an honest constitutional government, then the protracted period of watchful waiting, in spite of the heavy cost and added animosities it has entailed, has not been entirely in vain. Will it do so?

Will Zapata be ready to disband his banditti and come into the fold—to be peacefully shot in front of a blank wall for the murders he has committed? Until Zapata has been settled with, there can be no rest in Southern Mexico. Will Villa consent to go back into the peon class, from which the fortunes of war raised him to high position? Will his troops, flushed with victory, give up all hope of further plunder, lest a minor chord intrude in Bryan's hymn of praise?

Will Carranza be willing or able to satisfy the foreign claims that have been piling up against the unfortunate republic? Should he refuse to pay the foreign loans contracted by Huerta, will the European powers calmly acquiesce in such refusal? Who will lay the ghost of Benton? And the large body of Huerta adherents still scattered about the country, will they not start secretly to foment trouble against any new-formed government? What of the thousands of others, driven to discontent by years of enforced idleness?

With an empty treasury, with a people split up into factions; with a number of ambitious leaders all looking for lucrative positions, with the country full of fighting men and empty of cash; with debts and damage claims piled up heaven-high, surely the joy-bells are as yet a little premature in ringing for a quiet, happy and contented Mexican republic.

The settlement of Ireland's troubles is a small matter compared with the pacification of Mexico. Yet the Irish question, though it has a strong and rich empire to handle it, is creating doubt and misapprehension in the hearts of all lovers of the children of Erin. How can any true lover of Mexico rejoice at the present chaotic conditions there, to be handled by a bankrupt and divided administration? But Bryan rejoices. Mexico has been "saved!" The wish may be father to the thought, but the thought must go farther than the wish to make the wish come true.

We all desire fervently to see the dawn of a happier day for distracted Mexico, brought to its present desolation chiefly by Wilson's supine policy of watchful waiting. We cannot help but wonder, too, at the present state of the Wilsonian conscience.

It revolted, horror-stricken, from the dictatorship of Huerta; yet it has actively aided the slaughters of Butcher Villa, and is perfectly willing to recognize and parley with the tiger-toothed Zapata. It could blaze indignantly at a questionable insult to the flag in Tampico, and calmly view the far worse insults to American men and women in every other part of Mexico. And by the by, what about the salute demanded—those twenty-one guns—for the non-giving of which this country was urged to make an unnecessary sacrifice? Consistency, thou art a jewel!

But will peace follow Huerta's disappearance and Carranza's coming upon the scene? Let us wait and see. The quick and eager assumption that the latest change in control at the Mexican capital and throughout the disrupted republic will necessarily bring peace and order is a baseless assumption. Nothing short of trial, test and time can determine the result, and those hasty people who are unreasonably counting upon the immediate restoration of peace, order, security to life and property and prosperous conditions in Mexico are deceiving themselves.

Now more than ever does Mexico and the watching nations of the world realize the tremendous misfortune, the colossal blunder which occurred when that veteran soldier and long-time President, Porfirio Diaz, was driven from his country by revolution and sent into foreign exile!

THE CANDIDATE.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

Who at his party points with pride?
Whose principles are cut and dried?
Who has a pachydermous hide?
The candidate.

Who views the rivals with alarm?
Who does his country good—and harm?
Who prates about the forge and farm?
The candidate.

Who seeks his promises to shirk?
Who hates the very sight of work?
Who has the morals of a Turk?
The candidate.

Without knocking anybody in particular it may be said that candidates are so numerous that they are due for a few jolts both before and after election. A shock-absorber should be a part of the equipment of every man running for office.

When we were in our pinfeather days we rather fancied that the words "candid" and "candidate" were grown from the same root, and that candidates were so called because they were necessarily candid—the plain, blunt men we love to read about.

But not so. I guess it was "candied" we meant. They took away his "e's" but didn't knock out his "i."

Running for office is sometimes taken up for exercise or recreation, but it often becomes a life profession in which the only days that count are election days. Some of the nobbiest names in the nation's story-book are those of men who have had their feet in the trough for practically all their natural lives. Unfortunately they chanced to be elected to the first office to which they aspired and they have since become unfit for any other than the public service—and sometimes not rightly qualified for that. Yet they never let go of one job until they have a brakeman's grip on another.

The difference between appointive and elective places is usually indicated by the behavior of the man on the job. When he is at the mercy of his fellow-voters he is as pliable and pleasant as an old boot, but if he is appointed, or is under the protecting mantle of the civil service he is likely to be both crusty and chesty.

The habits and methods of the candidate have changed materially in recent years. He doesn't keep up with the fashions. That isn't safe. But he manages to trail along a little behind. In pioneer days the candidate found it convenient to happen in about the time the bell rang for the noon meal. He would offer to chip in two bits for fodder for himself and horse. He would jolly the housewife and the kids and would tell funny stories to the hands. Maybe he would help a bit on the haying—he had to be something of a farmer. If he traveled on foot or horseback so much the better—he wasn't one of them lazy, stuck-up fellows that had to be wheeled around. The first man who campaigned in a gasoline gondola was beaten so badly that he was never heard of afterward.

One of the most successful campaigners we ever knew was a bicycle pioneer. He would go through the country on his wheel as a candidate for judge, but when he came to a farmhouse he would hide his wheel alongside the road and approach on foot. Judge Pussyfoot got a reputation for covering more ground than Edward Payson Weston. He was not a good fellow and had few friends, but the way he would sneak under the wire when the votes were counted was a wonder.

Nowadays if a candidate doesn't use a choo-choo chariot he is apt to be in the discard. Nothing is too speedy for the campaigner, or to bear the voter to the polls. If a suburbanite sees a flock of airships nestling on his ranch he will know that he is being visited by a group of enterprising politicians who want to borrow his monkey-wrench and franchise. On the boulevards they will be coming at us on roller skates, after the French fashion, although there are some things at which we draw the line. If a fat justice came wobbling up to our place on the rollers he would lose our vote so quick he would feel lonely.

Most candidates, for selfish reasons, stick mighty tight to their party. Being regular is their religion. But there are some who can't get along with just one party and to this circumstance we owe the existence of the Bull Moose brotherhood. Take Frankie Heney, for instance. He can't stay in any party very long. If he does he swells up and busts it. He is one of our busiest little Heney men, but not much else. He would rather be a burr on the tail of his party than to dwell in the tents of Israel. He is the human dill pickle with all its warts and acid. Most candidates are afraid to say what they think, but Heney can't think what he says.

We once had a friend who was running for Congress at the time the silver question was first nosing its way into politics. He didn't know any more about it than a pollywog does about pinochle. Nobody knew exactly how the rural vote would line up on the proposition and it behooved egg-carriers to be circumspect. When our friend was asked how he stood on the question he bravely replied that he was in favor of plenty of money for everybody!

On the sunny platform he was triumphantly elected, although if he had said that he wanted good money for good people he would probably have been beaten to a frazzle—as our distinguished Brazilian explorer would put it.

QUEER JUSTICE.

WALT MASON IN THE TIMES.

When Bully Boozer beats his wife, we put him in a cell; and there he leads a pleasant life, and likes it passing well. We fill his plate with wholesome fare, when sounds the dinner gong, and see that while he lingers there his life's a grand sweet song. We hand him magazines and books, and papers day by day, so he can loaf in cosy nooks, and read the hours away. Sweet women call and hand him tracts, and cheer him up so well that he forgets the ugly facts which put him in his cell. Meanwhile his wife, with blackened eye, is toiling o'er a tub; she has to toil, with sob and sigh, to get the children grub. Her husband, sentenced by the court, earns money when he's free, and, though he is a yellow sport, he feeds his family. Because he filled himself with ale, and started household strife, we lock him in our cosy jail, and punish kids and wife. He has the rest he's long desired, with time to read and sleep, the while the woman, sick and tired, must work and watch and weep. Thus flows our justice in a rill—the kind we keep on tap; the innocent must pay the bill, while sinners have a snap.

I first told my friends of our plans they did not take me seriously," Miss Jones said yesterday at the Lankershim, where she is a guest. "But we are very much in earnest about the 'at sea wedding.'

"When Mr. Bush and I became engaged I insisted that we should be married in the beautiful land of Southern California. I and my parents have visited here frequently and it always has impressed me as being an ideal place to begin a happy married life.

"After we had decided to be wedded in the land of sunshine and flowers and reflected that our relatives and friends would be at considerable expense in coming here to witness the ceremony, it appeared that we were duty bound to furnish them with something unique in the way of a wedding. We thought it over carefully and decided to be married out at sea.

"According to our arrangements the wedding fleet will leave the bay at Santa Monica in the middle of the afternoon. Of course, we do not know the exact place where we will be married, but it will be about ten miles out from shore. 'A number of unique features have been planned which will be known only to the members of the sea-going party."

Ida Hancock Ross Estate Seeks to Have Near a Million Cut from Assessed Valuation.

Another controversy over the value of the estate of the late Mrs. Ida Hancock Ross came yesterday when Attorney Stevens, representing the estate, appeared before the Board of Supervisors, sitting as a Board of Equalization, and asked that the assessment valuation of $2,901,000 placed on the property be reduced $800,000. The matter was taken under advisement.

The estate was valued at $3,350,000 by Judge Rives after a long fight before him over the question of the inheritance tax due the State. Attorneys for the State tried to show it worth $8,000,000.

The principal item in the estate is the famous Rancho La Brea, adjacent to Wilshire boulevard.

GREAT TEMPLE TO EPICURUS.

Southern Pacific Completes Large Commissary.

Year's Supplies Cost Half-Million Dollars.

Experts Concoct the Sauces and the Soups.

A temple to Epicurus has been erected by the Southern Pacific. It stands two blocks south of the Arcade Station and was completed last week at a cost of $100,000. Officially it is known as the "Commissary Depot, Southern District."

From this depot will come everything used on the dining and cafe cars operating over the Southern Pacific between this city and New Orleans, barring perishables and emergency orders. For instance, a humidor, with a capacity for 40,000 cigars, is a feature of the depot. This humidor measures 10x4 feet, and is perhaps the largest in the city.

Last year, the commissary depot here sent out approximately $500,000 in supplies. The new depot is expected to have an even greater range of usefulness, as its capacity is double that of the old. It consists of a one-story brick building, with wings of two stories in height, and is entirely surrounded by covered platforms.

In the rear are five tracks. On these the dining cars, returning at the end of each round trip, are cleaned, scrubbed, scoured and given all those refinements of attention in the sanitary line which the careful housewife lavishes on her kitchen. Water, steam and compressed air are used in giving the cars their baths, and, lest any dust escape, vacuum cleaners are also used.

It is entirely probable that the average passenger, walking from his Pullman to the diner, gives but little thought to the work of a railroad dining-car department. He perhaps notes that the linen is spotless, the food up to the standard of the best hotels. A peep into the new commissary depot would enlighten him as to the causes which produce these results. Take the kitchen, for instance. It is 20x20 feet in dimensions, and is equipped with big ranges, ice boxes, and a great soup-stock kettle. Here Mons. Doriel, a chef of wide repute, mixes the sauces and superintends the constituting of those soups which will later go into the dining cars in sealed glass containers. M. Doriel also conducts a school of cooking, or rather, a school of sauce and soup-mixing, for his products have met with favor, and, consequently, have been standardized on the Southern Pacific.

Then there is a head pastry cook, for all the pies and pastry which go out of here on Southern Pacific diners come from the cook shops here. There is also a butcher shop, where all meats are cut and prepared for the diners. The grocery department is a regular commission house in miniature. Incidentally, the rule is that the hand shall never touch any of the stock and that it shall all be weighed. Below decks, way down deep in the vicinity of the refrigerators, is the wine room, stocked like the wine cellar of a big hotel.

Then there are linen rooms, which hold enough napkins, tablecloths, towels, etc., to supply nine dining cars and four observation cars. In the crockery and glassware departments are enough of these fragile articles to stock two hotels.

In the cellars one finds potatoes, celery, onions and vegetables by the carloads. An adjunct is a storeroom for porter's supplies, as brooms, brushes, rags, oil and lanterns.

CLANCY SHOWS BRAVADO.

Convict Unionite Boss Goes to San Quentin But Says He Does Not Expect to Stay Long.

Surrounded by a committee of labor-union walking delegates, Eugene Clancy, convict labor-union boss, made a braggadocio tour of Los Angeles day before yesterday afternoon on his way from Leavenworth Prison to San Quentin. Twenty-nine unionite sympathizers met him at the Arcade depot at 2:30 o'clock with several automobiles.

After meeting their convicted leader, the party drove through Elysian Park to Sunset boulevard, to La Brea, to Wilshire boulevard, to Seventh and Spring streets. They then went to a restaurant for drinks and luncheon and escorted Clancy to the depot at 6 o'clock.

Clancy told of his Leavenworth Prison experiences. He said he didn't know how he would like it at San Quentin, but declared that he didn't expect to stay there long with so many good friends working for him. One of Clancy's escorts suggested that the whole party go to San Quentin with Clancy "to show respect to the gates," but it was not acted upon.

Miss Mildred Ehlers paddling her own canoe.

She is a Cincinnati High School girl visiting friends in Los Angeles. Miss Ehlers has won medals paddling this canoe.

A Champion Girl.

PADDLES OWN CANOE ACROSS CONTINENT.

Paddling her own canoe, either literally or figuratively, comes easy to Miss Mildred Ehlers, a Woodward High School maid of Cincinnati, just 19 years of age, who arrived in Los Angeles yesterday.

Miss Ehlers has paddled her way to victory several times against brawny, sinewy-armed men in Y.M.C.A. regattas.

She has a silver cup, a blue ribbon and racing medals as proof of her skill. Thus Miss Ehlers enters a class all by herself in Cincinnati and probably in Los Angeles.

Although Miss Ehlers has been canoeing for five years, she has never left Cincinnati until this summer to seek laurels elsewhere. It was out at Tower Hill, on the Little Miami River, that she gained her knowledge of the sport. She is also a clever swimmer.

"Fear? I have none," she says. "When I was small I was afraid of water. When father opened the camp at Tower Hill he couldn't get me near the water. One day I realized how foolish I was and started. It wasn't long until I was swimming.

"It was three years later, however, before father got me a canoe. Soon I was paddling with the Y.M.C.A. boys, in camp near by.

"Three years ago I entered my first regatta. I won first prize. Next year I finished second. And last year I finished first again. I use the regular racing stroke and, of course, always kneel in the middle of the canoe.

"There isn't any better sport for a girl than swimming and canoeing. If a girl has $10 to spend, I would advise her to find two other girls, each having $10, and then buy canoes. They could have a vacation every Sunday that way."

Miss Ehlers is visiting relatives and will remain here until late fall.

CAPTAIN SUPERFLUOUS.

Head of Machine Gun Company Resigns and Lieutentant Will Command, Under Regulations.

Federal restrictions are to control Machine Gun Company, Seventh Regiment, N.G.C., according to the statement of Col. Schreiber, regimental commander, who says that in the regular army machine gun companies have no captains.

Lieutenants command such companies in time of peace, the commissary officer of each regiment taking command in time of war, under present regulations of the War Department.

These regulations also provide for the assignment of regular officers to the command of militia machine gun companies in war time, thus threatening with idleness all militia captains attached to them. As this system would not only throw out of the service the militia captains, but would also detach from the regular line as many, or more, badly-needed officers, further regulations governing the subject are understood to be under consideration by the department.

The resignation of Capt. F. W. Gollum, who organized the local company, will leave Lieut. Sterling Boothe in command as soon as the resignation is accepted, which status is likely to control indefinitely, unless the regulations are changed.

Sufferers from Consumption should take the trouble to investigate what Eckman's Alterative has accomplished in restoring others to health. Read this:—

Griffith, Lake Co., Ind.

"Gentlemen:—About Sept. 10th, 1908, my mother-in-law was taken sick with Catarrhal Pneumonia, which developed into Tuberculosis. In January, when Rev. Wm. Berg, of St. Michael's Church, at Schererville, Ind., prepared her for death, he recommended that I get Eckman's Alterative, and see if it would not give her some relief. The attending physician declared she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alterative, which she did. I am glad to say that she soon began to improve. Now she works as hard as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took sick and is in good health."

BRAVES HATRED TO SHOW MERCY.

Inyo Woman Helps Children and Dumb Brutes.

While Community's Hand Is Against Her.

Even With Life Threatened, Defies Enemies.

Mistreated children and abused horses in Inyo county have an ardent champion in Mrs. G. W. Maura, a handsome six-foot Diana, who manages a 300-acre ranch, swings an ax with masculine vigor, shoots with skill and fears not man or beast.

Mrs. Maura, who was a Los Angeles visitor yesterday, registered at the Westminster, frequently rides 100 miles or more to investigate the case of an abused child or dumb beast. For this work which she regards as her duty she receives neither pay nor commendation in the community.

So great is the hostility to the bold, kind-hearted woman in the region in which she lives that it is impossible for her to obtain from the county authorities sanction of her work and the necessary delegated authority to enable her to arrest an offender.

It is as a voluntary officer, working under the direction of the Pasadena Humane Society, that Mrs. Maura conducts her campaign in the desert and mountain regions.

Mrs. Maura came to California four years ago from Chicago. She is a graduate of Bryn Mawr College and has traveled extensively, visiting Europe five times. Her clear complexion, blonde hair, pleasing countenance and exceptional physical and moral strength make her a unique character.

The interest of Mrs. Maura in humane work dates from the time some years ago when her mother organized the Anti-Cruelty Society of Chicago. When Mrs. Maura settled on a ranch eight miles south of Bishop, three years ago, she formed the Owens Valley Humane Association.

The Supervisors of Inyo county indorsed her efforts and she was given a commission as a humane officer at a small salary. All was well until she charged one of the Supervisors with abusing his horse and took it upon herself to shoot the animal and put it out of its misery. This act caused her commission to be taken away from her and she was "fired." She had one month's salary due which the Supervisors offered to pay but which she refused to accept. Immediately, she resumed her efforts under the authority of the Pasadena organization.

Recently Mrs. Maura arrested a neighboring ranchman and accused him of abusing a herd of sixty-two horses. He was tried before a jury who were without exception, the officer charges, his friends, and acquitted.

"I have not been able to obtain a conviction yet," Mrs. Maura said at the Westminster. "They always manage to get their friends on the jury and are acquitted, but I will go on arresting offenders just the same in the hopes that some day the tide will turn.

"It appears that the whole country is against me. On every hand I see evidences of deep hatred. Even my life has been threatened. I carry a revolver a good deal of the time.

"When I recently arrested a ranchman who was permitting a whole herd of horses to perish for lack of food and water, it appeared that the whole country was aflame against me. In the trial, the attorney for the defendant told the jury that the men of the county were not yet ready to permit a woman to teach them how to manage their livestock. Many sarcastic things were said about me."

Mrs. Maura gives special attention to the pack animals used in the mountains. She declares that often the horses and mules which are used for carrying wood are terribly abused. Frequently she stops a man coming down the mountain and forces him to lighten the burdens of his beasts.

As an instance of the cruelty of some of the animal owners of the region, the humane officer tells a story of an abused horse and a heroic dog.

"One of the men who makes a business of dealing in wood abandoned an old horse in the mountains to die," Mrs. Maura related. "The animal had served faithfully for years and its back had bent under the heavy loads. As a final reward for service the man left the horse in a place where there was neither food nor water, expecting it to perish.

"The man's little dog was more humane than its master. He stayed with the old horse, barked at its heels and drove it all of the way home, a journey that required a day and a night. I heard of the case and shot the old horse. I bought the kind-hearted dog and have it now on my ranch.

"Once in a while my neighbors ask for my services, but not often. Not long ago I had a call to pull a drunken man out of a ditch and take him home. I responded heartily and was successful in the task.

"I have many pathetic cases in which children are abused. I traveled, in all, about 250 miles to investigate the case of a child which was abused by its parents. The boy, who was only 9 years old, was compelled to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning, chop wood, milk cows and do the heavy work of a man. His little back was almost broken. I put a stop to it."

Miss Virginia C. Woods,
A friend of the Earl of Caithness for the past year, who learned his true identity after his death.

Peer Simply Buried.

Evidently he was living there, or rather returning to his town house at intervals.

Pieced together from many sources, Mr. Sinclair, as the heir-presumptive to the earldom, came to this country thirty-nine years ago and located in Canada, where he was connected for years with the Bank of Montreal. As an uncle, Baron Pentland of Lyth, now British Governor of Madras, had come to Canada shortly before as secretary to the Governor-General of Canada, it is possible that Mr. Sinclair was urged to come.

About the time that he came into the title of Earl of Caithness, he was farming an enormous acreage in North Dakota, near Devil's Lake. A town known as Berriedale now stands on this acreage. One of the titles of Earl of Caithness is Lord Berriedale. Debrett's Peerage for 1902 gives Berriedale Farms, N. D., as one of the two residences of the Earl.

Ten years ago, the Earl of Caithness met Corridan H. Putnam in Chicago. "I knew at the time that Mr. Sinclair was the Earl of Caithness," said Mr. Putnam, when questioned yesterday.

UNUSUAL FRIENDSHIP.

This meeting developed an unusual friendship. Doubtless it was the reason that the Earl of Caithness came here to make his home, which he did three years ago. Two of these years he lived in modest apartments in the Hotel Balboa, an inveterate rambler on foot about the country and a deep reader. During all these years he maintained an office with Mr. Putnam, who is the head of a mining engineering company. From there he administered his charities, which were numerous, and, in keeping with the nature of the man, of the self-effacing kind.

A Herculean figure of a man, straight, with a long, strong face, white hair and beard, the Earl of Caithness was a true descendant of the hardy Norseman.

Often, with long, strong strides, he could be found roaming over the hills about Los Angeles. He was also a familiar figure about Westlake Park. At his hotel he passed for a pleasant, affable man; a man with money, but reticent about himself.

IN VINEYARD WRECK.

Voluntarily one of the people, his end was hastened by injuries sustained in the Pacific Electric wreck at Vineyard Junction, when he was returning to the city from the beach. One leg was injured; he also suffered from nervous shock, as he was seated directly behind one of the women who was killed. Finally, paralysis set in and he had to be removed to the Good Samaritan Hospital, where he died.

The next morning the following death notice appeared in The Times:

"SINCLAIR. In this city, May 30, John Sutherland Sinclair, aged 57 years."

The body was placed in a receiving vault, pending the arrival of the cousin from Scotland, and then buried, June 15, with the simple Episcopal ceremonies.

Once, in conversation with Mrs. Putnam, the Earl had said that he would like to be buried in Hollywood. So a plot was selected there, a sightly location under the pepper trees, with a long outlook to the sea and over the valley towards the Baldwin Hills and up to the mountains. The slab is simple, as simple as the life of the man; a simplicity which was carried out in the inscription, which is the same as that engraved on a silver plate which was affixed to the coffin in which the Earl of Caithness was buried.

KNOWN IN NEW YORK.

Unable to Disguise Signature He Sought Out-of-the-Way Hotels in Metropolis.

When the Earl first succeeded to his title and the English papers were consequently full of the succession, the appearance of the name, John Sutherland Sinclair on a hotel register in New York was certain to attract the attention of the newspaper men.

Finally, the Earl, when he paid a visit to New York, got to signing himself simply J. S. Sinclair. Even this wasn't a disguise, and on later visits he was careful to pick out an out-of-the-way hotel.

A GOOD REPUTATION.

A good reputation is a most valuable asset in the building business. Our customers emphatically recommend us, no matter whether the job is an apartment, store, garage, bungalow, residence or court. Southern California Home Builders, 410 West Sixth street.—[Advertisement.

FINDS A FRIEND IN DISGUISE.

GIRL LET INTO SECRET OF HIS IDENTITY ONLY AFTER DEATH.

Miss Virginia Carl Woods, formerly of Kaufman, Tex., found the true identity of the man who preferred to be known as John Sutherland Sinclair. They met a year ago through their mutual friends, Mr. and Mrs. Putnam.

Miss Woods wished to do newspaper work in Los Angeles, and Mr. Sinclair had a deep and abiding interest in the newspapers. He read all of them and saved them for Miss Woods. Often in the office of Mr. Putnam in the Trust and Savings building, the two would look over the papers and he would point out the articles that interested him and tell Miss Woods why they held his attention.

Of deep reading, widely traveled, and observing, the things that interested Mr. Sinclair, who was later to be revealed as the Earl of Caithness, were the things that would be pretty sure to attract the attention of the man in the street. Unconsciously, Miss Woods was getting some valuable education.

Little matters which Mr. Sinclair dropped in conversation early led Miss Woods to believe that he was a man with a history. But it was not until he was dead that the full inwardness of the secret was revealed to her by the Putnams, and then only because she had known the Earl as a friend.

Economic.

WAY TO BEAT SUGAR TRUST.

CALIFORNIANS HOLD ANSWER TO SWEET PROBLEM.

With Nectar-Producing Flowers Growing the Year Round, Bees Are Prolific and Bring Great Results—Annual Worth Three and a Half Million Dollars.

In California the shining hours are improved by $350,000 worth of bees which annually deliver approximately $3,500,000 worth of nectar to 130,000 swarms, and for this their owners receive 100 cents on the dollar, based upon the valuation of the swarms. Although bee culture is the means of obtaining for human use a natural product which is abundant and would otherwise go to waste, take the United States over, only about one farmer in nine keeps bees. Considering the beneficial work of this insect in cross-pollinating the flowers of various economic plants it is surprising that the number of swarms is not larger. Especially is this true when it is considered that the annual honey yield per colony for the entire country is about thirty pounds. The fruit grower has frequently been heard to make inquiry as to the number of colonies of bees required to fertilize an orchard. The question has never been answered quite satisfactorily, although a bee expert connected with the California agricultural station contends that one colony is sufficient to fertilize eighty acres of apple bloom; but this opinion is not generally shared, and another "authority" says he "believes ten colonies might pollenize a ten-acre orchard," but adds that probably fifty or 100 might be much better.

Those who have investigated the economic side of the honey bee question reached the conclusion that if only one family in twenty in the whole United States would keep but one swarm of bees, the wealth of the nation would be increased by $5,000,000 annually, and that by producing their own sweets, these families would be made independent of the sugar trust.

According to Luther Burbank, the horticultural wizard, it is a part of nature's scheme, in order to keep her kinds within the limits set, that she has in the case of plants made it a characteristic of the bee that it works on only one flower of a kind at a time.

Aside from the fruit blooms, California has many flowers all the time, and for that reason—aside from the fact that California is one vast fruit garden—this State is as yet an undeveloped bee pasture. Some flower is blooming during every month of the year, and few indeed are the blossoms that are void of nectar. Of the several hundred varieties of eucalyptus flourishing throughout the State, several kinds are blooming each month, and all of the eucalyptus have more or less value as bee pasture. It would be possible to select a group that will furnish bloom for the bees to work upon the year 'round. Although some of the species have been considered injurious to bees, those who have investigated the subject have never been able to find dead bees under the trees.

The loquat, under cultivation extensively in parts of Southern California, is reputed as being an excellent honey plant. The blooms of the date palm, which is cultivated extensively throughout the State, are visited profusely by bees. Wild buckwheat is the principal honey-producing plant in several southern counties. The pear ranks first as the best honey producer among deciduous fruits. The Himalayan blackberry is in high repute, secreting nectar at a time when other berries are on the wane and continuing well into the fall. Alfalfa enjoys the distinction of being the most reliable honey plant of the State. The lima bean enjoys a good reputation for yielding nectar. Orange blossoms yield heavy white honey of exquisite aroma and superb flavor. Warm weather often produces such unusual nectar secretion that it is impossible for the bees to gather it all. The poinsettia is much visited by bees and is listed as a honey plant. The castor bean is much favored by the bees, and accredited an excellent honey producer. The pepper tree is rated as a regular producer of an amber honey of strong flavor, and a considerable quantity of honey is extracted from the blossoms of the prickly pear.

WITH FRUIT AND FLOWERS.

Earl an Almost Daily Visitor to Two Persons Injured in Vineyard Junction Wreck.

Among the persons injured in the Vineyard Junction wreck were Mr. and Mrs. H. McCombs of this city, who are now making a tour of the world. They had long been friends of John Sutherland Sinclair and during the entire four months they lay sick in the Clara Barton Hospital he was an almost daily visitor. But neither of them knew—nor will they know until they see this article—that the white-haired man who brought them fruit and puzzles and flowers was the Earl of Caithness.

JOKE ON LONG WALKS.

Earl Laughs at Many Invitations to Ride During His Rambles—Finds Resting Place.

The Earl was a great lover of nature and liked to ramble all over the country, some days walking many miles.

One day last summer he walked from the city all through Laurel Canyon and then to Lankershim and Van Nuys, and was very much amused at the invitations he was given to ride. In nearly every auto that passed was some one who stopped and offered to let "the old man" ride, believing, no doubt, that he was walking from necessity. Each time he refused the invitation, saying that he'd rather walk. He considered this a great joke. It was on one of his walks that he selected the spot in which he chose to be buried in Hollywood Cemetery.

IN HOLYROOD ABBEY.

Ruined Royal Chapel Holds Remains of Many Heads of Distinguished House.

Many of the heads of the House of Caithness, including the sixteenth Earl, the father of the dead man, lie buried in the ruined Chapel Royal of Holyrood Abbey at Edinburgh. Here, in their lofty tombs on Arthur Seat, high above the old royal city of the Scots, their bones lie close to those of many of the old reigning House of Stewarts.

The burial of the Earls of Caithness in this chapel royal was an ancient hereditary custom, according to authorities on the families of Scotland. That the House of Caithness acquired this right gives more than a hint of the importance of the family in Scotland's history.

I TREAT NO DISEASES EXCEPT THOSE OF THE RECTUM AND BOWELS.

The Week.

HOLDOVERS AND VARIETY.

"Omar, the Tentmaker," to Stay Another Week.

"The Money Getters" Playing to Fine Houses.

New Bills in Vaudeville and Filmdom.

"Omar, the Tentmaker," probably the biggest spectacular drama brought to Los Angeles in several seasons, enters upon its second and last week at the Majestic Theater tonight. Originally booked for but a single week here, the management naturally expected very good business, since the work is one of the really big successes of recent years and received everywhere with enthusiastic acclaim. But even the natural optimism of Manager Montrose of the Majestic could hardly have prompted the prediction that people would actually be turned away at almost every performance at this time of the year. Such has been the case, however, and after the record-breaking matinee of Wednesday arrangements were made to extend the management.

Guy Bates Post as Omar, the roystering student, who loves passionately the dainty Shireen, but to lose her after that wonderful night beneath the stars "along the strip of herbage strown that just divides the desert from the sown" gives an impersonation never to be forgotten. In the following acts, showing the advancing years of the poet amid scenes that pulsate with life and dramatic action, Mr. Post reaches heights that proclaim him as one of the greatest actors of our time. His supporting company, evidently selected with great care and discrimination, could hardly be improved upon. There will be a popular Wednesday matinee in addition to the usual afternoon performance on Saturday.

Orpheum.

A typical hot-weather, dog-day, midsummer show is what the Orpheum is proffering for the week opening Monday matinee, a show without a real serious minute in it; nothing high-brow, but eight acts of fun and merriment.

The topliner itself is a farce—a real burlesque on a one-time serious phase of drama, now generally called "meller" drama in derision, and in this case a genuine term for it—"Wronged From the Start" is the name of the act, and Everett Shinn, expert in this line, is its author. Shinn has taken all the personages of the old-time thrillers and put them into his play, but so exaggerated their impossibilities that they are screamingly funny. There is the poor wronged (from the start) heroine, the "crool" father, the villain with his high hat and boots and his "night scenery," and there is the old mill, the rescue by the "boob" lover in the millrace, and all the rest that we used to see in the good old days. An expert company of former melodrama actors plays the thing; among them is Frank I. Frayne, familiar as a rube at the old Grand in the Ulrich stock days, who plays the boob lover in this.

Another feature act of the coming week is Dainty Marie, "who isn't what she seems to be." What she seems to be is an unsophisticated girl, who comes out in a simple gown and sings a simple little ditty. Then—presto! Something happens, but what, it would not be fair to say. But it may be added that Marie has a form to make Venus green with envy, and she isn't at all backward about letting you behold the charms of her person—that is, unless you call a thin silken union suit a disguise.

The Gardiner trio are that indispensable element of modern vaudeville, exponents of modern dancing. They have some new phases, the cowboy Texas Tommy being one. They are very clever. Henry Lewis offers a "Vaudeville Cocktail," the ingredients being chatter, patter and dance, and Doris Wilson and her two pretty sisters go "through the looking glass" with a bright little skit. Laddie Cliff, the sturdy Australian woodchoppers, and Rellow, are the only holdovers.

Empress.

One of the greatest lyric tenors in the United States or, for that matter, in the world, will be the headline attraction on the coming week's bill at the Empress Theater, beginning tomorrow afternoon with the regular matinee.

The headliner is none other than Frank Morrell, a California boy, who will be well remembered as one of the shining lights in that famous quartette, every one of whom has since made envious reputations, called "That Quartette." Morrell has a golden tenor voice that is said to be of great range and sweetness. It was he who introduced "That's How I Need You," a ballad that made a tremendous hit. For the past four months he has been singing at Rector's, New York, one of the most gorgeously-appointed restaurants in the country. This engagement marks the first appearance of Mr. Morrell over the Sullivan and Considine circuit.

As a special added attraction is the distinguished actor, John T. Doyle, and company, including Marion Willard, who offer the unusual playlet, "The Police Inspector's Surprise." Contrary to the underworld sketch, Mr. Doyle's vehicle in no way ridicules the police, but is a comedy brimful of humor.

Third on the new bill will be the welcome return of that unusual comedienne, Marie Stoddard. She brings with her a budget of brand new songs and comedy stories. Miss Stoddard created an unusually favorable impression with the Empress patrons on her last visit here by her grotesque poses and splendid comedy songs. She still retains her best effort, that of an imitation of "Sis Hopkins," a bit of caricature portrayal she did last year with howls of approval.

"Torrelli's Comedy Circus" is expected to provide its share of the fun on the coming week's bill, where it will be one of the big attractions. The act shows dogs, ponies, monkeys and a trained mule, who will do tricks that astound and comedy stunts that seem almost impossible. Bessie is an unridable mule, who knows a thing or two, as most men who attempt to ride her find out sooner or later.

Sheck, D'Arville and Dutton, a trio of a different order, offer an episode of theatrical life in "The Men Next Door," a novel comedy sketch, which is said to have met with much success so far along the circuit.

Pantages.

Agnes Mahr and Bronislaw Mieckowski bring their Russian ballet to Pantages next week in a repertoire of interpretative dances programmed as Memoirs of Russia. The ballet of Coppelia will be one of the features of the act. The programme also includes "Le Cygne," "Dance Pirate," "Pailillion," "Moment Musical" and "Rhapsodie Hongroise."

Mlle Mahr and M. Mieckowski are not unknown here, having been seen in Russian dances of the acrobatic type on previous occasions, but this is their first appearance in anything so pretentious as the present. Both are popular favorites with European audiences, which is the best test of an act of this class.

Daisy Harcourt returns. Miss Harcourt is singing coster songs and dancing coster dances, which is what we demand of this favorite London comedienne. But aside from this general description of her act there is no similarity between the present and past tours which she has made over the Pantages and other vaudeville circuits here. Miss Harcourt has a reputation for never doing the same thing twice, which is fully sustained in her new act.

"Davis?" is the programming of a novelty whose exact character has not been divulged by the Pantages management. The feature of surprise is cultivated to the limit, and upon this depends the success of the act. Manager Walker therefore refuses to make any announcement regarding what "Davis" is or does.

The Bell Trio of vocalists is also announced.

Mae Erwood and company appear in the roles of Willy Wise and Daisy Green, calling their comedy "That Girl." Salt Bush Bill, an Australian "whip-cracking" act, promises to be something out of the ordinary. The Pantagescope comedies continue, and the Pantages orchestra will furnish incidental entertainment.

Hippodrome.

An act, so startling and so pretentious that it has hitherto never been presented on an indoor stage, and which on account of stage limitations could be presented by no other theater in Los Angeles, will headline the new Hippodrome bill, beginning Monday afternoon.

It is Arabia, the most wonderful, as well as one of the largest horses in the world, with Essay Fay, in a big fire spectacle that has never been approached by anything excepting some of the wonderful fighting-the-flame scenes in the big movie spectacles. Arabia, by the way, is a graduate of the movies, having performed sensational stunts for both the Selig and Universal companies.

Arabia is almost human. He goes to bed, covers himself up, and in the climax of the big spectacle shows remarkable comprehension. His mistress locks him in the stable, then crosses to her cottage, and retires for the night, in full view of the audience.

The cottage takes fire and the flames creep toward the sleeping mother and her babe. The horse

A Plea.

Have pity, Oh world, on the little ones!
 Oh, World, with your cruel, uncaring heart!
So few are their joys 'neath youth's passing suns,
So swiftly the stream of youth's pleasure runs,
 So soon come life's shadows, life's arid part!

Have pity, Oh World, on the old and worn!
 Oh, World, with your busy, untiring brain!
For a long, long day they your ills have borne;
Alas, for dead love and dead hope they mourn!
 Have pity and spare them a further pain!

Oh, World, a usurious, unjust toll
 From manhood and womanhood you have wrung!
Have mercy now while youth's short hours roll!
Show some regard for the work worn soul!
 Be good to the aged, be good to the young!

THE LOVE OF WOMEN.

Three Plays That Suggest a Time to Come Out of the Storm—Two Vivid One-Act Pieces by Schnitzler and a Scene from "Omar, the Tentmaker," Discussed.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

"LEOCADIE, my love, my wife, all the past is over now. A great deal is blotted out on an occasion like this."

Henri has just married Leocadie, who he himself describes in his acting as "the fairest and vilest creature under the sun."

"What sort of an occasion?" the host at the tavern demands to know, and Henri answers:

"We are united now by a holy sacrament. That means more than any human oath. God is now watching over us and one ought to forget everything which has happened before. Leocadie, a new age is dawning. Everything becomes holy now, Leocadie. Our kisses, however wild they may be, are holy from henceforth. Leocadie, my love, my wife! Isn't her expression quite different, Prosper, to what you ever knew her to have before? Is not her forehead pure? What has been is blotted out, hey, Leocadie?"

Leocadie: Surely, Henri.

That was no answer, you will say, and you are right. You see, he was Henri and she was Leocadie. It is not that he was deceived about the past, but only that he was so hopeful of the future.

"We have known one another for seven years," he says quite frankly, "but it was only yesterday that she became my wife. In those seven years there was not one day, nay, not one day, in which she did not lie to me, for everything about her is a lie—her eyes and her lips, her kisses and her smiles. And yesterday I married her. We had a dream—nay, I had a dream I wanted to get away with her from here. Into the solitude, into the country, into great peace. We wish to live like other happy couples—we dreamt also of having a child."

Henri is only acting. It is true that he married Leocadie the day before, but it is not true that he has killed the Duke, who will presently appear. When the Duke does come to "the Green Cocatoo" Henri will kill him before the audience, because Prosper has not understood this for mere acting, and blurts out that Henri really had cause and urges him to flee the place before the officers come for him.

The officers will never come. It is Big Strides.

MILLION FANS FOR "MOVIES."

Silent Drama Is Mecca for Summer Throngs.

Well-Known Players Featured in Productions.

Turns Night Into Day for "Legit" Actor.

It is the closed season, almost, for the "legit" houses in Los Angeles, and the wide open season in the movies. Already the Mason is dark, and with the conclusion of the current week of "Omar, the Tentmaker," the Majestic, too, will close its doors.

To be sure, the Burbank will continue to offer sterling attractions, some brand new, and others, tried successes, and the Gaiety musical comedy foundry continues to grind out summer-girl shows; and, of course, vaudeville is always with us.

But right now, attention is focussed on the film houses, and as if they were aware of the fact, the purveyors of the silent drama are offering attractions better than anything to be found in any other one city in the country.

THIS WEEK'S FEATURES.

For example, there is "The Wrath of the Gods" at the Clune Auditorium—Tom Ince's big spectacular film based on the recent volcano horror in Japan, and said to be quite the acme of motion picture sensationalism.

While at the Woodley, this week, one finds "One Wonderful Night," the picture whose cast was selected by popular vote in one of the big magazines. Francis X. Bushman won the lead with a plurality which ran over 3,000,000, which of itself, is evidence of the tremendous interest taken in this thrilling international tale of crime and romance.

And Tally has come to the front with Carlyle Blackwell, "handsomest man in the movies," who has joined "The Famous Players" and will make his first appearance in "The Spitfire."

Nor must one forget Miller's at the junction of Ninth and Main streets, where, next Thursday, Mary Pickford will be shown in one of her best plays—and these are but four out of nearly 400 first-class picture houses.

Probably nowhere in the world could "Give My Regards to Broadway" be sung with more appreciation than in Screen street, that not too closely defined Broadway of motion picture studios which clings about Los Angeles like a vine to a trellis, for the insatiate maw of the silent drama is daily, nay, hourly, swallowing up the stars of other fields.

THE ACTORS OF YESTERDAY.

"Where's Bill Farnum" quoths the old-timer at Brodway and Forty-second streets, or maybe it is Anna Little, Marie Dressler, Edmund Breese. And mostly the answer is an indefinite wave off towards the West. Comment is unnecessary.

It is quite some time since New York saw Otis Turner, yet if one saunters into the Universal studio, there he is, directing the loves, the laughs, and the crimes of a whole city of players.

Hobart Bosworth heads a company of his own, and it seems but yesterday that tiny Mary Pickford bought that little electric brougham of hers.

And if one focusses attention on the local stage, that line from Justin McCarthy's play, "If I Were King," comes to mind—"Where are the snows of yesterday?" only in this case it was neither snow, nor frost, which caused the metamorphisis of Dave Hartford, and Morgan Wallace.

Hartford, by the way, may resume work for Morosco, heading one of the eastern companies, but Wallace now directs silent drama instead of Burbank "hopes."

Then, too, somewhere in the center of the vortex is Laura Oakley, who used to be so popular as character woman with "Pop" Fisher, and Gale Henry, also eccentric, as well as a perfectly good guide for chorus girls, has espoused the new industry.

Even Dick Bennett of "Damaged Goods" infamy, has, for the time being, at least, condescended to star for the screen, while Bob Leonard, who made his best success in "The Campus," is a seasoned veteran of the gatlin camera.

TURNS NIGHT INTO DAY.

The movies have turned night into day for the player folk," commented Albert Hale, director of the Kalem company, the other day, when I asked him why actors and actresses were so willing to step from the limelight of individual publicity into the comparative obscurity of the animated drama.

"Did it ever occur to you," he added, "that the average player is doomed to work at night almost all his life? One taste of day work, and always in the bright sunshine, opens up a new vista for enjoying life of which they never dreamed. And besides, they are busier, and equally well paid."

MILLIONS FOLLOW MOVIES.

It is most too hot for figures, but even a languid delving into the archives of those municipal departments which keep tab on public amusements brought to light the amazing fact that there are approximately 1,000,000 paid admissions to picture shows in Los Angeles alone, every week.

The four houses I mentioned sometime back are alone good for 100,000 of this, one of them, less than three months ago, netting 40,000 paid admissions in one week. Yet pictures are still in their infancy.

Within the last year or so, established moving picture stars have gained followings which are the envy of their brothers and sisters in the legit.

The name Mary Pickford spells capacity, while Mabel Normand, Anna Little, Roscoe Arbuckle, Ford Sterling, Kathlyn Williams, stand in pictures as do Maude Adams, Elsie Janis, Maclyn Arbuckle or Raymond Hitchcock on the spoken stage.

And the class of audiences has advanced, just as has that of the players, for the day has long since passed when only those went to picture shows who could not afford to go elsewhere. For most it is a matter of preference.

Forthcoming.

Weimar Recital.

Tomorrow evening Jessie Weimar will present her advanced pupils in a song recital, who will be assisted by Prof. L. H. Campbell, pianist; Isabella Angeloty, 'cellist, and Hilda Meade, pianist.

The recital will be held at the Starr Musical Hall.

Dramatic Baritone.

One of the happiest selections of Signor Lambardi has been the signing of Eugenio Giraldoni as leading baritone of the National Grand Opera Company.

This eminent artist, who created the role of Christofo Colombo in Alberto Franchetti's new opera, scored in that work as great a success as he had obtained in Gabriel d'Annunzio's "La Figlia di Iorio," in which he had the difficult role of Lazzaro.

When "La Tosca" was first given in Rome a committee of the best authorities in music—Giacomo Puccini, Illica Giacosa and Guidio Ricordi—unanimously selected Eugenio Giraldoni for the famous part of Scarpio. The decision proved a happy one. After the performance Giacomo Puccini ended a letter to Giraldoni with these words: "To thee, who with nobility and rare intelligence, for hundreds of performances has given life to Scarpio, I send word of my hearty appreciation and sincere gratitude."

Giraldoni comes of a long line of ancestors of the highest artistic capabilities. His father was the "Great Giraldoni." He was in his time the first and the best dramatic baritone. The son is a confirmation of the law of heridity. Eugenio Giraldoni is in every respect the son of his great sire.

German Lieder.

Estelle Heartt Dreyfus, assisted by the Beverly Trio—Glenn Knight, pianist; Vernon Grey, violinist; Emery McCargar, violoncellist—will be heard in "Du bist wie Eine blume" (Liszt,) "Fussreise" (Wolf,) "Traume" (Wagner,) serenade, "Der Tod und das Madchen" (Schubert,) "Die Lotos blume," "Ich goolle nicht" (Schumann,) "Soppische Ode" (Brahms,) "An deu Traum" (Cornelius,) "Traum durch die Dammerung" (Strauss,) and "Lullaby" (Mendelssohn,) a typical German lieder programme, at Beverly Hills Hotel this evening.

Tandler in Vienna.

Adolph Tandler, the sympathetic conductor of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, has been recently in Salzburg, visiting his mother, whom he completely took by surprise, as she had not been apprised of his coming.

From there he has gone to Vienna and Munich, and will return to Los Angeles early in August, the Symphony rehearsals beginning a few weeks later. Herr Tandler is bringing back with him a number of interesting orchestral scores from Europe, among them several novelties that have never before been heard in America. It is safe to predict that the forthcoming Symphony programmes will be the most unusual and delightful of any ever before offered to Los Angeles audiences.

Sigmund Beel, concert meister of the organization, will return about the same time as Herr Tandler. He has been spending his vacation at his old home in San Francisco, fishing on the Russian River, houseboating on the bay, and visiting at the palatial country home of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst. He has also found time to coach a few of his old pupils in the North, so he has had altogether a busy summer.

New Metronome.

Executant musicians and composers do not yet realize that the time-honored metronome, the familiar pendulum device which records scientifically periods of time, is about to become a museum curiosity.

Over 200 years ago it was devised for its purpose, and its extreme simplicity seemed to warrant that it would remain a useful device for many centuries.

But progress has attacked even the metronome—its rival in a few months will be the "rythmikon."

This latest musical invention is due to the genius of Bonarios Grimson, an English violinist of talent.

The rythmikon gives the precise rhythmic beat for any conceivable musical composition. Not only will it give the beat, but it will enable to visualize the rhythm by seeing red circles appear and disappear with the requisite periodicity.

All music students and teachers are conscious of the vexatious problems that arise in determining certain rhythms. But with Mr. Grimson's device it is necessary merely to search for a key supplying the particular meter of music called for and to place it in a slide. Then the machine will tick with fascinating regularity the exact rhythm that is wanted.

It is not intended so much that the machine be operated simultaneously with the performing of music, but that the player or singer listen to the rhythmic beat before performing the tricky piece of music. He must listen for a few moments; soon the rhythm will have made a definite impression on his consciousness and the actual performance will follow without the mechanical effort that would otherwise be needed.

Let us suppose that the student is attempting to master a composition in which the time is syncopated in a manner that defies practically the beating of time. With the aid of the "Rythmikon" it is necessary only to analyze the distribution of beats in a series of bars and adjust the machine to it. Then the student sets the machine going, with the result that the peculiar distribution of beats is recorded with mechanical accuracy. The subconscious mind quickly comprehends the peculiar rhythm, and the problem is negotiated without difficulty.

In appearance the "rythmikon" is not unlike the accepted idea of an infernal machine. It is like a cigar box and contains clock works, with a regulator or governor similar to those employed in talking machines. By an adjustment operated from the outside any desired tempo can be obtained. Then there are a series of circular cards bearing perforations about the size of a penny. By passing in front of a red background the revolution of these cards presents the periodicity of flashes called for by the particular rhythm. Simultaneously, by an arrangement of projections on the rear of the card, catching the mechanism of the machine, the striking of a bell is recorded, so that one may hear as well as see the interval.

Motionless Silent Interpreter.

In Maria Carmi the musical world has the oddest of prima donnas. While possessed of a beautiful voice she has never sung in public; graceful of body and pleasing in manner, she has been seen in her theatrical career only as a motionless interpreter.

Miss Carmi was induced to enter the stage for one reason only. She is possessed of a true and inspiring face, a counterpart of Botticelli's celebrated "Madonna."

Maria Carmi plays the part of the Madonna in "The Miracle." She is known as "the lady with the Botticelli face." Taking the role of the Madonna constitutes her sole dramatic experience, yet because of this one part she is famous as a great actress all over Europe.

She must sit motionless, and with the same expression, for forty consecutive minutes during the course of the wordless drama, gives an idea of the difficulty of the part.

When Max Reinhardt, the producer; Karl Vollmoeller, the author, and Engelbert Humperdinck, the composer, were preparing for the initial presentation of "The Miracle" at Olympia in London, in 1911, it was their idea to use an effigy for the Madonna. But meeting Maria Carmi, Prof. Humperdinck was struck with her features and carriage. Miss Carmi had never appeared on any stage. But Humperdinck finally persuaded her to essay the trying part at a rehearsal. He wanted to see what the great stage manager, Reinhardt, would say. Reinhardt was enthralled. Miss Carmi was a find. Since then she has taken the part of the Madonna in all the European productions, in London, in Vienna, in Berlin and elsewhere throughout Germany and Austria.

The "Miracle" has crossed the ocean, will open in New York this autumn, and will be seen on the Coast this winter.

"Lona" Song.

Mrs. George Mulford, the wife of the well-known piccolo soloist of the Symphony, has just published locally "Lona Song," a melodious composition accompanying the words by Frank Stanton, one of the eminent authors of the South.

Under her maiden name of Lona Snow, the composer produced some years ago a number of works, sentimental in character, which met with much favor.

English Interpreter.

Maggie Teyte, the dainty English interpreter of French music, is a very versatile young lady. Not yet 30, she carved for herself a niche of no small proportions in opera, both in this country and France. Between her operatic engagements at the Metropolitan she has made herself very popular throughout the East in recital and concert, and next fall will undertake a transcontinental tour of America, which, of course, includes a recital in this city. She is a distinct champion of golf and looks forward to trying out one of the several famous greens near this city while here. This month she has been challenged to a game at Chantilly by Francis Ouimet, open champion of the United States, who is now touring European links.

Tetrazzini.

Luisa Tetrazzini closed her tour of America last month and after a week with the talking machine people, making records, which during the past season have brought her over $60,000, she sailed for England. June, July and August she will rest at home in her villa in Italy, where, in addition to a wonderful house in which are kept all the trophies of her various trips, she may enjoy her vast acres and her pets, which include horses, dogs and birds. She returns to the United States in October, starting the season early, as in addition to the American appearances, one of which is scheduled for Los Angeles, she will make an extended tour of Canada.

Strauss Engages California Soprano.

In all the range of opera there is hardly a character which makes more demands upon the ability of an artist, both as singer and actress, than that of Salome in Strauss's opera of that name. For this reason it is a great credit to Marcella Craft, the Riverside soprano, to have had the honor thrust upon her of having Strauss himself ask her to sing it, and compliment her most lavishly after each performance. Miss Craft expects to return to her native country in the fall—her first visit in eight years—and will be heard in recital in Los Angeles.

Strauss's "Burleske."

An interesting feature of Tina Lerner's orchestral repertoire is the Strauss 'Burleske," a work which is almost a novelty in America. Its performance requires but fifteen minutes, and therefore, it is usually offered in connection with one of the shorter concertos of Beethoven or Chopin. It is highly probable that the distinguished and charming little Russian piano virtuoso will play this work on her tour of America next season, which includes one appearance in this city.

Paderewski.

Ignace Pakerewski, quite recovered in health, is looking forward to his return to America next season, which tour will include a visit to Los Angeles. He delivered an address at the banquet given in his honor by the Bohemian Club of New York before sailing last month. It was one of the most stirring and thoroughly beautiful speeches ever made on a similar occasion. He touched on his success in this country, which, in a large measure, he accredited to the vast army of musicians of different nationalities and creeds, upon whom the bright sun of success has shown, who for years have patiently plowed and sown. "They were the ones who built the bridges by which the great mass of the people passed on to ever increasing knowledge and appreciation of music. They were the ones who built, brick by brick, the noble palace of North American culture and artistry. In wishing you, Bohemians, health, prosperity and happiness, let me include the less fortunate ones, and let me say to musicians everywhere, how sincerely, how deeply, I appreciate the good will, the support, which I constantly receive from them." Many tributes have been paid to the less fortunate who have striven but never succeeded brilliantly, but probably none has ever struck the key so truely as the part quoted above from a dinner speech by one of the most remarkable musicians of the world.

Swiss Pianist Coming.

Rudolf Ganz, the distinguished and brilliant piano virtuoso of Switzerland, has again startled the world of music by his virtuosity. In a recital recently given in Leipsic the entire evening was devoted to the interpretation of compositions of the well-known pianist, Mr. Ganz presiding at the piano. The programme was opened by a sonata for violin and piano, followed by a group of piano numbers and then fifteen of his songs and duets given by Elsa Alves of Leipsic, Paul Petri, tenor, of Berlin, and contralto Gertrud Land. The works particularly showed each song a pronounced character figure, and each was notably well adapted to effective delivery of the text. They were most cordially received by the large audience. Ganz himself will be heard in recital and concert in America the coming season, being scheduled for Los Angeles early in November.

Arrigo Serato.

When artists like Ysaye, Kreisler and Elman are agreed and hearty in their approval of the artistry of an associate, then there can be no doubt that the associate is worthy of it. On the ability of Arrigo Serato, the gifted Italian violinist, who visits this country next season, appearing in Los Angeles in December, all the above-named virtuosi are agreed. Although Italian, from a distinguished musical family of Bologna, "non-German," as he has been characterized through his playing, he belongs rather to Germany than Italy; it is only in the matter of birthplace that Italy can claim him. Serato is a unique personality, blending virility and youthful ingeniousness into a great charm of manner.

Swedish Soprano to Open Season.

It is not generally known that the great Swedish soprano, Mme. Olive Fremstad, who will open the Philharmonic season in this city in October, is the daughter of a doctor and preacher, who in the early days traveled from town to town. Madame Fremstad will appear only in concert next year.

Linne Grand Opera.

Owing to his inability to finish his grand opera within the time allotted by the Prize Committee, Hans S. Linne has withdrawn his name as competitor for the grand opera prize.

This is to be regretted, as the composer has shown in the past a deep sympathy for Indian music and a high gift of translation of aboriginal music.

CHURCHMEN, EDUCATORS.

Archbishop Messmer of Milwaukee is in Switzerland seeking relief for an affection of the lungs that has lately distressed him. His visit has also a sentimental interest for he was born in the region of Geneva.

Rev. Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, for the past five years pastor of the Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, has accepted the presidency of Princeton Theological Seminary, to which he was elected several weeks ago.

Prof. George W. Melcher, assistant State superintendent of Missouri's public schools, will on September 1 become director of research and efficiency of the public schools of Kansas City. This is a new department created in the schools of Kansas City, which is the fourth city in the country to adopt it. The others are Cleveland, Rochester and Baltimore.

Rev. Edward Judson of New York City, who was elected honorary president for life of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, is the grandson of Adoniram Judson, the famous missionary to Burma, where he served for forty years. Dr. Edward Judson is now pastor of the Judson Memorial Church, New York City, which he erected in memory of his father, Dr. Adoniram Judson, the famous surgeon.

Rev. J. T. Purvis, pastor of the Christian Church at Russellville, Ark., recently went to Pecos, Tex., a distance of 750 miles, purposely to baptize J. E. McConnell, a wealthy rancher. McConnell wrote the Rev. Mr. Purvis, asking him to come to Pecos, agreeing to pay all expenses of the trip.

James Simerson, colored, of Beaumont, Tex., known as "Baby Jim" is probably the heaviest man alive. He tips the scales at 793 pounds, is five feet nine inches tall, wears a twenty-four collar, measures 111 inches around the waist, and is still growing heavier. He is 24 years old, one of six children, and weighs more than all the rest of the family put together. Simerson can walk only about a block without resting.

Ellen Galpin's Idea.

PASTORAL PLAYS IN OPEN NEW PLAN FOR CHILDREN.

JUST returned from Europe, where she has been studying under the best directors of whom the other side boasts, Ellen Galpin, a lovely and unusually talented Los Angeles girl, was not only made chairman of the producing committee of the junior drama league last week, but has launched a new idea for outdoor plays for children which promises all sorts of good things for the little Thespians.

Pastoral plays for children, in the open, is her idea, and already the plan has been adopted and is being put into execution.

"Hansel and Gretel" and "Minon and Minette" are already scheduled, the dates of production being August 2 at Hawthorne, second week at the natural amphitheater at Eagle Rock, and on Monday and Thursday of the third week at the home of Mrs. George Weston.

It is planned to perpetuate the movement, and already an effort is afoot to put the plan on a firm financial basis. "It will be like play for the little ones," says Miss Galpin, but educational, too, and already I have lined up some really remarkable child talent which will be heard of on the grown-up stage one of the days, I am sure."

Among those already announced to take part in the plays already named will be Arri Rottan, Claire Marles, Mildred Mason, Helen Eddy, Jeanette Caldwell, Morewena Wilcox and Bertha Wilcox. There is to be a juvenile quartette, too, and other features which should tend to make the enterprise a big success.

IF NOT, WE LOSE.

Our own houses must be especially well built, because, selling on easy terms, it is many years before we get our money back. That is where we first got our reputation for honest building. Southern California Home Builders, 410 West Sixth street.—[Advertisement.

panicky times most anyone would serve as an heir to catch the nimble dollar and to buy real estate so it is reasonable to believe that there is plenty of action in "Wanted an Heir."

"The World and the Woman" is a Biograph film drama with a plot new and strong. It deals with a world old problem in a new way and in a convincing manner. This film will cause much favorable comment.

The new arrangements at Clune's Broadway and the new fifteen-piece orchestra has added much to the attractiveness of the popular home of film drama. The orchestra is splendid and under a capable leader interprets music which accompanies the picture.

Woodley Theater.

"One Wonderful Night," the great Essanay film for which the leading man was selected by a popular vote of over 3,000,000, will be seen in Los Angeles for the first time, beginning Monday, at the Woodley Theater.

Francis X. Bushman was the "handsome devil" who won the contest for the coveted lead, and that the public recognizes ability when it sees it was amply proven when the great international drama was staged.

The plot is too intense, and too complicated to be told briefly. Suffice that it concerns a titled English girl with a fortune, whose father tries to marry to a Hungarian count who needs the money.

How she escapes to America, and the series of crimes which are resorted to, in futile effort to ensnare the girl, and how a regular American of the hit-from-the-shoulder variety becomes embroiled and takes a hand at straightening out things, form a thrilling story.

Reports from New York would indicate that the film is one of the greatest of the year. Certainly it covers the whole gamut of human emotions, and the producers spared no expense to make the most of an unexcelled opportunity.

Tally's Broadway.

Motion picture patrons will be greatly pleased with the announcement that one of their most popular photoplay favorites has joined the ranks of the Famous Players Company and is to appear for the first time in a Daniel Frohman production which is to be featured at Tally's Broadway Theater for the week beginning tomorrow.

Carlyle Blackwell, acknowledged to be one of the seven handsomest men appearing in motion pictures, is the star who has been chosen by Mr. Frohman as best fitted to make the most of the opportunities which are offered him as a leading member of his company. It was not until Mary Pickford joined "The Famous Players" that she gained her greatest triumphants and Mr. Blackwell is sure to add fame to his already famous name as a photoplayer, with this company.

"The Spitfire," Edward Peple's famous nautical comedy drama, is the play in which he will first appear and in the leading role of this thrilling romance he has a part that is admirably suited to himself, in the big dramatic situations and in the lighter moments he does not fail to give a perfect characterization.

"The Spitfire" is interesting as a story, it is admirable as an example of painstaking photoplay direction and production and it will be doubly welcome to those fortunate enough to see it because it is the first time that Carlyle Blackwell has had the chance to show his admirers what he really can do when he is given a real play and a company of able players to support him.

Mr. Strobridge and Mr. Demorest have chosen a musical programme to accompany this picture play that not only fits the action of the story, but on account of its great variety of selections is bound to please the most critical of musical critics.

Miller's.

Today and tonight are the last opportunities to see that big aggregation of screen stars appearing in some of their best work at Miller's Theater. Mary Pickford is seen in one of her really splendid plays, "As It Is in Life," and is, of course, pleasing everyone. Jolly dimpled Lillian Walker was never better than she is in "Lillian's Dilemma," a rollicking comedy in two parts, while Mabel Trunnelle, the delightful emotional actress, was never more appealing or prettier than in "In the Shadow of Disgrace." A newcomer to the Biograph company, Irene Hawley, makes a decided hit in the unusual comedy drama, "Her Primitive Model."

On Monday another great programme is offered when Pearl White, Crane Wilbur, Paul Panzer and other favorites offer the ninth and latest chapter of "The Perils of Pauline." Sweet, dainty Alice Joyce makes another big hit in her latest effort "In Wolf's Clothing," in which she is ably assisted by Tom Moore, while Billy Quirk and Josie Sadler, with a big Vitagraph cast, which is always conducive of much jollity, will get many laughs in their latest effort, "The Arrival of Josie."

On Thursday comes another Pickford picture, "All on Account of the Milk," in which she scores another personal triumph. And also comes John Bunny in Ellis Parker Butler's immortal conceit, "Pigs Is Pigs." Can you imagine anything funnier than big, fat, homely Bunny in this story that has made millions laugh? All these pictures are shown on that wonderful plate glass mirror screen and the music is real picture music, every scene on the screen being followed with appropriate music on Miller's wonderful "Fotoplayer."

Jardin de Danse.

Mabel Van Buren, the popular as well as uncommonly clever young leading actress of the Jesse Laskey Famous Players' Company, will be the guest of honor at the Jardin de Danse's Movies, Monday, tomorrow night. Miss Van Buren's face is one of the most familiar of the many seen on the motion picture screen and her popularity is almost unbounded.

Her presence at the Jardin de Danse tomorrow night in the role of the guest of honor should attract an unusually large gathering to this well-liked dancing institution, and generous as has been the attendance upon the preceding Monday nights, Miss Van Buren and her friends are expected to establish a new record for popularity.

The club nights, commenced at the Jardin de Danse last Tuesday night, proved an instant and unequivocal success, such a great success that the management has decided to continue them each Tuesday night throughout the fall and winter seasons. The idea of making a charge for admission of 50 cents for gentlemen and 25 cents for ladies seems to have struck a note of popular approval.

THINGS MEN DO.

For three decades John Doerschuk, aged 74, of Shanesville, O., has been the little town's banker, honored and respected. He ran a private bank. Of its soundness there was no question. As the years passed, no money was laid by for misfortune and no buttress was constructed against sudden trouble. The earnings of the little institution were used to educate seven children, the last of whom has only recently finished college. Recently a customer of the bank whose notes Doerschuk held failed in a manufacturing enterprise, and the banker gave up what little property he had and has gone back to the little print shop in which years ago he earned his living.

Justice Page of New York recently dismissed a divorce case brought before him because of the refusal of the wife to consider motherhood. He held that a wife's unwillingness to bear children is not a sufficient ground on which to annul a marriage.

"Porto Ricans are rapidly becoming Americans in thought and sympathies as well as in education," remarked F. A. Jennings, an American exporter of Ponce, at the New Willard Hotel in Washington. "This is due largely, if not wholly, to the extension of the school system and the employment of young women teachers sent from the United States. When the American occupation of Porto Rico took place in 1898 there were not 20,000 children in the schools of the island. Today there are 160,000, and they are learning the English language and American ways.

BERTHA RICH'S MAGAZINE SUCCESS.

Bertha A. Rich has returned to Los Angeles to remain permanently engaged in literary work, after having invaded New York and won for herself a distinctive and prominent place among those magazines devoting themselves to women's problems and women's fiction.

Mrs. Rich developed the character of "Elizabeth Smith, Schemestress," whose many adventures in the business world have attracted considerable attention from among the readers of the Women's Stories Magazine.

In an editorial announcement made by the magazine, the editors declared, in speaking of the series of stories: "The names are changed of course, but you cannot read it without realizing that the author, Bertha A. Rich, knows what she is talking about, and how it feels."

Bertha A. Rich.

Mrs. Rich explains that she came to Los Angeles because she is an adopted daughter of California and finds that the fountains of inspiration bubble more freely in this balmy climate than elsewhere.

"I am interested in business women's problems," she said, "and since I solved a few of them for myself I want to write of them. There is an inexhaustible field for plots in that line of writing—perhaps I find it so because I know the actual life so well."

The Love of Women.

the night of the fall of the Bastile, and Paris is wild, wild, wild.

Oh, such an impossible mad play by the impossible, mad Schnitzler, who surely needs no Granville Barker to do him over into English, and who cannot have suffered much by the translation of Horace B. Samuel.

Last week they celebrated the Fall of the Bastile in Los Angeles, as they did everywhere else where a few Frenchmen were gathered together. In Mexico City Huerta himself was there, and the next day he resigned. His own Bastile had fallen.

If everybody who sang the Marseillaise that day had read the curiously illuminating yet uncertain one-act travesty by Schnitzler, they might have gone about the day's business with a curious commingling of the tragic and the grotesque.

No, Henri is never killed because he killed the Duke. He is hailed as a friend of the people. It was a good day for a Duke to die. It was a good day for a husband's vengeance. The day that belonged to the people of France whether they knew what to do with it or not.

A bastile fell and a guillotine arose, but what of that? I am thinking only of Henri's dream. "My mind is made up, Prosper," he says. "We are leaving town. We are going into the country."

"You are going to certain misery," Prosper says.

Henri: "To happiness, Prosper. Hey, Leocadie? We have often dreamt of it. I yearn for the peace of the wide plains. Yes, Prosper, I have seen myself in my dreams going over the fields with her, in an infinite stillness with the wonderful placid heavens over us. Ay, we will fly away from this awful and dangerous town; the great peace will come over us. I don't care a straw about Art. I wish for quiet. You don't understand that, Prosper; you have never loved as I love. I want to be alone with her—that's the only way—that's the only way, Leocadie, of forgetting everything. But then we shall be happier than human beings have ever been before. We shall have children; you will be a good mother, Leocadie, and a true wife. All the past, all the past will be blotted out."

What matters that it was not? It might have been. Surely there is a consecration and steadfast love!

Listen children, it is time to come out of the storm. Oh, I see you, you thousands and millions of women hurt by life and by men—trusting and mistrusting, going up and down in hunger and hope, in unseasoned happiness and pain—I see you with the hurt of wounded things in your eyes, with the uneasiness and pang of hunted things in frightened eyes, and I say to you it is time to come out of the storm.

You know just what I mean. By the thousand and the tens of thousands you understand and the great teeming army of sorrowful ones who will not read this, and who sit in a grief all their own with eyes blinded by mists of tears and lips too dumb for prayer, they, too, understand. They are thinking it at this minute, over and over, again and again—it is time to come out of the storm.

Not always, but nearly always the great chance comes—the man with worship in his eyes and adoration on his lips, who will love you and work for you and protect you in a world that is still good, in a home that yet holds peace.

Surely you will not fight the rain and the winds any longer. Surely you will close the doors and draw the blinds at last. Your chance may not always return. Listen this once more, it is time to come out of the storm.

That is a wonderful beginning which Tully has given "Omar, the Tentmaker" in his prologue. So tender, so reverent, so worshipful it is that one forgets its utter badness of morale.

You see, Omar is stealing the heart of a lady already plighted to a Shah. Next day she is to marry him. But that last night she follows her heart. They are cheating an honorable man, and the result must be tragic for everybody concerned, yet Tully makes him a lover of such delicacy and appreciation that an impossible situation is saved from the start.

Mark you, when the Persian dove flutters down from her balcony, Omar is upon his knees with downcast eyes. Not eagerly, but with becoming reluctance, he lifts himself to greet her, and still he approaches with averted face. One movement of haste, one trace of hunger, one hint of triumph and the artistry of the scene would be destroyed and the sympathy of the audience turned to revulsion. But, no, Omar's approach, wonderful in its tenderness, is timid and unbelieving. He is awed by the loveliness of a dream come true, enraptured by the holiness of her giving. They move toward the open gate, and still he is gently aloof. Not until he has wrapped her cloak about her does he embrace her, and then he but leans lightly forward, barely touching her lips like a man before a shrine. She enters the portals, a wee white hand outstretched in welcome. He takes it, and they disappear as though a mantle of bliss had fallen about them.

It is all a trick, but so consummately accomplished that we are convinced that the love of passion has been turned into the passion of love.

Of some such quality is the love of women.

Schnitzler has written a burning contrast to the scene from the tentmaker which I have just described. It is called "The Mate," and is something to harrow the soul. It is one of those bitter realities which leaves one aghast. We are sorry to find it even in a book, and the heart rebels at its recognition in life.

A man of noble nature has married a woman twenty years younger than himself. There is a year or two of happiness, and the gates of delight are closed for them forever.

Suddenly she dies and the husband telegraphs a young man friend whom he has long recognized as his wife's lover. His only grief is for the sorrow her death will bring this boy.

Yet the situation is a fable. The young man had long wearied of her or else it was only play between them. He has been engaged for some time to another woman, and she has known it.

A neighbor woman wants to save the husband the shock of any revelation and has come to the house the night after the funeral to get letters which the youth had written the wife.

The husband tells her he understands. He says to her, "There's only one thing I've got to be careful about. He must never learn that I know. If he did he would only suspect forgiveness and generosity in every word I spoke. No, I don't want that. That's not the case at all. I never hated him, I don't hate him. There is not the slightest reason why I should hate him or why I should forgive him. I understand the whole thing far too well. She belonged to him; we mustn't forget the real point. It was to him that she belonged, not to me, and it couldn't have gone on much longer.

"Do you think I haven't seen how both of them were ashamed of their lives—how both of them suffered? Why, I have actually longed for the minute to come when they should come to me and say, 'Please free us.' Why didn't they have the pluck? Why didn't I say to them, 'Go, then, I won't keep you?' But we were all too cowardly, they and I. That's the senseless part of the whole thing."

When he finds the truth from the lips of the young man himself he says, "I would have raised you from the ground if you had been broken by grief. I would have gone with you to her grave if the woman who is lying over there had been your love, but you have turned her into your wanton and you have filled this house with lies and foulness right up to the roof until it makes me sick."

Then the woman who has come to help does all that is left for her to do. She saves the husband to himself since she cannot save the others. This is her answer, "She knew what she meant to him. He neither deceived her nor humiliated her. They would never have come to you to ask for their freedom. They had all the freedom they wanted. Perhaps it will give you peace to think how far, how infinitely far that woman lived away from you, that woman who just happened to die in your house."

Again has an Angeleno created a sensation.

You may have read about the roof-garden playgrounds, which have caused so much comment, placed as they are in connection with the finest apartment-houses in New York City; but did you know that it was a Los Angeles girl who instituted the plan?

Mrs. Helen Speer began her career as a designer of playgardens by installing the Mother Goose playroom in the fashionable Hotel Vanderbilt. Here mothers could leave their children during the day with every certainty that they would not only be safely cared for but would be given amusement of the highest order. The plan worked so well that Mrs. Speer was asked to install a more extensive playspot for the new apartment-house, the Henrik Hudson. This time the entire roof was devoted to the purpose. Other hotels and apartment-houses are planning to have similar playplaces for the children of their tenants, as it has proved a drawing-card, attracting tenants as well as attention. Efforts are under way to create roof playgrounds in the tenement districts where at present the children of the poor are driven into the dangers and temptations of the streets and alleys to indulge in the recreations which are as vitally necessary to childhood as are good food and fresh air.

It is said that Paul Elder is about taking up the campaign for the installation of similar playgrounds on the Pacific Coast. It has long been a question to those who visit here why roofs are not more generally utilized in California where the climate is so favorable, and perhaps in this, as in so many ways, we shall "begin at the top," putting into effect the latest and best at the initial step.

Nothing is more pitiful than to see little children raised in apartment-houses where they are denied the natural rights of play; and anything which can be devised to remedy this will be a boon, not only to the children but to those who watch and pity them.

No Bobbins.

It has come at last—the sewing machine without a bobbin. It has always been a wonder to me why someone did not invent such a machine. All that bother of winding bobbins, done away with. Every woman knows that bobbins are fiendishly cognizant of the possibilities of a situation and when you are in the greatest hurry these beastly little reels always demand attention. Not only this, but if you are stitching something very particular, they manage to give out just at the very spot where joining threads will make a "botch." Every one will joyously wave farewell to the bobbin, and not even wish peace to its ashes!

Navy Blue.

Paris is in the throes of a navy-blue craze. Navy blue, navy blue, everywhere and on every possible garment. Navy blue combined with other colors such as black, tan or the shades of yellow which have paraded as tango, navy blue and white, navy blue and navy blue. Whole suits of it, and hats of it and trimming of it in conjunction with other colors. And commonplace though it may sound, navy blue serge is the chosen material. Either this or gaberdine. "The entire landscape—or city scape," writes a friend from Paris, "seems to have gone navy blue. One almost fancies that one sees blue or looks through blue glasses, upon all clothing at the present time."

A Cretonne Shower.

For a prospective bride, her friends bought yards of pretty flowered cretonne and made it into all manner of pretty articles for her dressing-room. Co-operation thus assured a welcome and tasteful set of gifts, far preferable to a lot of unmatched articles.

Careful Packing.

A lady, who recently made a long ocean trip, tells me that by her ingenius method of packing, she found upon arrival that every article was fresh and unmussed, even her most dainty frocks and blouses needing no pressing out. She purchased several yards of cheesecloth which she tacked closely over each layer of garments, pinning the smaller articles to the cloth. Thus anchored, the garments

Autumn's Advance
Suit Styles Are Here

And those who have seen them have gone into raptures over the beauty and newness of the styles. To say they are different is putting it mildly indeed.

Poplins, gaberdines, serges, broadcloths and fancy suitings are favored materials and the new blues, navies, greens, Russian, tobacco browns, taupes and grays are the chief colors, with plenty of black ones in each style.

The long tunic, either plain or plaited, is most admired and the coats for the most part introduce some new cape effect or are cut on lines of the cutaway. Braids, buttons and velvet are the chief embellishments.

While the stock is far from being complete, you will find much to instruct and admire in this advance showing.

Prices $29.50, $32.50, $35.00 and up to $57.50.

MONDAY

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

WE expected it would come—sooner or later—but truth compels me to observe that it was rather undiplomatic, not to say a trifle raw, to spring it quite so soon—that test of indorsing individuals and measures by the Women's City Club. It happened while I was in Yosemite, so I was not personally present, but reliable information from those who were indicates that there was a wordy battle when an effort was made to adopt a resolution asking the House of Representatives at Washington to give a hearing on the Mundell suffrage amendment.

Now, if this test had been applied some weeks or months later it might possibly have been put over when the active opponents to the indorsement of measures were absent or asleep, but it was pemature and quite unworthy of the customary diplomacy of the president, Mrs. Shelley M. Tolhurst, who, it will be remembered, was a warm advocate of indorsement. As a consequence the members are now alive and alert and keenly on the watch for any side-stepping of the rigid resolution which was passed almost unanimously to keep the club entirely non-partisan and out of politics.

Mrs. E. C. Bellows, in her strong opposition to the proposed suspension of rules and regulations to permit the indorsement of the suffrage bill, pointed out that, according to the by-laws, such suspension cannot be made except by unanimous vote of the club. When you get 500 women to think just alike on any one proposition you have some job before you, therefore it is altogether likely that this decision, which puts the club clearly out of politics, will hold—at least until there is a revision of the by-laws—which may be the next step proposed.

Superintendent of Schools Francis will address the club tomorrow on "The Intermediate School."

Women Athletes.

The fact that there were more women applicants to join the Sierra Club on its tramp this year than could be accommodated speaks volumes for the increasing fondness for outdoor life among women. It is the policy of the club to keep the number of men and women pretty evenly balanced on these tramps, and this year the women applicants so far outnumbered the men that the line had to be drawn. I have this from one of the leaders whom I met in Yosemite, which was the opening rendezvous for the club preliminary to the four weeks' tramp in the high Sierras.

An interesting question arises here as to whether this indicates a lack of love for the strenuous life among men, or an increasing fondness for it among women. Work out the problem to suit yourself.

I noticed that some of the women Sierrans up there were arrayed in bloomers—discarding skirts altogether—which seemed a sane and sensible thing to do. The wide, full, black bloomers, worn with a blouse and khaki hat were as becoming as comfortable.

No woman should undertake this trip unless she has the strength and endurance to stand the effort. I heard of one woman—not a member of the Sierra Club, however, but a visitor at Yosemite—who undertook to climb the short trail from Camp Curry to Glacier Point. She got half way up and was seized with panic. She sat down on a rock and gazed backward down the steep trail she had climbed. She was sure she could never get down again. She went into hysterics and she sat on that rock and wailed and wept, refusing to go forward or backward. It was 2 o'clock next morning before she was finally rescued by expert climbers who were sent for down in the valley.

Moral—if you're timid and frail don't take to the trail.

Rise and Give Thanks.

Cheer up my sisters, the time limit on petitions has expired, for which let us rise and give thanks. No more will we be held up on Broadway to sign this, that or the other petition for favorite candidates or measures.

No more will we be accosted as we enter church, store, marketplace or clubhouse with prayers to autograph certain legal looking documents indorsing men and measures.

No more will our door bells jangle to the touch of the man or woman begging our signature for some one of the 700 candidates for the primary ballot.

They're all filed, thank goodness, and now we'll have peace from this particular form of persecution.

Singing for Assessment.

Ellen Beach Yaw—the golden-throated nightingale whom Southern California delights to claim as her own—will again, as she has oftentimes before—lend her voice in the cause of philanthropy next Tuesday night at the Woman's Club House, No. 940 South Figueroa street, when she will give a benefit concert for Dr. Sara Morris of Santa Monica.

Dr. Morris has been presented with a big street assessment on her property at the seaside city, which she is unable to meet and this means has been taken by her friends to bridge the difficulty. She is 83 years of age—a pioneer suffragist and contemporary of Susan B. Anthony. She was a member of the first woman's club in Boston presided over by Julia Ward Howe, and, in spite of her fourscore and more years, is active and alert, and has a host of friends who will rally to her rescue.

Parliamentarians to Lunch.

Members of Mrs. J. A. Osgood's parliamentary classes, to the number of fifty or sixty, together with a few invited friends, will enjoy luncheon at the Osgood home in Sierra Madre next Saturday.

Women's Million Club.

W. J. Ford addressed the Women's Million Club last week on "Problems of Government." A particular point he made which ought to furnish food for thought is that the young man who stands before the court seeking probation and claiming to be entitled thereto by reason of the fact that he has received a good education, comes of a splendid family and belongs to what we call the best part of society, has not the same right to make this plea as the boy from the slums who has never been given a fair start in education—moral or intellectual—or by reason of economic conditions. He argued that society owes the young man from the slums something when he goes wrong, but owes less to the fellow who has been given a good start in life.

Miss Josephine Neil, who is chairman of a committee of 500 women who are backing the candidacy of Ford for District Attorney, announces 500 political teas to be given between now and the primary election on August 25.

Looks as if we would have to sit up nights at this rate, which would mean 100 teas per week. Hope the tea will be weak if the candidate is strong.

Executive Board Luncheon.

Mrs. W. P. Freeman of South Pasadena gave a luncheon last week in honor of the members of the retiring executive board of the Women's Improvement Association. A special guest of honor was Mrs. Clara Rathbun Kinsman, a recent bride and treasurer of the club during the past year. She was presented with a handsome reed sewing chair by the guests who included Mmes. Frank A. Stephens, Jonathan S. Dodge, Edward H. Rust, G. F. Miller, E. E. Washburn, Leo Longley, E. L. B. Godfrey and Mrs. J. Davis of New Jersey, who was a special guest.

Emperor William was photographed thirty-three times recently by two artists within an hour. His Majesty, probably the most photographed man in the world, never sits for a photograph, believing that a standing picture commands more respect. This time he was pictured in the uniform of an Austrian officer. Of the photographs taken, each in a different pose, the Emperor was satisfied with only one, of which he promptly ordered $1200 worth in copies.

Tobacco Habit Easily Conquered

A well-known New Yorker of wide experience has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily and completely banished in three days with delightful benefit.

The health improves wonderfully after the nicotine poison is out of the system. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits reported. No more of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette or chewing tobacco to pacify the morbid desire. The author, Edw. J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., R483, New York City, will send his book free on application, to anyone who writes to him.

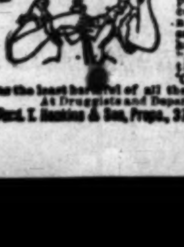
We Are Painless Dentists

And yet there are people who go to their dentist, wait in an agony of apprehension for their call to his chair and sit in justified fear and trembling while he probes and grinds, and cleans and scours and hurts, hurts, HURTS! Simply because they have not been made to appreciate to the full how absolutely unnecessary is any pain. Yale Dentists, 444 South Broadway, Third Floor, Parmelee-Dohrmann Building.



A SKIN OF BEAUTY IS A JOY FOREVER
Dr. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S
Oriental Cream
OR MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 66 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the hautton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations."

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine — double strength — is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength — from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

To Properly Treat Obstinate Wrinkles

Particularly where wrinkles are long and deep, the massage devotee is apt to rub too hard and too frequently. This loosens the skin, causes muscles to sag, aggravates the wrinkled condition—just the opposite result from that sought.

Better than massaging, or anything else, for the most obstinate wrinkles, as well as the finest lines, is a formula well known in England, which you may readily avail yourselves of, as you will have no difficulty procuring the inexpensive constituents from druggists in this country. It is this: One ounce powdered saxolite, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathe face, neck or hands in this.

The effect is really marvelous, not only as to wrinkles, but also in cases of baggy cheeks and chin. Marked improvement is noticed after the very first application. The lotion is cooling and soothing, tending to relieve fatigue and remove "that tired look."

OUTLINE PLANS FOR EDUCATION.

ELEMENTARY WORK IN CHINA TO BE INCREASED.

Committee Representing Practically All the Protestant Missions Stimulated to Further Efforts by Results of the American School System in the Philippines.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

SHANGHAI, June 28.—The China Continuation Committee, representing practically all the Protestant mission work in China, recently came to a decision at a meeting here that elementary education should receive a larger proportion of the missionary effort throughout China in the future.

The Advisory Council of the Educational Association has formulated plans for carrying out the programme, which includes uniform courses of study in mission schools and uniform examinations, normal training of teachers for elementary schools, adequate elementary school buildings, the making of the school a center of social and civic life and the standardization of buildings, equipment and courses of study by a board of control.

This advance has had its greatest stimulus through the results achieved by the remarkably efficient American school system in the Philippines, which Prof. Paul Monroe, the authority on pedagogy of Columbia University, after a visit to the Philippines, declared to be the best in the world in the light of the adaptation to the needs of the people whom it served.

In the Philippine Islands elementary education has absorbed most of the attention of the Bureau of Education. In the school year 1913-1914 there were 440,050 in the first four grades, 31,529 in the next four, 6687 in the high and normal training schools and 750 in the university located in Manila—altogether a well-balanced pyramidical system of instruction with an adequate and extensive foundation in the elementary schools.

In China hitherto the work in the higher schools has tended to overshadow that in the elementary schools. The indorsement of the Continuation Committee of the plans to organize and increase the work of elementary education in China is a significant step toward meeting the need for beginning at the bottom of the scale.

FREE SPEECH IN GREECE.

Austrian Is Arrested for Complaining in Conversation With Friend About the Raise of Fares.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

SALONIKA, July 1.—Liberty of speech is becoming so curtailed in Greece that one dare not criticise even the street car service, as an Austrian resident learned here recently.

The street car company had just raised the price of first-class fares, and while speaking to a friend on a car the Austrian took the officials to task on this account. Another passenger, overhearing the talk, summoned gendarmes, who arrested the critic. Only on protest by the Austrian Consul was he released.

Before the Grecian occupation the Turkish authorities left the street car management free to employ Turks, Greeks or Jews, as it wished, and the men were allowed to dress as they pleased. Now, to force out the Turks, the Greek officials have "invited" the company, which is Belgian, to order the men to wear caps. The result aimed at was accomplished, since the Turks, rather than give up the fez, resigned. In this manner the Moslems have been forced out of employment in many other quarters.

American Church in London.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, June 28.—King George has sent a letter to Mrs. John Hartness, the originator of the scheme, expressing his interest in the proposed American church to be built in London as a memorial to the century of peace just completed between England and America. Encouraging words were also received by cable from William H. Taft. Among the names added to the committee working on the scheme are those of the Countess of Suffolk and Lady White Todd.

Viborg Reindeer Farm.

COPENHAGEN, June 28.—A reindeer farm, stocked with 400 deer from the north of Norway, has been established by a farmer near Viborg, in Jutland, to be exploited for meat and hides. The herd seems to be prospering in its new environment.

HELPED ELEVATE GERMAN STAGE.

Duke Saxe-Meiningen Had Splendid Court Theater.

His Actors for Many Years Set Pace for Others.

Delightful Anecdotes of the Oldest Reigning Prince.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, July 4.—The death of the venerable Duke George II of Saxe-Meiningen, who was the oldest reigning prince of Europe, has directed attention to his great services for the German stage. It may be doubtful whether any other ruler did so much to elevate the character of the stage's offerings and the taste of the people. The Duke's interest in this line began in the '60's, and the first dramatist to whom he turned attention was Shakespeare. In 1872, after the death of his second wife, he married Ellen Franz, a talented actress of the Meiningen court theater, and henceforth devoted all his spare time to theatrical affairs.

Shakespeare, Kleist, Schiller and other great dramatists were given presentations of a character far in advance of anything previously seen in Germany. In the '70's and '80's the "Meininger," as the court actors of Saxe-Meiningen were termed, were the criterion by which all other serious actors were judged. In his last years the Duke became deaf, but his interest in the theater was strong until the last.

To Duke George the inhabitants of Saxe-Meiningen owe it that they are citizens of a sovereign state of the empire. His father was a bitter enemy of Prussia, and when the war with Austria broke out in 1866 he abdicated in favor of George II, in preference to joining forces with Prussia. George, a warm friend of Prussia, promptly cast his lot with her, and thus saved Saxe-Meiningen from the fate that met Hesse-Nassau, the ruler of which, joining hands with Austria, lost his throne and saw his land become a Prussian province.

CRITICISM ANSWERED.

The newspapers have been producing some delightful anecdotes in connection with the Duke's theatrical activities. Ludwig Barnay, who has since become one of the leading actors of Germany, played "Hamlet" with the "Meininger" some forty years ago. At the rehearsals it was the custom of the Duke to sit alone in the audience room and make his comments from time to time on the work of the actors. In the scene of Hamlet with the players Barnay spoke in a rather careless, amateur manner the lines that Hamlet quoted from the imaginary play as addressed by Aeneas to Queen Dido. The Duke was not pleased and remarked: "I think, Herr Barnay, that this speech must not be spoken in such a trivial, conversational tone, but in a finer style." Barnay answered that Hamlet was only a dilettante, and no actor, to which the Duke replied that Polonius bestowed very high praise upon Hamlet's declamation. "In my eagerness to defend my view," says Barnay, I answered: "Yes, Your Highness, but Polonius was a courtier, and such people always regard everything that a prince does as something wonderful." The Duke's only reply to this sally was a peal of laughter that rang through the theater.

Paul Lindau, well known for nearly two generations of Germans as writer and theatrical manager, served the Duke in the latter function in the early days of the "Meininger;" but after several years he came to the conclusion that the little town of Meiningen afforded too narrow a field for him, and sent in his resignation. "A poet," he write, "needs the great city, needs strong impressions—and this he can never have at Meiningen. Here my poetic gift is wasting away; I can do no creative work here." The Duke accepted the resignation, but wrote on the margin: "Herr Lindau should go to Bauerbach; Schiller wrote his 'Don Carlos' there."

THE NEW DUKE.

Bernhard Frederick, the new Duke, might have become one of Germany's military leaders but for an incident which throws a significant light on the attitude of those in authority toward the mistreatment of soldiers. The Duke, who had taken part in the Franco-German war as a lieutenant, became later commanding general of the Sixth Army Corps. While he held this post a soldier committed suicide to escape continued maltreatment by a non-commissioned officer. The affair, unfortunately by no means the first of its kind, drew from Bernhard a sharp order against such brutality. The order provided that every case of mishandling was to be reported to the general commanding forthwith, and that the order should be read to all officers, non-commissioned officers and privates, at least three times yearly.

The order was generally acclaimed by the public, but it evoked the sharpest displeasure of the officer corps and of the reactionary press. Great was the astonishment of civilian circles a few weeks later when it was learned that Bernhard had, in a personal letter from the Emperor, been commanded to withdraw the order, and that he had thereupon resigned. His conduct evoked wide sympathy for his humanity and sense of justice, and he is still popular because of his stand at that time.

The new Duke is 63 years old. He has found time, aside from his military duties, to make himself an authority in ancient Greek literature, and he bears the popular name of "the scholar." He married in 1878 the Princess Charlotte of Prussia, eldest sister of the Emperor.

GOTTHALS'S HOUSE REMOVED.

Governor of Canal Zone Resides in Cottage Until Mansion Is Built at Ancon.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PANAMA, July 1.—The house at Culebra, which for seven years has been the home of Col. Goethals, has been removed. It probably will be reerected at Ancon, on the site of the cemetery from which the bodies were recently disinterred, and again serve as the home of the Governor of the Canal Zone until a substantial Governors' mansion is built.

In the meantime Col. Goethals is ocupying the little cottage at Culebra formerly occupied by his son, Lieut. George R. Goethals, recently transferred to West Point.

As soon as the new administration building is completed at Balboa, Col. Goethals will transfer his offices to it and also will remove his residence to Ancon. The two towns practically are one.

The destruction of the engineer's residence marks the beginning of the end of Culebra, which is to be abandoned along with Empire and other Canal Zone towns.

TARPON AT PANAMA.

Many Big Fellows Are Caught in the Chagres River, and Fishing Is Popular.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PANAMA, July 11.—Tarpon fishing has become one of the chief sports of the isthmus. It has been discovered that many large fish come up the Chagres River from salt water to feed on the small fish that come through the spillway from Gatun Lake.

On several occasions recently tarpon from three to four feet long have been captured just below the end of the spillway.

The Chagres River, just below the spillway and down to the Caribbean, is very deep and has very little current. Gatun Lake is the breeding ground for many fish and these flow over the spillway dam with the huge volume of water when the gates are opened.

HEIR TO THRONE AT UNIVERSITY.

PRINCE OF WALES LIKE ANY TITLED UNDERGRADUATE.

Picture Showing Him Puffing at a Huge Bull-Dog Pipe With the Oxford Officers' Training Corps Believed Reason Queen Mary Recalled Him to London.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 4.—The Prince of Wales, who has just completed two years at Oxford, is finding his exploits at that institution of learning under critical review in the newspapers. An undergraduate, who has had an opportunity to see much of this future King of England, notes his impressions in a seemingly frank manner.

"Viewed impartially," he says, "the Prince's career has been neither better nor worse than that of the average titled undergraduate. He has embarked on many of the manly sports of youth, and excelled in none. Perhaps the best comment on his good spirit and his lack of 'side' was the fact that he played consistently at association football with the Magdalen College second eleven.

"For a long time he was the despair of his equerry but as a concession to popular opinion, expressed and unexpressed, he has acquired some skill in the saddle, and with it some of the standing that falls only to hunting men at Oxford.

"That the Prince should take an equal footing with all in undergraduate life was, of course, an innovation attended, as one might expect, by advantages and drawbacks. The curious interest with which he was pestered in his early weeks soon wore off, but the natural desire to be intimately associated with a Prince so easy of access was harder to kill.

"Magdalen second eleven last season proved far more attractive to many men than the college senior team. Little or no concession has been made to his royalty. I saw him the other day waiting at the door of one of the leading doctors in Oxford. On the other hand he has had freedom and ease which he will never again enjoy; he has mixed unostentatiously with people of all ranks; he has endured bravely and well the discomforts of camp life as a private; and he has been treated with a quiet, well-bred respect by every member of the university."

The Prince has rather startled his university companions lately by taking to the pipe and giving up, for the moment, the cigarette. A picture of him with the Oxford officers' training corps shows the Prince puffing at a great bull dog pipe, and apparently enjoying it. The next day, however, he left his regiment, which had not finished its training, and came to London. Gossips are saying that Queen Mary having seen the picture sent for him.

ALAMO TRIBUTE BY A JAPANESE.

PROF. SHIGO PLANS MEMORIAL TO BONHAM, WHO FELL IN NOTED BATTLE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, July 15.—Prof. Shigetaka Shigo, the eminent geographer, traveler and author, who will go to the United States this fall to address the American Historical Society at Washington, D. C., will fulfill during his visit a long-cherished desire to erect a memorial at San Antonio, Tex., on the grave of the famous Bonham whose defense of the Alamo, with his heroic band of Texans, is one of the landmarks of American history.

Dr. Shigo's admiration of Bonham is an old story. In his youth the professor had two enthusiasms, one for the romantic record of ancient Japan, and the other for the story of the United States as told by Quackenbos to successive generations of schoolboys. The famous defense of the Texans fired his imagination and when he discovered in Japanese history an almost exact parallel in the battle of Narashimo, during the Tokugawa Shogunate, the ambition grew that some day he might find a way of commemorating publicly the undying admiration which the story of the Alamo had awakened in a Japanese schoolboy.

His scientific visit to America offers the desired opportunity. Dr. Shigo will take with him two blocks of stone from the battlefield of Narashimo. A Japanese poem which he has composed in honor of Bonham's defense will be carved on one of the stones, which will both be erected over Bonham's grave.

Dr. Shigo has written to the Mayor of San Antonio, asking if the city will accept this memorial.

REVIVAL OF ROMANCHE.

Swiss Canton Ballots in Favor of Making Ancient Tongue Language of Courts.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERNE, July 5.—The voters in the canton of Grisons have just balloted almost unanimously in favor of Romanche being the obligatory language of the courts. Romanche is a survival of an ancient tongue derived from Latin, and is one of the four languages officially recognized in the Swiss Parliament, the others being German, French and Italian. Romanche has been dying for centuries and is now spoken only in the canton of Grisons and small districts in Eastern Switzerland, where Latin was planted by the legionaries of Caesar who settled there. Several of the judges in the Grisons courts and many lawyers practicing in them have only slight knowledge of Romanche as cases usually have been pleaded in German and Italian.

Marble Fountain. By Maud Daggett.

"still unravished bride of quietness," that lovely "foster-child of silence and slow time," for I felt that this, too, was an "Attic shape," an expression of classic beauty. And the fountain is in harmony with the beauty of Southern California, as the sculptor had intended it to be.

Miss Daggett studied modeling for one year in Paris and one year in Rome, and has been back for three years. Besides her fountains, she has done many interesting portraits in relief and the round, most of which have been shown in European and American exhibitions. She recently converted the old barn behind the homstead at No. 530 Orange Grove avenue, Pasadena, into a very domfortable work studio, and here the Seibert fountain was modeled.

A Few New Pictures.

Though there is no formal exhibition at the Kanst gallery, No. 842 South Spring street, a number of new pictures have just been hung on the walls. These are all by painters of reputation.

Frank W. Cuprien, who has been painting at Catalina this summer, and whose permanent studio is now at Laguna Beach, has a large canvas which shows the great god Pan in a novel position—perched, with his tuneful pipes, in the niche of a high, rocky abutment above a dark blue sea. The purpling headland beyond the sheer cliff, and the clouds above the horizon, lavender touched with rose, suggest afternoon just before the sun begins to go down.

"The Calm" is another interesting marine from Cuprien's brush. A light blue sea stretches under a quiet, grayish sky, and is seen from a height, reefs of brown rock lying below. "November's Gray," painted in an attractive scheme of color, gives fine movement in the waves surging around the rocks, the water being very real in quality. "Westward, Ho!" is a finely dramatic effect, a ship seen in full sail on a dark blue sea against a palish purple sky.

E. Irving Couse has two Indian pictures in his usual style. One of the "Indian Music," shows us a semi-nude figure squatting above a blue stream and blowing on his sylvan flute, cut, perhaps, from some of the dark green shrubbery behind him. The other, "The Waterfall," has another crouching semi-nude figure, a young buck watching with fascinated gaze the swirl of green waters among rocks.

"Golden California" comes from the able hand of Maurice Braun. Well massed trees are seen against the sunlight that gives living glory to the middle distance, the foreground lying in a shadow full of subdued but lively and varied colors.

M. Lane, who lives on a ranch in Humboldt county, sends a picture of noble big trees from there. The wood interior is like that of some stupendous cathedral, an aisle under a Gothic arch. The picture is very well painted, a sincere study of nature in one of her grand moods.

ART NOTES.

Artistic photographs of Indian life by T. Harmon Parkhurst are being exhibited at Green's, No. 815 South Hill street. Parkhurst lives in Hollywood, but as an archaeologist he has spent the past two years among the Indians of Arizona and New Mexico. He is to furnish an exhibit of Indian pictures for the San Diego exposition, and also for the International Congress of Americanists to be held in the National Museum at Washington in October.

Maude Lightfoot Reaburn, who has had a studio in Los Angeles for a number of years, will shortly go to Washington, D. C., her former home. Leaving Washington, in the fall, she will go to Alaska to join her husband, DeWitt Lee Reaburn, a civil engineer, where she will remain for an indefinite period. Mrs. Reaburn was winner of a bronze medal for painting at the recent exposition in Seattle.

Will Chapin, well known as a cartoonist and an illustrator, has been doing a great deal of landscape painting of late. Just now he is working on a series of decorative landscape panels to be placed in his house in Alhambra. All have figures, and are Californian in subject, vivid studies of life on the desert and among the mountains.

Robert Henri, the famous painter and teacher from New York, left Los Angeles for La Jolla last week, to remain there through the summer painting the "types" to be found near the Mexican line. Henry Lovins of Hollywood, a former pupil of Henri, will spend the summer in La Jolla, and will have an outdoor sketching class.

Royar is planning an exhibition of thumb-box sketches by local painters. It will be held in the new gallery he has just completed, and will probably open about August 20. Some strong little pictures may be looked for.

ETHICS OF THE STAGE ROBBER.

YOSEMITE VISITOR INTERVIEWS AN OLD DRIVER.

Only Dead Men Can Have Big Trees Named After Them, and Quite Naturally There's No Competition for Honor—Ups and Downs of Charmed Valley.

BY SYDNEY FORD.

"Ever have any experience with stage robbers?" I asked the driver as the big four-horse coach lumbered slowly down the steep roadway from Mariposa Grove to Wawona.

"Yes, seven years ago," he replied. "That's the last time the gentlemen of the road held us up in Yosemite. I was driving the stage in from Raymond to Wawona. It was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon—and it was a hot day. We had just reached a sunny stretch of road on the up-grade when a man jumped out from behind a big tree, covered me with his gun and ordered me to stop. He wore the usual mask over his face, and we distinctly heard voices of others of the gang, who were hidden behind the trees ready to take a hand if necessary, so I lost no time in coming to a halt. He then ordered the ten passengers to get out and line up in a row between him and the stage, meanwhile keeping us covered with his gun. The passengers piled out and obeyed orders. He designated one of them—an excitable little bald-headed man, to pass the hat and search the passengers. The bald-headed chap was so scared that he did the business as thoroughly as if he were an accomplice. He went through the pockets of his fellow-passengers and extracted every cent. One young lady had taken the precaution to drop her purse in the stage before she alighted, and when the searcher got to her she told the robber she had no money.

" 'Queer you should be traveling about penniless,' he remarked; 'better look in the stage, little girl. Trot along, now, and be quick about it.' She trotted.

"When all the passengers had been relieved of their valuables and cash—amounting to about $600—the robber directed the bald-headed man to place the hat in the middle of the road and ordered everybody on board the stage.

" 'Now drive on,' he told me, 'and don't you dare look behind you.'

"Just before we started, a lady asked the robber to return to her a necklace and rosary that was an heirloom.

" 'Certainly, lady,' politely replied the highwayman, 'it's of no value to me. I can't drop my gun long enough to find it in the hat, but I'll leave it here on this rock beside the road and the stage driver can get it tomorrow.' "

"Did he do it?" I asked.

"Yes," replied the driver; "next day I found the necklace, the ten empty purses, and some Canadian dimes and foreign coins in the exact spot the robber had designated."

"Was he ever captured?"

"No. Some thought it was Black Bart, but it wasn't—I'm sure of that."

HORSES INTERESTING.

In this age of automobiles, an interesting feature of travel in the Yosemite is the horses that draw the big stages. One of them—Fargo—is a wonder. He is 18 years old, the oldest horse in point of service on the Yosemite roads, having been on duty for thirteen years and never missed a trip. He is a handsome bay and so gay that if the driver touches him with the merest whisk of the whip he dances and cavorts like a colt.

From November till March the Yosemite stage horses have a vacation, and it requires the active services of no less than five strong men to put the harness on Fargo in the spring. He stands on his hind legs and paws the air like a circus horse. His mat Wells—fell in his tracks a year ago and broke his neck, so now Fargo has May for his running mate. They are the leaders on one of the Wawona-Mariposa stages.

AMERICAN LOUVRE.

"Galen Clark must have thought he 'had 'em' when he sighted the first big tree in the Mariposa forest," remarked a passenger as the stage lumbered past that monarch of Mariposa grove—Grizzly Giant.

It sounds like a big story—a tree 8000 years old and containing enough lumber to cover the entire hull of a great ocean liner like the Mauretania, or sheath a building seventeen stories high and cover all its floors—but such is the careful estimate of this mammoth tree which, it is said, would cut 1,000,000 feet of one-inch boards.

Every State in the Union has a big tree named for it—and all the great American statesmen—that is—those who are dead. Like the Louvre in Paris where no pictures of living artists are permitted to be hung—no living man may be honored by a namesake in Mariposa grove until he is dead. This method naturally eliminates any controversy or jealousy on the part of honorees. You simply have to be dead in order to arrive in Mariposa grove. Naturally that is rather a drawback.

YOSEMITE APPROACH.

To navigate Yosemite Valley you must describe a horseshoe, with El Portal at one end and Wanona at the other. You can take your choice—either begin at the climax, Wanona, and work down the grades 4000 feet to the floor of the valley, or vice versa, begin on a level and climb, scale, ascend, as it were, to the heights. Personally, I prefer this latter method. I like to arrive gradually—it's more impressive and less dizzying to me than to suddenly find myself on the brink of a precipice looking down 4000 or 10,000 feet.

One of the places one must not fail to visit in Yosemite is La Conte Lodge—that picturesque structure built of native rocks erected near Camp Curry to the memory of Joseph La Conte, the scientist and savant whose geological researches in Yosemite are a part of its history. He died here in the valley and his admirers have built to his memory this lodge. Within is a library of books and magazines and pamphlets containing all that is worth while that has ever been written of Yosemite. There is a visitor's register and as I inscribed my name I noticed under the same date the autographs of tourists from all over the country—Washington, University of Virginia, New York, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, July 17.

Coralie, Darling:

Really, you missed a treat when you went off just before the Laytonelli's party. It was quite one of the merriest, maddest affairs you ever heard of. If only the Signora was not so contemptuous of newspaper publicity, a flashlight picture of that wonderful ballroom would have created the sensation of the hour.

As it was, secure in the knowledge that we could be as frivolous as we liked with impunity, we all turned out in the most amazing costumes, cubists, futurists, crinolines, Grecian classics, mythical goddesses and rampant feminists. I had no idea we had so much ingenuity and originality.

Essy certainly created the real stir of the occasion. Picture that tall, willowy young person in long clingy crepe de chine trousers, very full and tied in at the ankles with wide gold ribbons. And barely reaching below her hips a wide, fantastic crinoline, wired exuberantly, all of gold lace and pink roses. A cubist bodice of bright red patent leather, with shoes to match, and the silliest, cheekiest, maddest hat and parasol you ever imagined. She simpered up the middle of the room on the arm of a cubist cavalier in white, with massive black facings. They made the most gorgeously absurd couple, and they danced a mad new dance which they surely invented for the occasion, until we were all laughing so helplessly they had to be implored to stop.

Katherine did the patent leather idea in extremis, and really looked eccentrically dashing. She meant to be extravagant, but really, we felt that she had only achieved ultra-smartness. A patent-leather hat, a la cubist, with a long, whimsical feather that looked like dripping black varnish, a white chintz dress all shiny and stiff with a wide expanse of patent leather belt, long, pointed patent leather shoes, bag and gloves to match, and patent leather slashes let into her sunshade.

Mabel and Walter went as a topsy-turvy Titania and Bottom—that is to say, she wore the donkey's head and he gazed at her rapturously, and lavished devotion upon her. He wore all the fairy trappings—the golded Prince Charming in love with a hideous hee-haw! He introduced her all around as his beautiful wife, and talked magnificently about keeping women on their pedestal. It was quite the funniest, unkindest skit on women I have seen.

The costume-ball idea seems to have fluttered in again for a last wild merry splurge before the season finally dies. Two at the Hotel Coronado, on August 1, a la Grecian, and the other on the 9th, glorified calico! We are all going down for the Grecian affair—I make a perfectly ducky Penelope in twenty yards of white silk just swathed round my lithe young figure. The sandals are something of a trial—what a pity—we can't wear coy black patches on our corns!

The Fords—the Pasadena Fords, you know—had a dance at the Midwick on Thursday evening. Only about fifty guests, but the cream of us.

A really happy reunion of recent brides and won't-have-to-wait-very-long-they-says took place at the Harry Bordens on Wednesday. It was, of course, for Juliet, and Sally was there, too, and Mrs. Louis Tolhurst, and all the Very Nicest Girls—the two Katherines, Virginia, Elizabeth, Evangeline, Florence.

Oh, yes, the Lantz-McKinley engagement was duly announced at Margaret's party, and we met Helen, his sister, you know, who has come over for a long visit to extend into September, when the wedding takes place. Pretty little Lucy, it seems such a little while ago that she was a wisp of a school girl, and soon she will be a proud matron.

Yes, it's quite true about Marguerite Rimpau and Joe Mayers. They only announced it officially yesterday but they have been suspects for a long time. No date set for the wedding yet, rather imagine they, too, will wait till the fall.

So you heard about that yachting trip, too, did you? Who tells you all these things? The Adams yacht is of the de luxe genre, my dear, and they will have a gorgeous time. The West Indies, Panama Canal and home on this coast. How one envies them. I dont mind marrying a poor man, but I do hope he'll be able to afford a yacht.

Jessie Macfarland is to be married on Tuesday at St. Johns, Tom Priestly bein gthe lucky man. But possibly that is not news to you, either; really, I don't see why you should manage to attract all the gossip.

We are having quite a gala day at San Gabriel tomorrow, thoroughly frivolous. Tennis, golf, lawn teas, dancing, and still more dancing after dinner—a sort of glad wind-up before we all depart for distant points. There are a good many of us still in town, though; the mixed foursomes out at the Los Angeles Country Club seem to anticipate a large entry on Sunday, anyway.

No, that is a wicked story about poor dear Hoppy. He did not kneel down and say his prayers—he only looked as if he wanted to. Besides, the widow was really very cutting. He was saying in his sweet, poetic way that he yearned to be a butterfly, to live the care-free sun-laden life for a day, and she chipped in with "some one bring me a net—and a pin, please." And you know how sensitive he is. He does his hair so beautifully, and has acquired to perfection the interesting knack of running his long, slender fingers through it. And he sighs so exquisitely. And he is never seen without a dainty little volume of poems. I think some one like that is an asset in a community and ought to be protected. I just love showing him off to newcomers, green jade cuff links and all.

That Redlands boy came down to see Molly again last week—quite a case there, cherie. That's the third time in two weeks. He had a little accident with his machine this time, and Molly was deliciously concerned about him. They do say he is quite a parti. He certainly has nice manners.

Yes, Muriel's photographs are thoroughly bad style, aren't they? Much too theatrical and obviously posed. We at least affect simplicity nowadays—even if we are not exactly. It's awful to hand oneself down to posterity in the guise of a picture post-card actress.

Your affectionate DOLLY.

OVER THE SEA.

He is also interested in the economic separation of Hungary from Austria.

The American man, they say, is nothing but a money-making machine for his women, and for these the German critics have not words enough to express their contempt. Nowhere in the world, they say, is a woman more useless than in America.

THE WEEK.

PARTIES, RECEPTIONS, DINNERS, WEDDINGS AND THE LIKE.

THE largest and most elaborate benefit function of the summer and one of the notable events of the kind of the year is that which is to be given for the Coleman House Association on the picturesque grounds of former Senator and Mrs. Stephen W. Dorsey, on the 28th inst. As the total of the receipts to be devoted to the worthy charity depends to a large extent upon the number in attendance, society will be out in force. In addition, 5000 tickets have been placed on sale at a number of downtown stores and every effort will be made to increase the number so represented by individual endeavor on the part of the matrons who have assumed active charge of the affair.

Plans are practically completed for the decoration of the grounds, to be made into a setting worthy of the pretentious enterprise. Everything has or will be donated, so that the gross receipts will also be the net and that the settlement work going forward under the direction of Mrs. Coleman may be the greater gainer. Among the articles furnished gratis by different merchants of the city are the canvas, chairs, tables, glass and silverware, refreshments, etc.

The fete will occupy the entire afternoon and evening and, with the exception of the part played by six or eight charmingly-decorated booths, the terpsichorean garage and the large reception pavilion, everything will be al fresco. Dancing, both of the classic and popular varieties, is to be a feature, and a number of well-known artists will contribute their services to the common cause.

One of the prettiest parts of the programme will be supplied by the Coleman House children themselves. For the most part they will form the elaborate pageant of the children of all nations, for it is to a large extent among the little aliens that the good work of the association is done. At the Bauchet-street settlement instruction is given to more than 1000 persons monthly in the ideals of things American. Not the least of the good accomplished by the fete will be a practical demonstration of the work which it is intended to assist.

South Pasadena.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES ALLISON YIELDING, No. 248 Pasadena avenue, formally announce the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Lucille Elizabeth Yielding, to Morton Doris Allison of Detroit, the marriage to be held in the early fall. A host of friends will be interested in this announcement, as Miss Yielding has long been a resident of this city, and is very popular among the younger social set. The groom-to-be is a business man of Detroit, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Allison. The young couple will make their home in the eastern city.

Honoring the birthday anniversary of her husband, Mrs. Norman Foote Marsh entertained with a dinner at her home, No. 911 Fair Oaks avenue, Friday evening. Centering the long table was a silver candelabra, with red silk beaded fringe shades, while on either end were white baskets filled with showers of crimson carnations, the same blossom being used as favors for each guest. Nut baskets were Cluny lace, to which were attached red monagrammed name cards with red tulle ribbon. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Marsh, Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. William Cochrane, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Tussing, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Byers Manchester, Mrs. E. L. B. Godfrey, Mrs. J. Davis of Camden, N. Mrs. Sherman Hoyt, No. 917 Buena Vista street, and her two daughters, Miss Ruth and Miss Blossom, will go to Coronado Beach for their summer outing, after which they will travel east to Washington and New York and visit until time for the young ladies to enter school in the fall. Prior to their trip to the southern beach, Miss Ruth Hoyt is the guest of Miss Georgiana Drummond in the Montecito colony at Santa Barbara.

The Church of Our Savior at San Gabriel was beautifully decorated Friday evening with hydrangeas, huge bows of tulle and asparagus plumosus, the occasion being the wedding of Miss Mary Gibbs, daughter of Mrs. Kate M. Gibbs, No. 1622 Bank street, South Pasadena, and Sydney A. Holyoke of Milwaukee.

The wedding was a simple affair, there being no attendants. The bridal gown was a dainty creation of pale blue French batiste, an imported model, heavily embroidered, fashioned with a long Russian tunic. The costume was completed with a shower of valley lilies. The bride's mother was gowned in black satin. As the bridal party entered, passing through an aisle formed of hydrangeas, the organist played a popular wedding march, and the rector, Rev. John Atwell, read the service in front of the altar, which was banked with the blossoms. An informal reception followed at the church, after which the young couple left immediately for the Rocky Mountains, where they will enjoy an extended honeymoon, when they will go to Milwaukee, where the groom is in business.

The wedding is the culmination of a romance, which had its inception in Fresno, where the groom was hunting a nurse who had taken care of the elder Holyoke, in his last illness, as she was wanted to testify in a suit brought to break the will of his father. He was referred to Miss Gibbs.

One of the enjoyable affairs of the week was the closing meeting of the Saturday Evening Auction Bridge Club. At the beginning of the year the club had been didived into two sections—the loosers to treat the winners with a dinner. Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Blatner and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beardslee offered their beautiful home for the occasion, the dinner occurring last evening. The table was abloom with pink blossoms—hydrangeas, carnations and roses entering into the artistic scheme. Cards adorned with heads of dainty young girls marked covers for Mr. and Mrs. Blatner, Mr. and Mrs. Beardslee, Mr. and Mrs. Mossom G. Ritchie, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. William Carlin, Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Brasier, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bingham, and special guests Mr. Avery and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond.

Eagle Rock.

THE marriage of Wallace Tupper of Glendale to Miss Anna Megilligan of Eagle Rock, while not coming as a surprise to their respective families, will, however, come as a surprise to their many friends, among whom the young couple were very popular. They motored to San Diego last Sunday and were married there. The groom is a rising young business man and the bride is a niece of the Misses Swan of this city, and has made her home with them for a good many years and is a very popular young lady.

Miss Alice Claire Browne entertained a number of her friends recently at her pretty new home, No. 202 West Ellenwood drive. They were the Misses Widenham of the Girls' Collegiate School and Helen Wallace, daughter of Lieut.-Gov. Wallace. On Tuesday she gave an afternoon for members of her class at the Girls' Collegiate School. There were present the Misses Esther Bartlett, Ione Kirk, Elva Nelson, N. Scholotte, Helen Wallace, Dorothy McKenzie, Margery Schoeller, Rebecca Barradaille, Beulah Bartlett and Frances McVey.

Several people from Eagle Rock have just returned from a two weeks' camping and fishing trip at Camp Rincon. They were Miss Alice Hoyt, Avery Hoyt, Susie Sanderson, Miss Rita Costa, Mrs. Gee, Mr. and Mrs. Lally and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Moshier, the latter couple being the chaperones for the party. Misses Leora and Janet Durfey of Fresno, are visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Rowland, of South Central avenue.

Tropico.

THE beautiful home of Col. and Mrs. Tom C. Thornton at the intersection of Central avenue and Riverdale drive, was a veritable fairyland, a land of beauty and enchantment, Thursday evening, when the lyric section of the Tropico Thursday Afternoon Club gave a French fete. Japanese lanterns of dainty pastel shades were festooned throughout the large and spacious grounds. From trees and shrubbery colored lights gleamed. Persian rugs and Navajo blankets were arranged in cosy nooks for those who desired a quiet tete-a-tete. Booths decorated in pastel shades were dotted over the lawn, at which candies, bonbons, punch, ices, coffee and chocolate were served. The large cement tennis court, which is inclosed in vines, was seated for the large audience, who enjoyed the delightful programme that was rendered under the skillful management of Miss Helen Beatrice Cooper, musical director of the lyric section. Miss Cooper and Mrs. Helen De Gaston, the latter accompaniste, appeared in old rose satin gowns of the 1774 period, while the twenty-four members of the lyric section wore gowns patterned from the French period when Marie Antoinette first introduced the French fete. The programme consisted of "'Twas April" (Nevin,) and "Old Black Joe," with Mrs. Dorothy Van Die as soloist; "Barcarolle" (Offenbach-Sherwood;) "Mammy's Lullaby," "Cupid Made Love to the Moon," Mrs. Faye Brown, soloist; "Good Night, Beloved," Lyric section; "Carmena," Miss Helen Beatrice Cooper; readings, child dialects, Mrs. Eustace Benton Moore, Mrs. John Seaman and Mr. Harlburt Harrison gave the Poly Tango, as arranged by Mr. Harrison. Following the programme dancing was enjoyed until a late hour on the tennis court. Miss Minnie Thornton, the accomplished sister of Col. Thornton, in a beautiful gown of white embrodery, and Mrs. Mary Edwards in a pink satin, a replica of the 1774 period, assisted Miss Cooper, Mrs. W. H. Kimball, Mrs. E. B. Moore, Miss Lydia Payro, Mrs. Helen De Gaston and Mrs. E. J. Pruess, in rendering the French fete a social as well as financial success.

Mrs. W. E. Burke and sons, Robert, Frank and Billy Burke, left for Detroit, Mich., Sunday, their future home. Mr. Burke and son, Richard Burke, left for that city the first of June.

Mr. and Mrs. Eustace Benton Moore entertained with a dinner party at their home on Blanche avenue Sunday, when the complimented guests were Mr. and Mrs. Milton Thompson, Misses Naomi and Miriam Thompson of Glendale. The table was centered with a large bowl of red and white roses and graceful ferns.

Our Window

this week shows many beautiful and distinctive ideas in dainty summer draperies. Lovers of the correct in home furnishings will find this display well worth making a special effort to see.

Dainty Draperies For Summer

NO HOME can be said to be in full accord with the spirit and feeling of summer without its furnishings of cool, dainty summer draperies.

The "California's" showing of new and exclusive summer draperies, curtains and upholstery fabrics was never more comprehensive, nor the colors and designs more tastefully attractive, than this season.

—Quaint and modern creations in French and English cretonnes and chintzes.

—French shadow-warp taffetas in soft, delicate colors.

—English block-printed linens in many interesting designs, some with black grounds—suitable for hangings and bed coverings.

—And innumerable other recent conceits from the looms of the textile art centers of America and Europe.

The "California's" summer draperies—in accordance with the principle which governs throughout the store—are all priced on our "close-margin" profit system. Whether your purchase amounts to a few dollars or a few hundred dollars, it will represent the greatest value obtainable for the money.

We cordially invite you to come and see these new and distinctive summer draperies—to avail yourself freely of the advice of our experts in artistic interior furnishing—and to make liberal comparison of our values.

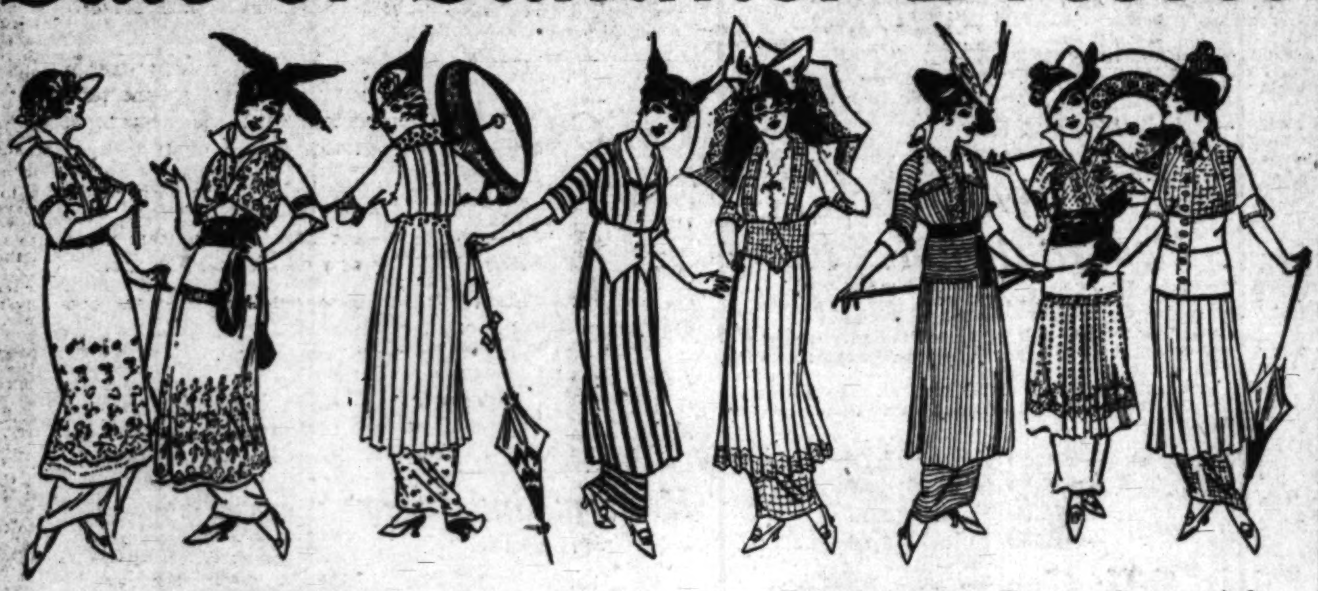
Sale of Summer Dresses



Here are pictures of eight of the dresses, but there are scores of other styles that are just as pretty. See our windows.

A Dress Manufacturer Was Compelled to Sacrifice 350 of His Prettiest Dresses—We Bought Them at About Half Price

Lawns, Organdies, Crepes, Flowered Voiles, Plain Voiles, Awning Stripes—All in the "Just Out" Styles

At $3.95 200 Dresses Worth to $10

We feel that the public is entitled to an explanation of these extraordinary prices for dresses that everyone wants. The manufacturer—we have known him long and favorably—became tied up financially. Things got to a point where he had to have several thousand dollars in a hurry or close down his workrooms. He had 350 dainty little dresses, all made up within the last two weeks. There was nothing to do but turn them into cash.

At $5.95 150 Dresses Worth to $15

This store is noted all over the country for its big operations in dresses. So nothing was more natural than we should be asked to handle these 350 dresses. The prices agreed upon at which the dresses were to be sold were $3.95 and $5.95. And, although these dresses are the latest models—perfectly new and spotlessly fresh, and would ordinarily be retailed for $5.00 to $15.00—we can turn the entire purchase over to our customers at two marvelous prices, $3.95 and $5.95.

The subject of the afternoon's discourse was Japan, led by Mrs. S. P. Jewett and Mrs. Graham. At the conclusion of the interesting subject Japanese refreshments were served by two dainty maidens in Japanese costume. Santa Paula.

THE marriage of Miss Edna Burnett of Santa Paula to Henry Young was celebrated at the beautiful new home of the groom in Bardsdale, next to his father's home. The various rooms of the house were aglow with an abundance of Shasta daisies and fern and it was under a canopy of these flowers that the ceremony was performed. After the ceremony a delicious wedding supper was served on tables arranged on the lawn at the home of the groom's parents, adjoining. The Rev. George B. Cliff of Santa Paula performed the ceremony, others attending from here including Mr. Burnett, Henry Burnett and Miss Ruth Burnett, who attended her sister. The bride was daintily gowned in white shadow lace with overdrape of chiffon, caught artistically with tiny white rosebuds, which also formed a wreath to hold her veil. Oscar Winkler attended the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Young are now enjoying a motor tour through the northern part of the State.

Screened from view by the huge drooping oak trees of Mill Park, more than sixty guests gathered Saturday afternoon to enjoy the hospitality of the Current Events Club. Charming in its simplicity was the luncheon presided over by Mrs. J. H. Orcutt Tuesday at her country home east of here. A profusion of dahlias and roses were used in the living-room, with Shasta daisies in the dining-room, where a delicious four-course luncheon was served. Tustin.

MISSING greatly one of the most popular former members of the club, Mrs. J. C. Stearns, who recently went to Watsonville for residence, the ladies of the Tustin Twelve met yesterday with Mrs. B. F. Nimmo at her Lyons street home. The unusual display of artistic needlework over which the fingers of the women were busy during chat and the enjoyment of pleasing vocal and instrumental numbers by Mrs. Charles Johnson, indicated the nature of the club. Mrs. Nimmo had most tastefully decorated her pretty home with a generous profusion of pink roses, and the pink color scheme was evident in the dainty refreshments served in two courses on small tables conveniently arranged for conversational groups. Besides the hostess, the members of the club present were Mmes. E. J. Cranston, Albert Fuller, Arthur Hoefer, Fred Poole, J. E. Pearce, Fred Pollard, J. S. House, E. H. Smith, Fred Moorhead, Charles Artz, Charles Johnson.

Entirely informal was a recent small evening party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Sharpless, which is charmingly convenient and well arranged for social affairs. Its nearness to the Fourth of July gave the event a patriotic atmosphere. Following tennis games in the afternoon, the evening was spent in music and chat and the enjoyment of fireworks for the younger members of the Sharpless family, which nevertheless were equally enjoyed by the older ones. Besides the family circle there were present Miss Gladys Vanhise, Miss Inez Phinney, Miss Dorothy Utt and Miss Ada May Sharpless; Messrs. Earle Fraser, Lynford Hess and Willis Cock. Delicious refreshments were served during the evening.

A PROFUSION of pale pink blossoms, intermingled with greenery, greeted the members of the Euchre Club on Thursday afternoon when they assembled at the charming home of Mrs. J. S. Grim, Frank Shanley, William Falkenstein, Frederick Rimpau, Ferdinand Backs, John Benderscheidt, W. L. Finney, H. Strodhoff, John J. Dwyer, George Terry, D. A. Cole, G. W. Closson, C. E. Chamberlain, Turck, and Miss Anne Everhardy. The high scores were achieved by Mmes. Frederick Rimpau, Cole and Turck. A prettily-appointed luncheon was served at the conclusion of the happy event.

Honoring Mr. and Mrs. L. Ralph Abbott of Imperial, who are spending the fortnight in Anaheim, Mrs. C. H. Newcombe entertained with a delightful dinner on Sunday. A huge Japanese basket filled with pink rosebuds and ferns graced the table and feathery fern leaves were placed intermittently about the snowy cloth. Colton.

CUPID has been playing havoc in the ranks of the younger set of the city for the past two months, the current week seeing the culmination of two interesting romances, both of which came as complete surprises. Sunday evening last saw the plighting of the nuptial troth of Miss Leila Stark, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Stark, the former agent for the Santa Fe Railroad here, and William Richard Ellery, only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Ellery. The ceremony took place at the Presbyterian manse, with the Rev. Ralph Marshall Davis officiating, and was witnessed by only an aunt and cousin of the bride, Mrs. R. H. Bailey and Miss Rowena Bailey. The following morning the happy pair left on a honeymoon trip to San Diego. Both are talented musicians, the bride, who graduated in June from the local High School, and is the first of her class to be married, being a pianist of ability, and the groom, who was graduated in 1912, being a student since then at the Von Stein Academy of Music in Los Angeles, preparing himself for a teacher of piano and voice.

The second wedding was that of Miss Marian Martin and Robert Judson Kimbrough, which occurred at the home of Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Banks, with Rev. Banks performing the service. Decorations in pink tones were used, and the bridal frock worn by the bride was pink flowered voile and her flowers pink carnations. A small company of relatives witnessed the exchange of vows, and, after refreshments of ice cream and cake served at the pastor's home, sought the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Robert Morrison, where an old-fashioned southern watermelon feast was served. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Martin and came to Colton from Arkansas, while the young groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Kimbrough and is a native of Texas. Their home will be in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Willets, a newly-wedded couple of a few weeks, were made the honorees of a plunge party to Urbita Springs Wednesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Van Arsdale Smith, Mrs. Martha Holt Hebberd and Miss Leora Hoagland being the entertainers of the large company of guests who were taken out to the resort by automobile. After the dip in the pool a return was made to the Hebberd home for refreshments.

To compliment Mrs. Martin Preston, formerly Miss Mary Darling, and Mrs. M. P. Cheney, who recently removed to a ranch home at Grand Terrace from Colton, Mrs. W. B. Oliver gave a "rag-carpet" sewing party Thursday afternoon, the lawn of the Oliver residence on the Terrace being the out-of-door parlor occupied by the ladies bidden. Each guest had been told she must sew a "pound," and the slower ones found fun in going back to pranks of childhood days and stealing the sewed strips of their Ferns and Coral in Arctic.

Corroborating the report of soundings in the Arctic Sea made by the Karluk expedition that revealed the presence of coral is a recent note in science that the fossil flora of that icy climate show the presence of abundant and luxuriant ferns and palmlike plants produced by the tropical conditions of late paleozoic and middle cenozoic geologic time. F. H. Knowlton of the United States Geological Survey has published a description of such plants found about Cape Lisburne, 100 miles north of the Arctic circle, on the western coast of Alaska.

MEN AND EVENTS.

Judge Landis of Chicago recently failed to qualify as an expert in Polish literature. He was asked to grant an injunction against a Polish publisher who it was alleged had plagiarized a book. "Let me see the two books," the judge directed, and they were handed to him. "You are looking at them upside down," said an attorney. "I'm a little rusty on Polish," the versatile jurist admitted sadly as he handed the books back.

John D. Rockefeller was 75 years old on July 8, but no celebration was held at his Pocantico Hills estate, where he is spending the summer. Mr. Rockefeller planned to follow his daily practice of playing his eighteen holes of golf. There was no birthday gathering, as Mrs. Rockefeller and her sister are in feeble health and John D., Jr., is at Seal Harbor, Me.

Augustus Thomas, the playwright, has been honored by Williams College, which recently conferred on him the degree of Master of Arts.

Judge Pugh of the Washington Police Court recently gave a glimpse into his boyhood occupations while considering a case before him. "I know of many people in the country who need wood cut for them at this season," he said. "How about that being a better way of earning a living than one which involves a violation of the law?" "Would you wish a boy of this age to chop wood, Your Honor?" inquired Attorney Bowles, with raised eyebrows. "Why not?" answered Judge Pugh. "I did at his age—a cord and a half a day. It's a better job."

C. K. Billings of Richmond, Va., has given his trotting stallion Wilmering, with record of 2:12¾, to the government as a sire for army remounts. Wilmering is one of the finest and handsomest of the many famous horses owned by Mr. Billings, for whose personal use the animal was purchased at a price reaching into the thousands.

W. G. Phillips of New York, a blind man, while visiting in Hammondsport last week, was given a ride in the air. "Doc" Wildman, the Curtiss aviation professor, took him up in a flying boat 300 feet above the lake. "It felt like a feather bed," said the voyager on alighting, not the least perturbed. "I wish I could go again. I felt when we were rising into the air by the bumping along the water, then we went up and up, and when we came down there was no unpleasant sensation. Even if I didn't go up just to see what I could see I felt well repaid for the effort."

Going Some.

MAKING VOLCANOS AND TYPHOONS AT SAN PEDRO

WHERE is it all going to end—this seizing by the makers of the "movies" of all the best plays, the best players, the best scenery and all the other "bests" that enter into the making of the successful play or picture?

Because, during the past year or so—since the advent of the "feature" picture—it has become apparent that the movies are only content with the best. First, they got hold of such well known and adroit dramatists as Richard Harding Davis, Augustus Thomas, George Broadhurst and a score of others equally prominent in the field of dramatic literature.

Then these movies folk engaged Mrs. Fiske, Sarah Bernhardt, James K. Hackett, Ethel Barrymore and hosts of other big stars of the American and foreign stages.

Next they turned their attention to the scenic portion of the picture, with the result that there is nothing their expert camera men have not attempted, whether it be in the air, on terra firma or beneath the waters—it is all the same to the motion-picture maker; nothing is too hazardous for him, nothing too expensive for his bank account, nothing too elaborate for his scenic department—in brief nothing is too good for the attendant upon the motion pictures shows at a seat scale of from 10 to 30 cents—rarely any higher, except in the case of the traveling picture shows of the Rainey Hunt or the Annette Kellermann class.

Thomas H. Ince, the director-general of the New York Motion-Picture Company, whose output includes the well-known brands of Kay-Bee, Broncho and Domino—looks upon this prodigal expenditure of money for film features with the complacency of the millionaire who thinks nothing of an investment of millions when the returns are pretty certain to amount to 10 per cent. in the shape of dividends.

Mr. Ince yesterday was discussing his newest feature film, "The Wrath of the Gods," which will be displayed this week at Clune's Auditorium Theater. Mr. Ince—and not the press agent, remember—commenced his remarks by referring to the cost of "The Wrath of the Gods," which amounted to more than $80,000 for the six reels.

"The moving-picture makers long ago learned that the public will pay for the motion-picture pretty much in proportion to the cost of the same," said Mr. Ince. "Of course, there are instances where a picture that costs only a few thousands will earn large returns, but these are rare and usually have to do with the employing of some uncommonly popular actor or actress for the film and has nothing to do with its actual worth.

"When I wrote 'The Wrath of the Gods' and determined to film the story I was confronted by an expenditure that would have staggered any moving-picture company a few years ago, but which now has become an accepted fact.

"The story was Japanese, therefore native actors and actresses were out of the question. The first task I had to look after was the engaging of a company of Japanese actors and actresses. Frankly, I did not know where to get these people. I realized that in California there are hundreds of educated Japanese—a lot of them professional men—and I determined to secure some of these bright people and start a [illegible] own. I did this, and for [illegible] six months I [illegible] four hours every day [illegible] even better than [illegible] ican players. All of [illegible] had to do with the [illegible] Wrath of the Gods' and [illegible] each scene [illegible] I felt like O. "The actors all ready, [illegible] his was to reproduce a [illegible] you know that [illegible] of the chief scenic [illegible] Wrath of the Gods,' I had [illegible] the real thing. This was [illegible] mendous task and took a [illegible] pert stage mechanician [illegible] complete, but when it was [illegible] filmed I had the [illegible] ing that we had [illegible] veritable volcano—I [illegible] purposes of our [illegible] traveled to Japan and [illegible] real thing. And, [illegible] spouts fire and lava and [illegible] clouds of ashes [illegible] and where in the world [illegible] a volcano that will [illegible] thoroughly reliable [illegible]

"It wasn't such an [illegible] reproduce a typhoon [illegible] finished film will show [illegible] derful tempest [illegible] required was a [illegible] graphic effects and the [illegible] a couple of fire [illegible] Pedro harbor one [illegible] summer afternoon.

"Santa Ynez Canyon [illegible] Japanese locale for the [illegible] Wrath of the Gods,' the [illegible] tains and the adjacent [illegible] fording a setting of [illegible] tier.

"Now this 'Wrath [illegible] while its initial cost was [illegible] looked at from the [illegible] of the theatrical [illegible] its cost in the first [illegible] life, and as its story [illegible] wide appeal, it is [illegible] all over the eastern and [illegible] hemispheres, so that [illegible] has lost its drawing [illegible] certain to have earned [illegible] a quarter to half a [illegible] —and the dramatic [illegible] this amount of money [illegible] history as one of the [illegible] stage.

"I am at work upon [illegible] portant feature [illegible] more than $200,000 [illegible] require the better part [illegible] the making—but the [illegible] their 10 or 20 or [illegible] next year will get the [illegible] money many times [illegible] quite sure to reap a [illegible] that will make the [illegible] insignificant.

BITS OF VERSE.

Belief.

If I were asked what I believe, I could not help but say,
The gentle and the simple creeds of boyhood's yesterday;
The tender faith in Bible things, the truth, the way, the right;
The golden rule to live one's life according to the light;
And everywhere the thought of God,
that we are everywhere
The children of one Father's love and of His heavenly care.

If I were asked what I believe, I know my thoughts would go Back to the little child at prayer in the soft evenglow;
And I can think of nothing else so beautiful, so sweet,
A prayer beside a mother's knee, who tried to lead our feet
In paths of righteousness and truth
where none could go astray
From that dear life of simple trust in childhood's yesterday.

If I were asked what I believe, I'd have to say, as then,
A simple faith in God's command, a manlier trust 'mong men.
A clear and more abiding course t'ward that which men might call
The straight-out-from-the-shoulder faith of Peter and of Paul;
The teachings, most of all, that came to us in Sunday-school,
'Way back in little childhood's land,
the land of Golden Rule.

The Changing Picture.

How softly fall the memory lights
On pictures of the past,
As still and sultry grow the nights
That shade the glare at last.
When, like a furnace breath so hot,
You think about the cherished spot
Where once you shoveled snow.

The eager tingle of the past
No more seems harsh and rude,
That sky with clouds all overcast
Seems gentle and subdued.
Oh, how we wailed the bitter lot
That faced us months ago,
And oh, how lovely seems the spot
Where once we shoveled snow.

Standardizing the Babies!

They have standardized the babies in this scientific day;
They would save the perfect specimens and throw the rest away.
But they can't convince the mothers of the undersized and weak
That they're not the kind of babies that a Perfect Race must seek.
And the homely little babies get as tender, loving care,
And are cuddled just as fondly as the Beautiful and Fair.
Curious creatures are these mothers,
each enraptured by the charms
Of the palpitating bundle that she trundles in her arms.
Each contending that her baby is entitled to the prize,
Irrespective of all standards as to strength or weight or size;
Not a single one admitting that her little failure's place
Should be taken by a stronger for the Glory of the Race.
Well, though science may be baffled;
though its new hygienic charts
May be mocked by the affection that is born in mothers' hearts,
Possibly the little babies that have failed to pass the test
May become in adolescence just as lovely as the rest.
Science works exceeding wonders, but in nature's gentle plan
Mother love can do for babies more than science ever can.

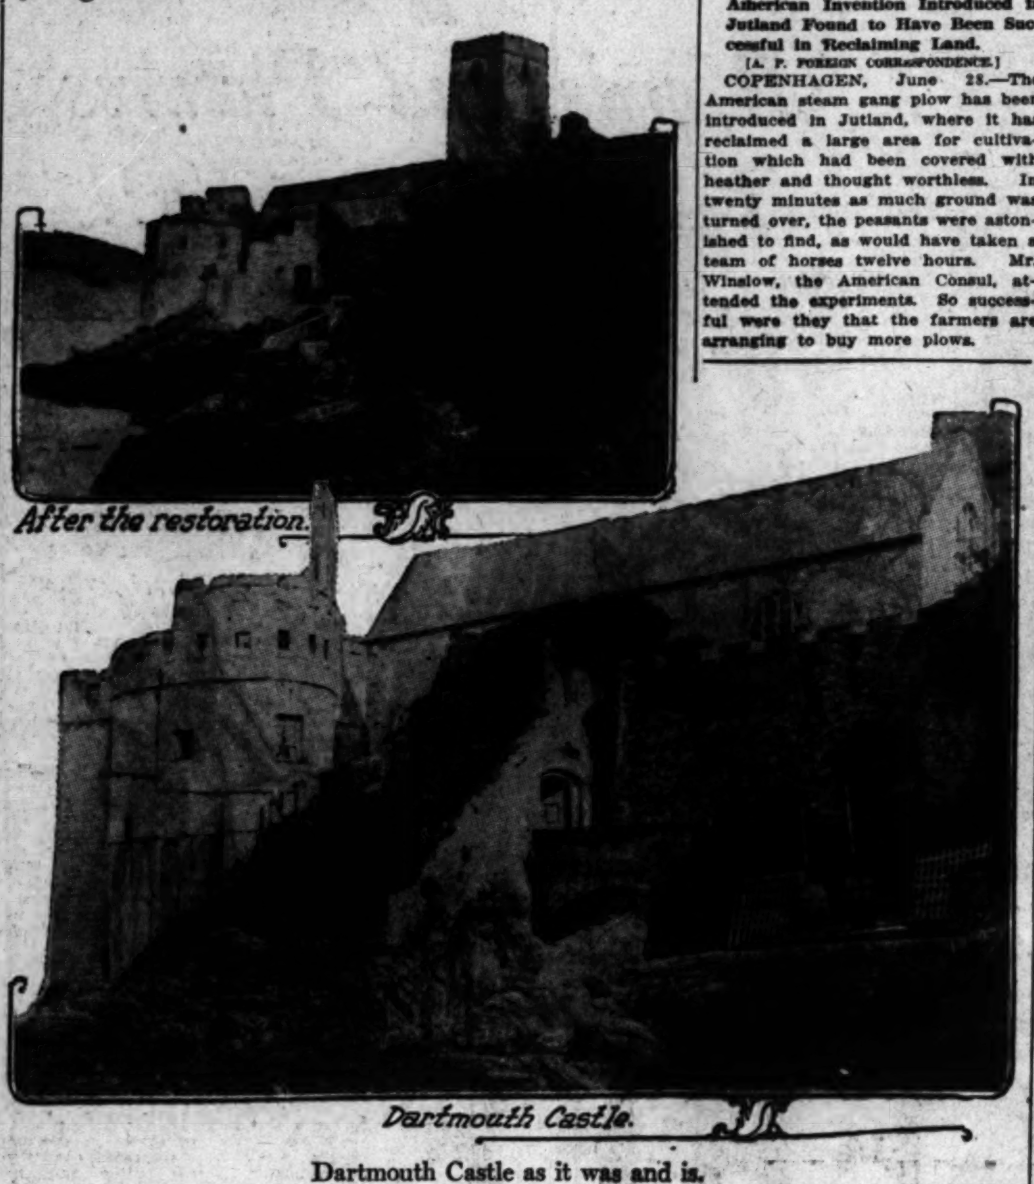
England Preserves Medieval Structure.



Dartmouth Castle as it was and is.

The upper panel shows the famous fortress after the architect in the Office of Works in Great Britain had stripped from it some of the embellishments added by its modern owners, giving it the appearance it probably had after it had been completed in the days of the Henrys. The lower panel shows the building as it was before the work had been commenced, the picturesque round tower being hung with slates which have been completely stripped off.

GANG PLOW IN DENMARK.

American Invention Introduced in Jutland Found to Have Been Successful in Reclaiming Land.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

COPENHAGEN, June 28.—The American steam gang plow has been introduced in Jutland, where it has reclaimed a large area for cultivation which had been covered with heather and thought worthless. In twenty minutes as much ground was turned over, the peasants were astonished to find, as would have taken a team of horses twelve hours. Mr. Winslow, the American Consul, attended the experiments. So successful were they that the farmers are arranging to buy more plows.

Legislative.

ELECTION ROWS OF PORTUGUESE.

Republican Government Not a Success at First.

Disorders in Parliament of Daily Occurrence.

Deputies Use Canes and Fists in Time of Excitement.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, July 5.—Although the Portuguese have had four years' experience with republican government, recent dispatches from Lisbon have indicated that the legislative machinery is still far from working smoothly. There is hardly a day when there are not riotous scenes in the ancient Parliament buildings. The galleries of both houses are filled with armed partisans who applaud, deride, denounce or hiss the utterances of the speakers.

The fact that the Presidential and parliamentary elections, the second in the history of the new republic, are pending, has lately brought the struggle for power to a high pitch of excitement. The decree of the government fixing the date of elections has not yet been issued, but it is expected that they will be held the latter part of August or early in September. Dr. Manoel Arriaga, the first President under the new constitution, cannot be a candidate for reelection.

The election of the President is made by the two Houses of Parliament.

DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY.

The Democrats, led by Dr. Alfonso Costa, have a majority in the present House of Deputies. A typical scene was witnessed there recently when the Revolutionists, whose chief is Dr. Almeida, accused the Democratic ministry of conniving at gross frauds in connection with a concession to Antonio Maria da Silva, formerly Minister of Public Works, to exploit the water power of Rodman Falls, which engineers consider adequate to supply power and light to Lisbon and all of its surrounding provinces. Silva is now Director of Posts and Telegraphs and one of the triumvirate ruling the powerful secret society known as the Carbonaria, with its 20,000 members.

The society is a sort of government in the shadow alongside the government in the open. Cabinets come and go, while the Carbonaria exists always. Only vague rumors of intrigue and conspiracy within the society reach the public, but there are frequent instances of the power the society wields.

Debates on the water concession were interrupted by furious cries and disorders in the galleries of the chamber recently. The spectators were all armed with revolvers. When the president of the chamber ordered the police to clear them out, the factionists in the galleries united against the officers and, revolvers in hand, massed at each entrance to the House, defying the police to lay hands on any one. As a result of parleys, the police agreed to make no arrests, provided the spectators agreed to leave quietly, as they did.

PREMIER IS RESPECTED.

In the meantime the deputies were using canes and fists upon one another. Dr. Bernardino Machado, the Premier, who is conspicuous for his refinement and culture, ran from group to group, begging the members, in the name of the republic, to desist. He, because of his transparent honesty and extraordinary devotion to high principles, is respected by every one, and he succeeded this time, as he has done many times before, in bringing about temporary calm and reconciliation.

Machado, surrounded by politicians of doubtful merit fighting for their own interests, never loses faith in the republic. He declined the Premiership because he thought the office could be used to placate the ambition of some other leader, but warring groups would rather trust him as their first minister than any one of their opponents.

THAT NEW MONTE CARLO.

Reports That Panama Will Be Made a Great International Gambling Resort Are Ridiculed.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PANAMA, July 11.—Officials of the government of Panama have had considerable amusement at the published reports in Europe and the United States of a proposal, originating in France, to make of Panama a rival of Monte Carlo. It is declared with much positiveness that such a scheme has never been thought of in Panama and that the establishment of a great gambling pavilion here would never be allowed.

According to Ernesto T. LeFevre, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, no capitalists of any foreign country have ever approached the Panama government with the view of obtaining a concession of this character. He said it would not be possible for such a concession to be granted, for the reason that constitutional barriers were insurmountable.

On the other hand, Americans who have been long residents on the isthmus declare that anything is possible in Panama.

BRITAIN RESTORES WORK OF DAYS OF HENRY VII.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 5.—One of the most important works of restoration which has preserved a rapidly decaying medieval castle has just been completed. Dartmouth castle has been completely restored so that its ancient appearance has been preserved in such a manner that it will probably remain for hundreds of years to come a delight to those who admire the old architecture of England. The work reflects great credit on the ancient monument branch of the office of works, and Frank Baines, M.V.O., principal architect, and C. R. Pears, chief inspector.

The old structure is now in a thorough state of preservation, all its original masonry being shown and many of the original gunports and arquebus holes being as they were when the castle was constructed. The work is regarded as a fine example of restraint in restoration and of careful consideration of a most interesting "ancient monument." The principal part of the work consisted in stripping off the defective slates from the walls, removing the cement facing, and exposing and painting the old masonry. The removal of the modern brick chimney stacks and the delapidated castiron rain-water pipes is also a great improvement.

The following extract from a covenant between Henry VII and the corporation of Dartmouth—dated at Westminster, January 10, 1485—throws an interesting light on the history of the old castle:

"This indenture made between Henry by the Grace of God, King of England, the Seventh, on the one part, and the Mayor, Bailiffs and Burgesses of the Borough of Clifton Dartmouth hardness in the county of Devon on the other part Witnesseth that on the date of the day hereof the same Mayor etc. have covenanted and agreed for them and their successors to the King that for the safeguard and defence of the said town of Dartmouth they shall make a strong and mighty and defensive tower and bulwark of lime and stone adjoining the castle and in all haste possible to them they shall finish the making of the same tower and bulwark in sufficient strength, and shall garnish the said tower with guns and artillery and at all times henceforth for ever they shall find a chain of sufficient length and strength to stretch and be laid across the mouth of the haven of Dartmouth aforesaid from one tower to the other tower and that at all times hereafter they shall fortify and repair and garnish the said new tower with sufficient guns and artillery for the defence of the said chain and port and town of Dartmouth. . . ."

emaciated, he was perfectly rational, and was able to tell his wife, who had been staying with a sister in his absence, that he could not recall anything that occurred between leaving his house and seeing a Swansea man in Carmarthen a few days later. Then his memory seems to have returned, and he started walking home, and gained access with his latchkey. Proof of his long tramp is supplied by his blistered feet.

IN IRELAND.

Men Watch Boy Drowning.

"You will find cowards like that sometimes. All I can say is that he was an arrant coward. I would be sorry to think that an Irishman would be guilty of conduct like that." So said Christopher Friery, Coroner, at an inquest at Glasnevin, on James O'Toole, aged 10, who was drowned in the Royal Canal near Broome Bridge, when John Griffin told the jury that he was bathing with the deceased and others, that none of them were able to swim, that they tried to catch hold of O'Toole when he was in trouble, and that they called to some men, and none of them gave any assistance. One of the men, he added, had a fishing rod, but paid no attention to them. A verdict of "accidental death" was returned.

Woman Who Backed Horses.

Eliza Adams, gaving her address as Mary's lane, Dublin, has been remanded at Ballina, charged with the larceny of a gold bangle, the property of Miss Coultry, Killala, which, it was alleged, was stolen at the Ballina races, but which the defendant said she found on the course. Sergt. O'Reilly said that when arrested the defendant had three purses containing over £53. She explained that she backed horses and played roulette.

Children's Artful Dodge.

Three children, Annie Cook, aged 11, and her brothers, William and Thomas, aged 10 and 6, respectively, representing at the Belfast quays that their parents were dead, and that they wished to go to an aunt in Liverpool, induced a kind-hearted gentleman to pay their fares. After they had sailed it transpired that their parents were alive, and the Liverpool police were at once communicated with.

Ticket Collector Mistaken.

A jury at Clonmel awarded £5 damages for assault to a blacksmith named James Kenny in an action against the G. S. and W. Railway for damages, slander and false imprisonment. The plaintiff's case was that when returning from a coursing meeting Ticket Collector O'Connell alleged his ticket was defaced and took him before the station-master and a policeman. O'Connell admitted having mistaken plaintiff for oneof the betting fraternity.

Boy Shot By His Brother.

At Loughgilly, County Armagh, a sad shooting accident occurred, resulting in the death of a boy named Alex Barber. Mr. Barber had been out shooting crows, and on returning home, placed his gun, in which a cartridge remained, in a corner of the kitchen. Some time afterward the eldest son, aged 9, lifted the gun, thinking it was unloaded, and, pointing it at the youngest boy, pulled the trigger, with the result that the bullet penetrated the child's head.

Bees in Pillar Box.

A swarm of bees took possession of a pillar box at Rardagh, a few miles from Castlerea, and when Patrick Pannon, the postman, came to remove the letters he had to beat a hasty retreat. Eventually Mr. John Conry, a bee-keeper in the vicinity, and the postman got the bees into a hive.

A swarm of bees invaded one of the nurses' rooms in the Calrothery Union Workhouse through a ventilator, and strongly resented any attempt to dislodge them.

Distinguished Irish-American.

A distinguished Irish-American, Humphrey O'Sullivan, of Lowell, Mass., who is known throughout the United States as the Rubber Heel King, has just visited his native County Cork. So far back as 1858 he was in the employment of F. W. Potter & Son, Skibbereen, and was an active member of the Typographical Association.

Cyclist's Fatal Collision.

Resulting from a cycling accident, the death occurred in Edenderry of Edward Walsh, principal teacher, Edenderry. He was returning from the funeral of his sister-in-law when he collided with another cyclist, and sustained a severe hurt to his knee. Synovitis set in, followed by pneumonia. The deceased was a native of Thomastown, County Kilkenny.

Priest's Cycling Mishap.

While on a motorcycle near Donegal, the Rev. Joseph Boyle, Raphoe diocesan inspector, collided with Mrs. Dunnion adjacent to Driminin Railway station. Mrs. Dunnion's shoulder was dislocated, but Father Boyle escaped with a few minor injuries.

Farmer's Mysterious Death.

The Tullamore tragedy took a sensational turn when, after the inquest on a farmer named Patrick Raleigh, aged 60, who resided on a farm in the townland of Cappancur, and who died of a gunshot wound, his son, John Raleigh, who lived with him, was taken into custody on the capital charge. When the police arrived they found Raleigh lying dead on a bed upstairs with a deep wound over the breast. He was undressed except for a linen shirt, and his clothes, which were on a chair in the bedroom, were saturated with blood. There was a hole in the kitchen door like that which would have been made by a gunshot.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

GENEVA, July 4.—Snow from sixteen to twenty-four feet deep was still blocking St. Bernard pass at the end of June. This is a favorite drive for American automobilists and the inns in the valleys have been filled with these tourists waiting for the workmen to finish the "white canal" which they have been cutting through the pass.

Denmark Postal Rules.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

COPENHAGEN, June 28.—Postmaster-General Hertz, brother of Henry Hertz of Chicago, and for several years a resident of America, has introduced some new rules in the service which had brought a strong protest from the public. Letters to be delivered in Copenhagen must now have the section of the city marked on the envelope, as well as the street address. Recently a letter to the King was delayed ten hours on this account.

NEW PRIVILEGE GIVEN WOMEN.

HOUSE OF LORDS EXTENDS COURTESY AT RECENT DEBATES.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 5.—The women of England may yet be some way off from the day when they will be enfranchised, but they are slowly but surely breaking down old prejudices and securing minor advantages, which were before reserved for men. The latest concession is extended accommodations for women who wish to listen to the debates in the House of Lords, which generally is the last to establish new precedents. Some women have been dissatisfied with the accommodation afforded in the upper chamber, and the Lords have set about remedying this. An order has just been issued instructing the "Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod to make especial use of the box below the bar, customarily occupied by him, for the purpose of providing accommodations during the debates for certain ladies, who, though not peeresses, are considered to have claims to attend the sittings of the House."

It is not disclosed who the favored ladies are, but the demand for seats probably arose from Liberal ladies, who expect some interesting sessions during the Home Rule debates.

KIPLING A CANDIDATE.

Unionist Party Seeks a Constituency for Author Which Will Not Be Too Exacting.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 4.—While it seems settled that Rudyard Kipling will be a candidate for Member of Parliament at the next general election, the Unionist party has not yet found a seat for him. After his recent attack on the Liberal government's policy, a speech which caused no end of comment in England, the Bordesley division of Birmingham, from which the Rt. Hon. Jesse Collings is retiring, offered him the Liberal-Unionist candidacy, but he declined on the ground that he was being put forward by one section of the party which desired to force its candidacy on the other section. For in Birmingham the Unionist and Conservatives, who worked together under the leadership of the late Joseph Chamberlain, have now renewed their jealousies. Each section is trying to get a candidate in full sympathy with its views to succeed Collings. A similar situation was avoided in the west division of Birmingham, which Chamberlain represented for so many years, only by the fact that his son, Austen Chamberlain, recently came forward as a candidate.

For Kipling a constituency is being sought which will not be too exacting, and which will not require what the English call "nursing."

POTATO FORTY YEARS OLD.

Tuber in Perfect State of Preservation Found Embedded in Plaster in French Town.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, July 5.—A potato forty years old, in a perfect state of preservation, was discovered recently under the hearth stone of the former Mayor of Bazilles, the village celebrated for the battle which was fought there during the Franco-Prussian War. It was found by workmen carrying out repairs, embedded in a block of plaster. The house was rebuilt in 1873, after the village was burned by the Prussian troops, and it is supposed that the potato was then put into its strange hiding place.

He even took syrup on stew,
But he couldn't go cherries in thick mayonnaise,

He didn't come home much, he liked to be free,
No matter how festive the season;
She married because she was lonely, you see;
She divorced him for just the same reason.

New Books Book News

without a word of bitterness, without an intonation of anger. It is a well-written book, interesting and—almost convincing.

FICTION.

PARISIAN BOHEMIANS.

NOTHING ELSE MATTERS. By William Samuel Johnson. Mitchell Kennerley, New York.

THERE is a charm in this book, and it is not easy to determine whether the charm exists in spite of, or because of, the palpable affectations and certain oddities of expression used by the author. Some of it is at times very disagreeable, for the characters—especially that of the poet, who tells the story—are distressingly unreal, often talking with a sort of supercilious garrulity that makes us exasperated.

And yet the story is much like a pleasant, coherent dream of what Bohemian life should be like, presenting pastoral suburbanism and artistic idealism without the tawdry gaieties that are offensive to certain persons who may like the spirit of Bohemianism without the practices.

The Society of "Little Ones" in Paris, whose members are doing things and hope to do more, is a new cult in fiction. "Childe" Elliot, "cherubic and exiguous," is often pleasing, especially when he cannot conceive of anyone's falling in love with other than brown-eyed Betty, and yet is in distress lest someone more successful than himself may do so.

Pruina, whose father is learning the language of the frost—actually presuming to study the sentiments and expressions written by congealed moisture on the panes—is so lovable that her personality covers many of the author's irritating—we shall not call them "defects," but "peculiarities."

The plot is exceedingly flimsy and has to do somewhat with Cyril Harley, whose observations on architecture when slightly intoxicated are truly remarkable, and a will left by an eccentric and mean cousin designated as "a vague villain."

Mr. Johnson's former book was "Glamourie" and had many of the characteristics of "Nothing Else Matters." His work shows the exercise of patient polishing. We do not believe it is given any man to write both oddly and naturally as Mr. Johnson writes, and he is interesting as well as exceptional, but it seems apparent that he arrives at his style with labors that are not wholly profitable.

ESSAYS IN FICTION.

WHEN THOUGHTS WILL SOAR. By Bertha Von Suttner. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

WHEN "Lay Down Your Arms," by the late Baroness von Suttner was given the Nobel prize a few years ago many persons recognized that it was the propaganda, somewhat inartistically incorporated, rather than the literary ability of the author which caused the prize to be awarded to her.

The same merits and the same defects noticeable in that book are found in "When Thoughts Will Soar." The aim is high, almost spiritual, and yet it is so pregnant with propaganda, so filled with pages of essay work, that it cannot be credited with a very elevated place in fiction. As a story it is rather tedious; as a book it stands distinctive in its appeal for nobler work, nobler ambitions and nobler desires.

After the first few pages there is practically no plot except as may be found in the arrangement of a situation where many characters may do a great deal of talking to express the lofty ideas and meritorious plans of the author.

Franka Garlett, the daughter of the countess who eloped with a worthy but poor man of letters, is suddenly left in straitened circumstances by the death of her father. Because she is beautiful a tempter comes with offers of wealth and gaiety, but she spurns his overtures. However, her grandfather, the Count of Sielen, has his attention attracted to her and she is brought to his palatial estate, where, in a short time, she so completely wins his affection that upon his death she inherits vast wealth.

Almost at once, influenced by Chlodwig Helmer, the old count's secretary, she undertakes a phase of suffrage work that brings her into prominence and which culminates in having her included as one of the famous guests at the party of Toker, an American millionaire, who has assembled the genius and brains of the world to discuss important ethical and social problems. Helmer, who is much given to writing letters of advice, and a German prince are rivals for her hand.

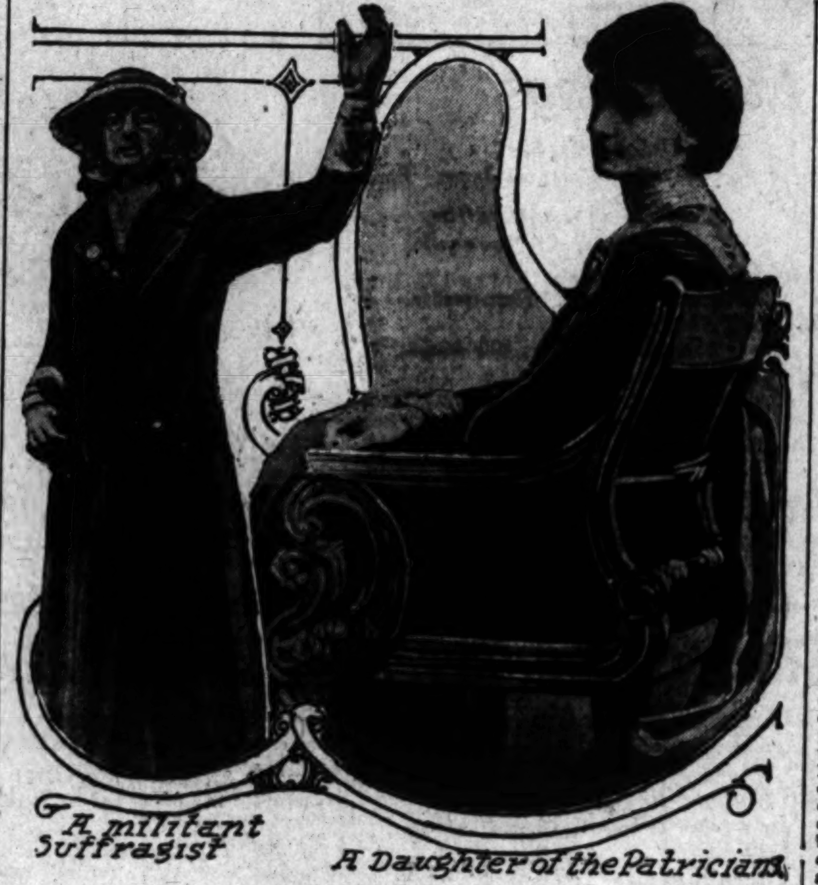
Unquestionably "When Thoughts Will Soar" is a superior book for those who prefer dissertations on modern problems, but as a novel it is disappointing.

A LOVABLE GENIUS.

THE TREND. By William Arkwright. John Lane Company, New York and London.

THE pleasing quality of this story, as a story, is the author's manner of reproducing his characters, even to their utmost subtleties, without forcing his own deductions of these characters upon his readers, whom he allows to make their own analyses, and draw their own conclusions. The central figure is a faun-like boy, born and reared among the cockney population of London, with only a negligible education. A young composer, who has written a cantata with a tenor part too difficult for the average tenor singer, hears a remarkable voice as he is wandering the streets at night. He finds a pale slip of a young man of 19, poorly clothed—a vagabond street singer who has no conception of the value of his gift. Robert takes the youth home with him and attempts to train him. In a retired hamlet he places the literary training of the boy in the hands of a minister, and himself attempts to inoculate his charge with the technical mysteries of harmony and counterpoint. While the boy can reproduce a theme at one hearing, he is utterly unable to cope with the mathematics of reading and composition. He translates the most subtle music of nature, speaking of it as the "voices" which he hears. Robert transcribes these fugitive, cobwebby themes, and trains the boy for the opening production of the cantata.

The young singer's temperament is too tensely strung to bear the wear and tear of the commonplace rasp of life, which he cannot understand. The climax, when he has lost himself in the interpretation of the character of a young monk, is intensely dramatic. There is appeal in the book for those who are fond of a clever story. There are also some esoteric subtleties which will be termed by some as fanciful, but will be understood at their right value and dignity by the eye, ear and mind capable of recording vibrations higher, finer and more rapid than those to which the average sensibilities are accustomed. In unusual combination with this note which the author strikes are a clever and delightful vein of humor and little flashes of poignant wit.



A militant Suffragist
A Daughter of the Patricians

"The Dual Personality."

Lady Constance Lytton was won to the cause of militancy and went to jail to show her loyalty. There she was treated with more respect than her lowly-born sisters, and to circumvent any such favoritism adopted the disguise name of "Jane Warton." Her experiences are incorporated in "Prisons and Prisoners," reviewed on this page.

THE "JANES" AND "MAUDS."

CUDDY YARBOROUGH'S DAUGHTER. By Una L. Silberrad. George H. Doran Company, New York.

A TRIFLE "talky" in the matter of unimportant things—as English stories are apt to be—"Cuddy Yarborough's Daughter" is still a book with a peculiar interest of its own. There are two distinctly contrasting characters, both of which are thoroughly comprehensible. The "Mauds" and the "Janes" of feminine humanity always did exist, and always will—the Mauds splendid to look upon, magnetic, and sucking in the admiration of men as a bee sucks honey from a flower. The Mauds would die of ennui if there were not some man smoldering in passion at the shrine. The men must give all to the Mauds, and take their compensation in a buoyant comradeship—nothing more. The Janes are modest, virginal, uncompromising with themselves, and conditions about them. They do not feed on the admiration of men—they wish the love of only one man. The particular Jane of this story lost her mother at a very early age, and became the close comrade of her father. Sam Bailey, returning from South Africa, becomes a "chum" of both father and staid little daughter. Sam is obliged to go away again, and during the interim Violet Jane grows up, and her father dies. The tropical but large-hearted Maud annexes Jane, who has been left with very little money. Sam buys the old home in order to save it for Jane, although he can ill afford it. Sam, by the way, is the only male who has resisted the blandishments of Maud, the married belle. With Maud and Jane in the same household it is not difficult to surmise a series of interesting situations. There is a pathetic little figure of a son—Maud's son—delicate, and having no intimate acquaintance with his beautiful mother. Maud does not mean to be cruel; she is simply insatiable for pleasure and admiration, and impulsively sacrifices anything that stands in her way. The child dies, and the really bereaved heart is that of the lonely little Violet Jane. It is a pretty story.

THE ART OF MOTION.

THE DANCE: Its Place in Art and Life. By Troy and Margaret West Kinney. Frederick A. Stokes, New York.

"THE DANCE" is comprehensive—its scope spreads over the evolution of emotional expression of some 7000 years—beginning with the earliest forms of dancing, it comes to a close with a presentation of the social dancing of today, the Tango, the Hesitation Waltz, the Brazilian Maxixe.

"Before logic, man knew emotion; before creed, ritual. With leap and mad gesture the savage mimics his triumph to the accompaniment of crude saltation performed by a hero-worshiping tribe."

"The Kinneys," as these two authors choose to designate themselves, see reflected in the statue of the dance the intellectual and morale of the period. They find the dancing in Rome was vulgar, almost prosaic during the days of rich dissolution; that the dance bloomed into radiance with the Renaissance; that it came into its Golden Age at the early part of the eighteenth century, and they believe the renewed interest in dancing at present augurs a pleasant future for the art of motion.

The explanations of the interpretations of the dancing, especially of the oriental forms of dancing, is of exceptional interest. "From a race of artists Mohammed took away the freedom to paint or model representations of living things. Yet the prohibition was a seed from which sprang a garden of expressions more graphic than paint, a school of symbolism perhaps the most highly wrought the world has seen. . . He (the Arab) has dignified it (dancing) with his accumulated knowledge of decoration, imbued it with the mystic symbolism of his speculative mind."

"The Kinneys" are artists; they are also exceedingly charming writers. Troy Kinney is a well known illustrator and fresco painter, having done the fresco work for the Chicago Operahouse. It was through the portrayal of dancing figures that led them to a study of the dance, and there is no question but that they have covered the subject thoroughly, and have put forth a most satisfying and informative volume.

POSITIVISM IN NATURE.

LIFE HISTORY OF AFRICAN GAME ANIMALS. By Theodore Roosevelt and Edmund Heller. (Two volumes.) Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

THE MOST convenient thing possible if one disagrees with the colonel is to keep silent. He has more energy and more endurance than any known controversialist in natural history, politics, economics or geography; and presents, at times, a ferocity of argument that is awe-inspiring even though it may not be convincing. Also, the most redeeming of all, he is usually interesting, though he may be consistently exasperating. He manages to keep his enemies hotter than any man since the cremation of political opponents was abolished, and provokes more agitation and controversies than the discoverers of the North Pole.

All of which is by way of introduction to one of the most interesting phases of Col. Roosevelt's latest book (and one has to hurry up in saying "latest book" at the rate he produces them.) He smashes—or undertakes to smash—the coloration theory alleging that animal coloration has developed through natural selection, and as a protective design.

He declares it cannot be true, saying: The glare of light in Africa and India is such that all patterns of any intricacy or minuteness tend to disappear under it. This is shown in the case of the Indian tiger by Mr. Kearton's interesting moving pictures of a wild tiger; as the beast comes through the jungle its stripes are very distinct, but the moment it steps into the sunlight the stripes disappear as if by magic, and the animal appears to be of a light monochrome."

The colonel uses his customary vehemence, and writes furiously in defense of his ideas—or rather, against the other fellow's.

But beyond and besides this lengthy chapter on coloration, he has presented a readable and interesting, untechnical book on the wild game of Africa. The life history of the animals is truly entertaining, and illustrations of more than ordinary clearness enhance the text.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

THE WALLED CITY. A Story of the Criminal Insane. By Edward Huntington Williams. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York.

"THE case of the expert judge of insanity is in many ways analogous to that of the gem expert. Long practice and long association make it possible for him to detect mental aberration almost instinctively. Unlike the gem expert, however, he is unable to confirm his diagnosis immediately by chemical analysis," and so even the physicians, experienced and keen, often disagree as to whether some patient is feigning or demented. Thus is the problem of the alienist complicated and confused.

Dr. Williams, now of Los Angeles, formerly associate professor of pathology and bacteriology at the University of Iowa, formerly assistant physician at the Matteawan State Hospital for Criminal Insane and also formerly a physician at the Manhattan Hospital for Insane, has filled "The Walled City" with incidents and descriptions that came chiefly under his personal observation. The book is neither technical nor controversial, but offers glimpses to the layman of life behind the bars where insane criminals live. Dr. Williams has made no pretense at literary artifice and as a result has written a plain, readable account of a phase of life that is very little known.

The shrewdness of the insane is not easily conceivable; they exercise a cunning that is often incomprehensible and at times a generosity that is marvelous. "The Walled City" tells of a fire at which the men, not only criminal but unbalanced, were released and fought like heroes to save the institution in which they were incarcerated, and to escape from which they had previously worked with indefatigable cunning. Frequently the prisoner will come to the rescue of a guard that is being assaulted, and yet Dr. Williams assures us that without a moment's hesitation this same prisoner would probably murder the guard if, by so doing, an escape could be effected.

The principal reason that a mere handful of keepers can hold in control hundreds of desperate and cunning patients is the fact that the latter seem incapable of acting in concert, that they are suspicious of, and often disloyal to, one another. In their hospitals they have castes as indelible as those among the social elite of Gotham, and a burglar does not stoop to be the "pal" of a pickpocket, nor will a forger accept a burglar as a friend.

Because life in the hospital is easier than in prison, convicts often simulate insanity to be transferred, and the physicians are kept alert to pick out malingerers. It is also recorded that at least one hardened criminal went insane because he was sentenced for a crime of which he was not guilty, though he escaped punishment for many which he had committed.

DREAM OF COLUMBUS.

THE STORY OF THE PANAMA CANAL. By Logan Marshall. John C. Winston Company, Philadelphia and Chicago.

THE AUTHOR of this work goes back to the time of Columbus, and briefly sketches the first efforts of the great discoverer to find a water way through the western continent by which to make sail toward the capital of the Grand Khan, to whom he bore letters from Ferdinand of Spain. He sailed past the very point where the great canal now meets the waters of the Atlantic. Although the great man was destined never to attain his object, others were to follow, riding on the great thought wave of his creation to the ultimate fulfillment of the greatest piece of engineering of the present day. "It is altogether fitting that the great bronze statue of Columbus and the Indian maiden should stand at Cristobal overlooking the Atlantic entrance to the canal, which is to materialize his vision of a direct route to Asia," writes the author. The book contains a brief history of the section of country through which the canal passes, an account of the great enterprise itself, a consideration of the health problem, labor problem, and military and political aspects. In the appendices the subjects of Great Canals of the World, Economic Effects of Ship Canals, History of Traffic on Great Canals, The Canal System of India, and Canals of China are treated.

A TREASURE MINE.

DIALOGUES CONCERNING TWO NEW SCIENCES. By Galileo Galilei. Macmillan Company, New York.

FASCINATING in presentation and the matter presented is this volume, from cover to cover. It is translated from the Italian and Latin into English by Henry Crew and Alfonso de Salvio. "For more than a century," assert the translators, "English speaking students have been placed in the anomalous position of hearing Galileo constantly referred to as the founder of modern physical science, without having any chance to read, in their own language, what Galileo himself has to say." A brief sketch is given, in the introduction, of the difficulties Galileo encountered in giving the result of his studies and observations to the world—how the ban of the church was placed upon him, and how he had finally to resort to a foreign publisher in order to place on record his knowledge of the laws of physical science. It is one thing to learn these laws from the didactic pages of a lesson book, and quite another to receive understanding of them through the easy and attractive form of the dialogues, employed by Galileo, in the romantic, medieval lingo. In the "First Day" treatise the resistance which solid bodies offer to fracture is the subject considered. The "Second Day" treats "Concerning the cause of cohesion." "Motion, Uniform Motion, and Naturally Accelerated Motion" are the subjects for the "Third Day." "Violent Motions; Projectiles," are the "Fourth Day" dialogues. The appendix treats of theorems and demonstrations concerning the centers of gravity of solids. While the book furnishes food for the adult mind, its matter is easily within the grasp of the young student. In fact, the reading of the volume is recommended before a text-book study of physical science is taken up. A beautiful cut of the grand old master, from Subterman's portrait—painted about 1640, and now in the Galleria de Pitti at Florence—is reproduced as frontispiece. The book is a treasure which should not be absent from the library shelf of any earnest reader.

REVIEWS IN BRIEF.

THE DRY FLY AND FAST WATER. By George M. L. La Branche. Charles Scribner's Sons.

In this volume is presented an interesting and instructive work upon trout fishing with the floating fly, on American trout streams, together with some observations on fly fishing in general. Even the experienced angler will find many new pointers in his art, which will aid him. "My many years' experience upon the streams of New York and Pennsylvania have brought me to realize that changed conditions call for an expertness of skill and knowledge that anglers of the past generation did very well without. The streams are now smaller, the fish in them fewer and warier, and the difficulties of the angler who would take them greater." There are some instructions concerning bait which will be somewhat of a surprise to both novice and professional.

"The exposure of the bad financial management of the New Haven Railroad, more than any other one thing, led to the exposure and comprehension of the wasteful methods of big business . . . the almost single-handed work of Mr. Brandeis," writes Norman Hapgood in the preface.

DEMOCRACY AND RACE FRICTION. By John M. Mecklin. Macmillan Company, New York.

Why is it that differences of race establish at once apparently irreconcilable and serious differences of opinion? What is it in the human makeup that is responsible for the friction which, in the light of history, would seem to be the inevitable result of the intimate association of the yellow man with the white, the white with the black? What bearing on Democracy have the facts which an examination of these questions discloses? Such are the significant inquiries to which Prof. Mecklin furnishes answers in this volume.

THE HEART OF THE ANTARCTIC. By Sir Earnest Shackleton. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

LAURA JEAN LIBBEY TALKS HEART TOPICS.

Pointing Out Girls.

"You touched my heart, it gave a thrill,
Just like a rose
That opens at a lady's will;
Its bloom is always yours until
You bid it close."

There are girls who are modest almost to shyness. There are others who seem to take delight by dressing loudly—that is, wearing skirts so tight that they cannot step on a street car safely, or pork-pie hats, so bizarre that they attract attention wherever they go, and are always pointed out as examples of audacity. They do not have a good time where they are not noticed, admired and catered to, especially by the young men.

Every girl seems to endeavor to specialize in some particular accomplishment. Each likes to be pointed out, to have folks say of her as she passes by: "There goes the sprightliest tango dancer in town!" Or, "you ought to hear that girl play the piano. Why! she'd make Paderewski sit up and take notice!"

Other girls like to be pointed out for their beauty of face, and to draw particular attention to their comely features they make liberal dips into the paint jar, and rouge saucer, to say nothing of tinting their hair the popular shade. She whose laugh is louder than her companion's makes a bid for attention, as do girls who are foolish enough to tell risque stories in the parlor, thinking it cute and that they will be pointed out as being clever and vivacious.

While young men may be eager to be introduced to these different types of girls, or to beau them about for awhile, when it comes to marrying—well, that's quite a different matter.

It's a very strange type of man who would want to marry the loud-talking, slangy, painted girl who has no thoughts higher than tangoing or creating a sensation. It is the modest, inconspicuous girl who wins a man's respect that ends in love. There are no truer words than those which the poet has given us: "The rose which all are admiring is not the rose for me! I'd rather have the modest maid whom no one seems to see."

The unobtrusive girl, who shrinks from being pointed out, never loses her hold on the friendships she makes. The lover who courts her is sure that he has got a prize. He loses no time in bringing her to the altar.

His home is one of contentment with her by his side. He trusts to her good judgment and wisdom never to shame him by loud dressing or boisterous manner. It is most always the girls who call attention to themselves on the street or in public places who are obliged to walk the road of single blessedness. A girl should think over this, and give no cause to be pointed out.

MISS LIBBEY'S REPLIES TO YOUR LETTERS.

Send them to No. 916 President street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Correct name and address must be given to insure attention—not to print.

Won't Take Her Out.

Dear Miss Libbey: What do you think of a young man calling to see a girl four evenings a week, also Sunday evenings, but refusing point-blank to take her out for even a walk? I am a girl 22, and considered pretty and stylish. I am employed in a store. The young man's folks are wealthy. I also wish to know if it is right for him to insist upon sitting with his arm about my waist. He also will kiss me good night, though I insist that he must not. I do not know what to make of him.

FANNIE.

The girl who is good enough for a man to call on, is good enough to be his companion on out-of-door strolls.

It is not wise to keep your acquaintance with this young man a secret. No girl should permit a man to make love to her, offer her caresses, unless she is engaged to marry him. Familiarity breeds contempt.

The Dog—or Her Beau.

Dear Miss Libbey: I am a young man of 27. I have been going to see a young lady for the last six months. I have but one fault to find with her. She has a little dog, a spaniel, that she is decidedly fond of. The beast is forever in her lap, and if I attempt to sit near her, he growls mighty ugilly! I have asked her to take the dog into another room and leave him there until I am gone. This she indignantly persists she will not do, and gives me that crazy old line about, "if you don't love my dog you don't love me." I can't love the ugly little mutt. Shall I stop going with her, or, do you know of any way such a dog could be gotten rid of? All this may seem foolish to you, Miss Libbey, but I assure you it is of much importance to me. WILLIAM D—.

Patience on your part will conquer at last. The girl who is fond of helpless animals must have a kind, warm, affectionate heart. Kindness to the dog will awaken gratitude in her breast. Do not let a little affair like that part you from a girl you care for and who cares for you.

Wants Too Costly a Ring.

Dear Miss Libbey: I am a mechanic, 24, making good money, all of which I have been using to pay for a small home. I have yet $500 to save to clear it of debt. I suppose you have guessed by that I am going with a girl. Well, that is a fact. I love her and proposed marriage. She accepted me and remarked at the time that she wanted a nice ring. I bought a $50 one, containing a very small stone, which was a diamond.

She threw it on the floor. I never knew she could get so mad. She said a man ought to give a girl a fine big diamond if he loved the girl. I am disgusted, also heartbroken. Shall I throw the whole thing up or what? MORGAN—.

Remain away from the girl a few weeks. I think she will be heartily glad to have you back and accept the ring without further ado. You show excellent judgment in not spending more for the engagement ring than you could afford.

LAURA JEAN LIBBEY.

Ancient Fleet Street.

[London Chronicle:] Fleet street was formerly the wonder place of Lodon, where all that was novel, bizarre and marvelous was exhibited by enterprising showmen. Ben Jonson alludes to "a new notion of the city of Nineveh, with Jonah and the whale at Fleet bridge," and at the Eagle and Child was exhibited a collection of freaks and monstrosities that set the whole town agape. In 1710, too, was advertised as on exhibition at Fleet bridge "two strange, wonderful and remarkable monstrous creatures, an old she dromedary, seven feet high and ten feet long, lately arrived from Tartary with her young one, being the greatest wonder, rarity and novelty ever seen in the three kingdoms."

PERSONAL—

the noted palmist, of London, England, may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST., by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life. Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

YOU WANT

TO BETTER YOUR POSITION,

Or you would not be reading these columns; I want you to better your position, that's why I am spending good money to get your attention; if you are the man I am looking for; if you have a little better than average personality, appearance, and good manners, and understand the importance of at all times sticking to the truth, I want to talk to you; I want to show you where other men who are following my instructions are making from $5000 to $10,000 a year. The cost of a simple patent is as follows: $12 for drawing, typewriting and incidental expenses; $15 for the first government fee; $17.50 attorney fee, payable after allowance; and $20 final government fee. CARBAJAL ENDS REIGN OF BULLET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, July 18.—According to orders issued today by President Carbajal to the Governors of states and the military chiefs, no one in the future is to be executed without proper trial. This means the re-establishment of the constitutional rights suspended by Huerta.

President Carbajal has also ordered that the statue of Washington, which was dragged by the populace through the streets after the occupation of Vera Cruz, shall be replaced at once.

Happiness.

TWO THOUSAND KIDS REJOICE.

Guests of "Times" at Forty Beach Parties.

Fun Spilled All Over Sands and Venice Midway.

And More Will Be Given Big Frolics This Month.

Forty round trips in a row! Two thousand kidlets made happy! That's Daddy Neptune's record for the past six weeks, and there's not a classy canoe on the rialto can beat it, either.

Fifty kids at a pop that big open-face auto has grabbed and carried off to Venice daily, dumping them into the ocean and spilling them on the Midway, and giving them a chance to be as free and happy as sincere little clover blossoms in May.

Sometimes they've flirted with the undertaker by nearly getting themselves drowned; sometimes they've almost broken up the sketch by not answering "adsum" to their names when the roll was called to take them home and resisting the long-suffering chauffeur when he tried to pry them loose from the merry-go-round and the roller-coaster; and sometimes they've had trouble with their little departments of the interior after one of their lunches of tailored bread, petrified doughnuts and the very dillest pickles they could find at the corner grocer's; but never mind, they arrived home happy and intact, and that was the main thing.

Owners of concessions down at Venice have played Santa Claus to the children most generously. As a small newsy put it, "Dose kind guys, dey certainly stretched deir elastics! Deys wasn't a bit cagey wit' deir shows! Dey give all us kids a chance!"

The merry-go-round, the bump-the-bumps, the Ferris wheel, the aquarium, the Panama Canal exhibit, the race through the clouds, Thompson's scenic railway, the Rapids, Rubetown, Chinatown, Merryland, the race for life, all contributed to the children's enjoyment. And say, for liveliness, these fifty kids catapulting down the Midway just made a chorus girl look like an ossified snail!

Envious glances from "curled darlings" sometimes follow the happy little Times joy-riders.

"Who's all them spiffy kids?" asked an immaculate sailor-suit boy of another, the other day, as he aired a vocabulary he never dared practice at home, and looked, truth to tell, a bit wistful as he watched the happy youngsters on the merry-go-round.

OTHER KIDS ENVIOUS.

"Them's newsboys," answered the other, likewise resting his grammar and speaking a trifle enviously, remembering the painful encounter in the bathtub that morning and the obstinate scratchiness of a new shirt of which he was at that moment an unwilling inmate.

Business of heavy frowning from first boy. "They're goin' in everywhere!" he announced in an injured tone. "There's one ridin' on my merry-go-round horse this minute!"

Second boy, stimulated to inspiration by his scratchy collar: "Say, le's ask 'em to let us play newsboys a little while!"

"Aw right!"

The newsies were at first inclined to be very uppish about sharing their privileges, but finally, being bribed with sufficient popcorn and peanuts, entered into the plot and those kind-hearted managers were beaten out of 10 cents all 'round.

And when they parted company with the newsies, one of the sailor-suit boys announced loudly, so that all might hear his newest linguistic acquisition:

"Say, we did horn into that specialty, didn't we! I'm just hickory over it! Le's three-cheer those Times joy-riders!"

The rides will continue through July, at least, for it is the desire of The Times to make as many children as possible happy. Next week Seventh-street summer school and the South Pasadena Orphans' Home will enjoy the trips.

JOHNSON ADMITS FRAMING FIGHT

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, July 18.—Frank Moran's manager announced the other day that he had "double-crossed" Jack Johnson in the recent fight in Paris. He declared that Johnson had agreed in writing that he would hand over 40 per cent. of the purse if Moran would stand for a knockout in the eighth round. Moran's manager, it seems, did not figure on Johnson's reply and thereby laid himself open to a decidedly interesting attack.

The negro champion has cabled to friends in this country, according to today's New York Evening Sun, saying that he did not suffer the "double cross," but as a matter of fact he was sewed up by a private agreement to allow Moran to stay the twenty-round limit.

He insists that he could not induce Moran to meet him except under those conditions, and that he kept faith with the white man's handlers. As local gamblers waged heavily on Moran's ability to remain on his feet for twenty rounds, Johnson's assertion is generally believed.

England Is O. K.

RIVERSIDE, July 17.—[To the Eidtor of The Times:] Poor England! What terror must strike the hearts of all Englishmen after reading Mr. M'Caffrey's scathing denunciation and prophecy in his letter today. Of course Mr. M'Caffrey may have a divine knowledge of the future, but if so why does he not lend his gifts to Ireland in her present crisis? At any rate, he seems to think that his knowledge of the future is absolute, for he states definitely that the home rule bill will not pass! In spite of Mr. M'Caffrey's divine knowledge, I beg to disagree with him, for I am afraid it will pass—I am only afraid, however, because of such Irishmen as Mr. M'Caffrey. The greatest arguments against home rule and the reasons it has not been obtained up to the present are embodied in Mr. M'Caffrey's letter—ignorance, prejudice and violence—and unluckily all the sane, splendid Irishmen have had to suffer for these faults. Ignorance of contemporary events runs through the letter with its Anglo-German war scare rot. What good would it be for the Prussians to stable their horses in Westminster Abbey? Europe would not allow them to stay there on account of the balance of power and what good otherwise would occupation be? Trade follows the army, and the army is created to prepare the way for occupation and trade. Let Mr. M'Caffrey look nearer home for the reason of Germany's armament—let him look to South America, then study the Monroe doctrine drawn up by the United States with the connivance of England, and then ask himself where the future trade of Germany lies and where her enterprise must branch forth!

Prejudice is shown so strongly that Mr. M'Caffrey kills his own argument and any justice he may have (which I allow he has.) He objects to the Catholic minority in Ulster being left to the tender mercies of the Orange majority, yet his Catholic countrymen are demanding that the Protestant majority of Ulster shall be at the tender mercies of the Catholic minority, for that is what control from Dublin would mean. What unreasonable prejudice manifests itself for such an argument. Mr. M'Caffrey's violence defeats his own end, for he raises up every little cloud on the horizon of the empire and turns it into a thunderstorm. India! There has been unrest in India ever since the British occupation, but India has never been so prosperous and worked in co-operation so well with the imperial government as she does today. Africa! The Premier of South Africa, Gen. Louis Botha, in the war England's bitterest enemy, is today the most pro-British South African in the country. Canada! The ridiculous anti-United States flag-waving election of three years ago will answer our friend on that point. Australia! She gives battleships freely to the empire and practically without any strings attached. Storms are rising over all the world today and the British Empire has no more severe ones to face than her cousin-country, the United States, with its Mexican qquestion, its Japanese question, its I.W.W. and its German Monroe doctrine question, yet in spite of all the pessimists I do not think either Anglo-Saxon nation is in much danger of dissolution. One word more, as to England's ability to bear her burden. I do not know whether Mr. M'Caffrey is aware that England is richer today per capita than the United States, but such being the case, how should she fear a financial struggle (for that is what war means) with over-taxed Germany? Mr. M'Caffrey's prophecy, however, thank heaven, is only the excitableness of lack of knowledge.

Gutter Journalism.

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Through the columns of your influential and widely-read paper, permit me to register an emphatic protest against the muddy and ultrasensational stunts of a certain evening newspaper of unsavory reputation. The journalistic jackass who hides himself under the name of John Danger, and for the sake of twenty bucks per week associates with degenerates and hopheads in order to fill the columns of this dirty rag with exposures of vice, ought to be promptly arrested as a vagrant. A dwindling circulation and an almost complete loss of reputable advertising patronage are the only reasons why this press pirate which has fattened on filth for many years, has commenced this dastardly attack on the reputation of our fair city.

And it is high time that the various civic organizations and all who have the welfare of our city at heart, should take vigorous steps to stop this nefarious work.

A mud-slinging and muck-spreading organ of anarchy which daily pollutes the morals of the young under the pretense of exposing vice surely ought not to be tolerated in the most enlightened and progressive city of free America.

The postal authorities ought to take prompt steps to bring this renegade newspaper to the bar of justice.

Help Needed.

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—[To the Editor of the Times:] It was my pleasure yesterday to fill a bag with necessities of life and deliver them to Mrs. Shaw at No. 3450 Dayton avenue. The shooting of her husband by Lomax, several days ago, leaves this beautiful, intelligent young widow with her four lovely children under 6 years, with no means of support. They are strangers here. California is their hell. Let us make it their heaven and home by immediately giving reasonable aid in their distress. I have arranged that contributions may be made to M. C. Hole, No. 28 Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, Sixth and Spring streets, and head the list with $5.

JOKE IS ON DADDY.

Boy Captures Porcupine with Chicken Coop While Paterfamilias Hastens to a Doctor.

Stalking a sleeping porcupine with a chicken coop may be more efficacious than sprinkling salt on his tail, but as for G. W. Rutledge, No. 1464 Mission road—never again!

Mr. Rutledge, walking down the sidewalk to the street, yesterday morning, was surprised to see what he says he thought was a "pin cushion lily" growing in the lawn. Second glance told him it was an animal and the third that it was a porcupine. It was a sight for his 10-year-old boy, and he tiptoed to the house to get him. The two constituted themselves a strategy board and considered a plan of campaign.

In the back yard was a chicken coop and it was decided to drop it over the porcupine. But the coop rattling against Mr. Rutledge's skin awakened the animal.

"Look out for the quills, papa; they shoot 'em," yelled the boy.

The father had heard the legend, also, and had never disproved it. Valor lay in retreat, he told himself. Rutledge in his haste stumbled over the coop and rolled on the ground, falling on his arm. Immediately he lost all interest in the porcupine. He hied to a physician's office, where he was told that his arm was broken.

The boy, however, captured the porcupine. He wanted it for a pet. It was the father who yesterday called the police and asked if they "wouldn't please find the owner."

CALIFORNIA GAME LAW TO STAND PAT FOR PRESENT.

Regulations of 1913 for Taking of Game and Fish to Continue as Rules of Conduct for Sportsmen — No Change in Prospect Until a New Legislature Makes Them Next Winter.

BY EDWIN L. HEDDERLY.

HUNTERS of fur or feather; fishers for whatever wears fins, whether for pleasure or profit, may as well reconcile themselves to worrying along under the so-called "new game law," which was wished upon an already long-suffering sportsman-public by the late—and unlamented—Legislature of 1913.

Nearly every official creation of that body having been attacked, the fish and game laws naturally stood in line for their turn and have not escaped repeated assaults upon technical grounds; but let none of those seeking any personal advantage therein deceive themselves. The law, for sportsman, or market-hunter, or other species of game or fish hog, remains in statu quo. It will be enforced against all offenders in future as since the 12th of August last, when most of the provisions of the act of 1913 became operative.

The rather widespread misconception that fish and game protection had been plunged into a red state of anarchy in California rests upon no more foundation than certain questions of constitutionality raised by Attorney Corney Pendleton of the San Pedro Commercial Fishermen's Association in his defense of V. Mascolo of that port on a charge of violating the paranzella or trawling prohibition in the waters of the Sixth Fish and Game District—off Santa Monica.

Mascolo, through his attorney, applied repeatedly for writs of habeas corpus, but each time was remanded to the custody of Sheriff Hammel. In his briefs, Attorney Pendleton raised every legal hurdle imaginable for the Appellate Court to shy at, attacking the paranzella section of the game laws as to faulty wording of its title failing to cover its scope, and charging it as class legislation. He also questioned the validity of the distributing act upon like grounds. All the points of his contention regarding the trawling section, numbered 636½, were ruled against by Judges Shaw, Conrey and James, sitting en banc as the Appellate Court. The judges did intimate, however, that the redistricting law of 1913, creating seven fish and game districts in the State, is faulty, because of its title failing properly to index the scope of the enactment, and misleading as to its puropse. At all events, Attorney Pendleton, in behalf of Mascolo, has informed the District Attorney's office that he will appeal to the Supreme Court, and probably upon this suggested line of attack. Had this appeal not been taken there might have been good ground for doubting the validity of the so-called "districting law," after thirty days' time had elapsed from the decision, but appeal being taken, the validity of this law will be determined by the highest tribunal in this State, as expeditiously as due process of law permits, and during the pendency of the action the law stands as it is regarding the fish and game districts and their seasons.

The Fish and Game Commission is, strange to say, strongly in favor of the taking of this appeal. In no other way can the doubts as to the districting law be cleared up. Through this test on appeal, all doubts as to the law are laid at rest, and chaos is averted.

Chief Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner Harry Pritchard of the southern division has labored faithfully to prevent such a blow to fish and game protection being dealt as unavoidably would follow leaving the districting law in question as to its validity. Hundreds, in fact, thousands of sportsmen are preparing for their vacations, and although the seasons in the Sixth District were not materially changed by the last Legislature, Santa Barbara and Inyo counties were placed in other districts with different and longer seasons, of which Sixth District sportsmen, who have been protecting game for the whole State with the narrowest prohibitions of all, had planned to avail themselves. Pritchard, therefore, gives out the following statement:

"February 9, last, I arrested off Port Los Angeles, two of Louis Mascolo's boats for trawling in the waters of the Sixth District contrary to section 636½ of the Penal Code, and brought the various defendants, V. Mascolo and others, before Justice Weber of Santa Monica, who granted a writ of habeas corpus without trial.

"All put up bond except V. Mascolo. He went to jail, took out a writ of habeas corpus to the Superior Court, which, after thirty days' delay, they refused and remanded the defendant to the Sheriff's custody. Again the Sheriff was served with habeas corpus proceedings, this time in the Circuit Court of Appeals, which was decided July 2 against Mascolo and the defendant was again remanded to the custody of the Sheriff, which is the state of the case today.

"The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals shows that the law in question, relating to paranzella or trawl netting, is good, and the prohibition of drag-netting in the Sixth District is sustained, notwithstanding all legal attacks made thereon; but the court intimated at the same time that the law creating seven districts is somewhat at fault because the title is misleading. I shall, therefore, continue to enforce the prohibition against trawl or drag nets in the future as in the past, and wish particularly to emphasize that sportsmen and all others must continue to govern themselves by the seven districts as made by the last game law of 1913."

In any event, the present law would have remained effective for a month, and the late developments, considering the time encompassed by "due process of law" mean that by the time the Supreme Court is able to determine, the Legislature of 1915 will have passed a new act of whose validity there will be no doubt.

In the meantime, the seasons for taking fish and game will continue to be as those issued by the Fish and Game Commission and the various sporting goods houses on their cards. Sportsmen may continue outfitting for their trips just as if this cloud never had cast its shadow over their plans.

I.W.W. Tactics.

POLICE BEST RUFFIANS, WHO ATTACK IN FORCE.

SHOUTING defiance to all authority and calling upon volunteers to annihilate the police as the first step in the social war, a gang of I.W.W. ruffians assaulted Policeman Riggs and Wagonman Biby at Fifth and Maple avenue late last night when the officers attempted to place the ringleaders of the mob under arrest.

For more than ten minutes the two officers fought the gangsters, and although the blod was streaming from a half-dozen wounds on their heads, they succeeded in capturing the two chief offenders.

A large crowd of sympathizers followed the I.W.W. leaders to the Police Station and it was necessary to call for assistance in order to disperse the crowd.

During the fight a man who said he was a reporter of a local newspaper attempted to interfere, but escaped before the officers could arrest him.

At the station the two prisoners gave their names as Thomas Drennan, a baker, and his brother, Robert, an electrician, both living at No. 1143 East Forty-fifth street.

The two brothers and the policemen subsequently were taken to the Receiving Hospital, where their wounds were dressed.

All of the combatants were exhausted by the struggle and the officers were relieved from duty for the night.

The I.W.W. ruffians were held without bail pending a full investigation of their past movements, as they admit they have been here but a short time.

Foreshadows Change.

FIND BIG ERROR LONG ON BOOKS OF AUDITOR.

IT IS PROBABLE that a more modern and efficient system of accounting will be provided for the City Auditor's office, in keeping with the recommendations of Efficiency Director Burks, and that impetus will be given this movement through discoveries yesterday, when it was shown that a mistake of $10,000 has been carried on the books of the City Auditor since last September.

In addition of totals from the books of the 1913-14 assessment on the annexation district of 1912, a mistake of $10,000 was made, showing this much less than really was to be collected by the City Tax and License Collector.

In due time the Collector turned in results of collections, and this caused inquiry to be made by one of the deputies of the City Auditor's office as to why more money was reported than the Auditor's books showed the City Tax Collector should collect. The investigation followed that revealed the fact that for many months the improper figures have been carried.

It appears that the Auditor's books showed that $32,716.32 was due on the 1912 annexation collection, while the City Tax Collector turned in reports for more than $35,000, and stated that about $7000 was still to be accounted for in taxes due in this district.

It is probable that the City Council will take this subject up during the ensuing week and require an investigation.

FORD IN NEW JAIL.

Sheriff Spirits Away Convicted I. W.W. to Prevent His Escape from Marysville Institution.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MARYSVILLE (Cal.) July 18.—Sheriff O. L. Meek, quietly obtaining an order for the purpose from Superior Judge E. P. McDaniel, late today took Richard (Blackie) Ford from his cell in the County Jail here and spirited him off to the Auburn, (Placer, county) Jail. The precaution was taken, it was explained, for fear that Ford, the I.W.W. leader convicted for the murder of former Dist.-Atty. E. T. Manwell in the hop pickers' riot at Wheatland, last August, would escape from the local prison, where, with H. D. Suhr, he has been held several months awaiting the action of the Appellate Court on an appeal.

DARKTOWN TERROR MEETS WATERLOO.

ORNERY MULE'S PILE DRIVER KICK HELPLESS IN GRIP OF IRON HAND.

Now any one who has the least little bit of knowledge of the whys and wherefores of a cantankerous mule knows that when Mr. Mule decides to stick, that he sticks, telling whips, blacksnakes, clods, hot irons, fires beneath him and even dynamite, to go to a warmer land.

Samuel Washington Percival Alloysious Browne, if you must have it all, residence, South Stevenson street, is, or rather, was, the proud possessor of Jumbo, a mule known all over Darktown for his stubbornness. Why, that mule in times gone by was so doggone stubborn that if he thought you wanted him to move he would stay in one position for days at a time, even though you placed before him the most tempting of bran mashes, oats and other dainties of more or less consequence to the whole mule race.

As for forcing Jumbo to move, weren't there three niggers already in the County Hospital suffering because they became too intimate with him one afternoon while he peacefully munched his hay, having placed one of his feet upon one of the big yams of which Sam is the possessor and kept it there until he wanted a drink, some three hours later?

Well, yesterday Mrs. Browne received an order from Mrs. J. Clarke Davenport from out Westlake way to do her washing. She told Sam and he hustled out to the barn to hitch Jumbo up.

In a jiffy he was sailing up toward town, Jumbo working fine. As he drove on to Seventh street Jumbo, having trotted rapidly all the distance, thought he would slow down a bit. Sam soaked him one with his stubby mule-skinner. Jumbo put his ears back and stopped.

Pretty soon a street car came along. It stopped. Then another and another and several more. Something must be done, the car men decided. But who was to do it? Every time some one got within the radius of Jumbo's teeth or feet there was a cry of pain.

The crowd kept gathering and street cars kept piling up. Mrs. Davenport's laundry also kept waiting. Jumbo seemed content.

Several new varieties and styles of cuss words were tried out on Jumbo, clods of all sorts, sizes and descriptions passed his way, sticks and whips of various length and strength were tried out on him, but still he stayed.

Two young chaps even got a rope under his tail, but all Jumbo would do was to kick like the devil incarnate.

—Then the hero came. He was Patrick Donahue, star patrolman of the Omaha police force, an Irishman that was the terror of every man, bird and beast that dwelt along the banks of the Missouri in Douglas county.

Mr. Donahue sized up the situation. Then, looking Jumbo square in the eye, he took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves and approached.

As he got within reaching distance distance of Jumbo's right hind leg, Jumbo turned loose a blow sufficient to put Jack Johnson out. Mr. Donahue merely sidestepped and reached out a powerful right arm, grasping the outstretched foot of Jumbo.

Mr. Donahue held on. Jumbo put back his ears, showed his teeth and kicked at Mr. Donahue with his left leg, seeming to forget that his right was off the ground. He fell, his leg still in the vice-like grip of the sturdy son of Erin. He turned his face around again toward the patrolman, saw that he was a goner, and resigned himself to fate.

The impossible had been done. A man had retained his grip on a mule's foot.

Five hours after she made her escape, Mrs. Roxey V. It is needless to tell anyone who has been around the city at all that no other law that ever graced our statute books has been so much flaunted. Probably the less said about the disgraceful vacant lots of Los Angeles the better, especially now that a new era, even though it be but a brief new era, is in sight. Suffice to say that for years the City Council has refused to put up the $15,000, more or less, estimated to be required to hire the laborers to carry out the legal penalty, and that in spite of the fact that the return of every dollar of the sum demanded, in the form of taxes, has been assured. It is no time for recriminations, anyhow. Let us be thankful rather that at last the ordinance is about to take on some meaning.

ISSUE BANK PERMIT.

Work to Be Begun at Once Upon Large Block at Fifth and Spring Streets.

The most important construction development of the past week was the issuance of the permit for the $775,000 building to be erected by the Commercial Fireproof Building Company at the northwest corner of Fifth and Spring streets. The foundations for the structure are already in. The block will be twelve stories high and of the most modern steel frame, fireproof type. The entire ground floor will be occupied by the Citizens' National Bank. Parkinson & Bergstrom are the architects.

Among the permits of the week was one for a $36,000 brick apartment-house to be built by H. F. Wallace at No. 1122 Georgia street. Plans for the building have been completed by L. Blecher. The structure will be three stories in height and will contain ninety rooms in two and three-room suites.

Another permit was that for a $30,000 brick hotel building to be erected by Gus Thiele at No. 549 Wall street. The building will be four stories in height and 40x115 feet in ground dimensions. It will contain seventy-five rooms. The Weston Building Company drew the plans and George M. Easton has the contract.

Plans are being drawn by George F. Costerisan and J. F. Kavanaugh for a four-story reinforced concrete warehouse to be built for the Dixon Art Glass Company at Thirty-first street and Griffith avenue. The building will be 80x140 feet in size and will cost about $60,000.

TO FIFTH AND BROADWAY.

"Upstairs" Clothing Concern Leases Entire Second Floor of Metropolitan Building for Fifteen Years.

The entire second floor and a part of the tenth floor of the Metropolitan building, at the northwest corner of Fifth and Broadway, was leased during the past week to the firm of Foreman & Clark, "Upstairs Clothiers," now located in the Citizens' National Bank Block at Third and Main. The deal, which was handled through the agency of Wells & Magor, calls for the payment of a large rental extending over a period of fifteen years.

The space leased on the second floor of the new Broadway skyscraper measures 115x161 feet and contains about 18,000 square feet. This space will be entirely devoted to salesrooms. Approximately 2500 square feet additional on the tenth floor will be used by the lessees as a workshop and alteration room. Considerable basement space has been reserved for storage. The clothing concern will also have its own display space in the main corridor and a separate street entrance for the use of its customers on Fifth street.

The new store of Foreman & Clark will be opened in September. The firm will continue to occupy its Third and Main store as a branch of the main establishment.

SCHOOLS FOR ALL PARTS OF CITY.

BOARD OF EDUCATION PICKS ITS ARCHITECTS.

Following Selection of Designers for Grade Buildings, Early in Week, Educational Authorities Choose Planners of New "High" Structures.

Following the announcement during the past week of the names of the architects selected to plan thirty-seven of the new grade schools authorized by the recent successful bond election, the Los Angeles Board of Education yesterday made public the names of the designers who will have charge of the new High School buildings provided for in the same issue.

To John C. Austin was awarded the commission to prepare plans for a large High School in West Los Angeles. The site of the institution has not been determined upon, although it is expected that ground for the school will be purchased within a short time.

Norman F. Marsh will draw plans for a new High School in the southeast part of the city, the site for which is yet to be secured, and will also plan a gymnasium for the present Hollywood polytechnic group, of which he was the architect. Elmore R. Jeffery has the commission to plan a High School for the Garvanza and Highland Park district.

Lyman Farwell has been named to plan an addition of ten or twelve rooms to the present San Pedro High School, and Needham & Cline, architects of the Lincoln High School, will draw up plans for new buildings for that institution. W. J. Bliesner will be the architect of a new gymnasium building for the Los Angeles Polytechnic High School.

The amount to be expended upon each separate building or group of buildings will be determined after a careful study has been made of the requirements of the various districts that are to get the schools. The total amount allowed for all the High School structures provided for under the bond issue is $925,000. The sum of $1,407,500 has been authorized for grammar schools. The schools thus far decided upon will require for their construction all but $365,000 of the total amount represented in the bond election.

All architectural fees are made contingent upon the sale of the bonds and the architects selected have been requested to prepare preliminary sketches at once. Without exception, buildings are to be of the most substantial construction.

SELLS WILSHIRE HOME.

Local Owner Transfers Attractive West-Seventh-street Residence and Large Lot to Kansas City Man.

A. C. Dezendorf, with the R. C. Mitchell Company, reports the sale to Jefferson D. Riddell, for Harold S. Cook and Virginia J. Cook, of a ten-room residence at No. 2847 West Seventh street. The house is an attractive building of the English type of architecture, and the lot, which is 65x150 feet in size, commands an extensive view. The consideration is given at $11,000 cash. Riddell, who is a comparatively recent arrival from Kansas City, will make some improvements to the place and occupy it as a home.

Dezendorf also reports the sale to J. W. Walters, for the German-American Savings Bank, trustee, of a lot in the Westfields tract, on St. Andrews place, near Council street. The site is 52x133 feet in size, and the consideration is given at $1600. Walters will build a bungalow on the lot.

FINE HOME SOLD.

Transfer of Occidental Boulevard Mansion Reported by Local Broker. Ranch Plays Part in Transaction.

The sale of a thirteen-room house at No. 443 Occidental boulevard is reported by A. J. Kisselburg, who represented both parties to the transaction. C. C. Haskin was the seller and L. C. Linhart the buyer. The consideration is announced as having been $30,000.

The house is of the Italian renaissance type and has plastered exterior walls and a red clay tile roof. The interior is finished in mahogany and oak and has hand-decorated walls. The grounds are large and sightly. The deal was partly of the nature of an exchange, Linhart transferring to Haskin a 320-acre tract of alfalfa land near Delano, at a valuation of $25,000.

Kisselburg, who was formerly manager of the house and lot department of Koster & Parker, has just established offices for himself at No. 517 Union Oil building.

CENTRAL SQUARE.

The agency for the Central Square property of the Burkhard Investment Company, lying between National boulevard and the route of the new Pico-to-the Sea boulevard at Eighth street, in Ocean Park, has been secured by Nickerson & Adams of this city. The tract has been in the hands of the present holders for twenty years and is in the midst of a district that has rapidly come to the front within recent times. The fact that the land all around it had been developed and improved led, in fact, to the determination of the owners to place the property on the market. Approximately $300,000 is said to have been expended in general improvements on the holding in preparing it for sale as a residence subdivision. About 250 lots are now being offered to buyers. Guy M. Bunch is in charge of the tract as sales manager. Offices have been opened on the property, in Los Angeles, in Pasadena, in Hollywood and in Ocean Park.

LARGE VALUATION.

Building permits to the number of 458, representing new structures to cost in the aggregate $1,526,356, were issued by the chief inspector of buildings of this city from July 1 to July 17, inclusively. Of the valuation total, $775,000 was included in a single permit for the twelve-story banking and office block that has just been started by the Commercial Fireproof Building Company at Fifth and Spring streets.

WILL CROWN EAST SIDE ELEVATION.

HUNDRED-ROOM APARTMENT HOUSE TO BE ERECTED AT STEPHENSON AND EUCLID.

A three-story brick apartment building to contain over 100 rooms is projected by the Southern California Brick Company on a sightly hill in East Los Angeles. The site, which lies between Stephenson avenue and Sixth street near Euclid avenue, is composed of eighteen large lots and is the highest part of a 105-lot tract owned by the builders.

The improvement, as designed by Architect Edward Cray Taylor, calls for a part two and part three-story building, the plan of which will form a letter "U." The large, open court will face the street, and will be of sufficient width to allow for a semi-circular driveway passing under a porte cochere. The elevations will be faced with red ruffled brick and the frieze will be decorated with tapestry brick laid in patterns.

The two wings of the building will be roofed with clay Spanish tile, while the roof space over the central portion will be used as a roof garden. A pergola and summer house will be features of the roof treatment.

The rooms will be divided into one and two-room suites, each with private bath. On the ground floor will be a spacious lobby, billiard room and ballroom. The building will cover a ground area of 157x85 feet and will face on Richmond terrace.

The space on one side of the structure is to be used for a private garage for the use of the guests, while on the opposite side two tennis courts will be built. The rest of the property will be laid out in terraces, paths and sunken gardens, the landscaping arrangements also calling for the planting of many trees.

DEALERS REPORT RECENT SALES.

Walters to local investor, southwest corner Central avenue and Adams street, 100x150 feet, improved with eight stores, $35,000.

LEASE WHOLE BUILDING.

The entire new building at Nos. 412-414 East Third street has been leased by three firms for a number of years at a given total rental of approximately $15,000. Leland Bros. & Co. will occupy a portion of the building with a complete line of belts and belting for machinery. The Hatfield Machinery Company, dealers in marine and stationary engines, will have a large space. Collins & Webb will install a full line of transmission machinery. The W. Ross Campbell Company, represented by Robert D. Pike, conducted all negotiations in these transactions.

SUBJECTS TODAY INTEREST JEWS.

CHAUTAUQUA ASSEMBLY TO HEAR OF INTERMARRIAGE AND CAUSE.

Interest in the Western Assembly of the Jewish Chautauqua Society is expected to be intensified today by the discussion of subjects close to the heart of all Jews. The programme yesterday included a sermon by Rabbi M. Fried of Sacramento at Temple Sinai and the inspection of the Jewish Orphans' Home by the visiting rabbis.

With Rabbi Rudolph I. Coffee of Pittsburgh speaking on "Intermarriage and Its Prevention," Miss Ada Goldsmith of San Francisco talking of "The Faith of Our Fathers" and Prof. E. L. Hardy's lecture, entitled "Leaders, but No Army," the meeting this evening at Temple B'nai B'rith will resolve itself into a call from Sinai.

A meeting will be held at Temple Sinai this morning at which the official business of the organization will be transacted. Rabbi M. Meyer, the chairman of the assembly, will preside, while Rabbi S. Hecht, Rabbi R. Farber and Mrs. Berthold Baruch will deliver addresses of welcome. Rabbi M. Fried of Sacramento will reply in the name of the assembly. Rabbi Meyer will also deliver an address on the "Aims of the Jewish Chautauqua," and Milton Shapiro will tell of the "Correspondence School of the Jewish Chautauqua."

Interesting programmes have been provided for tomorrow and Tuesday, including an address on "The Jew in America," by Rabbi Elkan Voorsanger of Grand Rapids.

NEW BANKING PLAN.

Los Angeles Institution to Make Loans to Non-Banking Wage Earners at Moderate Rates.

An industrial loan company to operate the Morris plan of banking is about to be organized in this city by Dr. Norman Bridge, L. N. Brunswig, Dr. Millbank Johnson, I. B. Newton, J. S. Torrance and W. H. Workman, Jr. The corporation, it is announced, will begin business about September 1 with a fully subscribed capital stock of $200,000.

The Morris plan, by which men without collateral may borrow money, has been put into effect in many cities and is declared to be an effective remedy for the loan-shark evil. The purpose of the local institution, like others established in the East, will be to provide means whereby non-banking wage earners and salaried people of sound character can borrow small sums of money to meet economic needs at 8 per cent. per annum and where they can establish lines of credit by the purchase of investment certificates that bear 6 per cent. interest.

WIRELESS UP TO DATE.

Year Book an Encyclopedia of the New Science Which Guards the ships of the World.

Ready reference on all phases of radiotelegraphy from 1831, when Michael Faraday discovered electromagnetic induction between two entirely separate currents, to 1913, when Marconi portable wireless sets were used in the second Balkan war, is to be found, togther with a wealth of information on the subject, in the Year Book of Wireless Telegraphy and Telephony, which has just been issued by The Wireless Age.

As wireless has grown, the Year Book has developed correspondingly. This is attested by the fact that there are 200 more pages in the 1914 Year Book than in the 1913 Year Book. In addition to the laws and regulations governing wireless telegraphy in each country of the globe, there is a list of the wireless stations of the world, the rates for all messages, and a most complete statement of the progress of experimental work. This last includes a survey of what is being done the world over in the way of perfecting the science by which messages are waved through space.

A most valuable feature of the book is the list of ship stations in the various countries, giving their call signals, range in nautical miles, the steamship lines to which they belong, wave length, the nature of the service performed, the hours of service and the charge for sending message. As with shore stations, the call letters of all ship stations are alphabetically arranged. This list alone makes the book invaluable to all who go down to the sea in ships.

TRULY A WONDERFUL PROPERTY
In one of Southern California's beautiful valleys, famous for its climate, scenic environments and fertile and productive soil, close to magnificent estates of millionaire winter residents, we offer an income estate with vast possibilities, both for cash returns and enhanced values. 70 acres are in full-bearing lemons and oranges. 60 acres beautiful meadow land dotted with immense live oaks, 27 acres foothills. An estimated lemon crop of $10,000 on the trees now—also about $10,000 worth of improvements and personal property. UNUSUAL REASONS REQUIRE QUICK SALE. The raw land alone would sell for $40,000. Here we have 70 acres in citrus fruits which under ordinary conditions would sell for $70,000 alone. The rest of the ranch is surely worth $30,000. Price $50,000 complete, personal property included—$15,000 cash, balance easy.

BEAUTIFUL WILSHIRE HOME

JUST FINISHED.

MUST BE SOLD AT ONCE.

$22,500 $22,500 $22,500

We wish to inform the buying public who are in the market for a high-class home in the Wilshire district, that we have, for sale, a house, the description of which would fail to convey the smallest particle of justice to the finished product.

Built by day labor under the personal supervision of a private party who "knows every nail used in its construction," places it on a level far superior to some, and at a price much less than most of the Wilshire houses.

Placed upon one of the highest points in the Wilshire district with a view of the mountains and surrounding country, which can never be shut off, the house is composed of twelve rooms, each unit of which is finished as completely as patience and skill can make it.

Downstairs the living-room, dining-room, den, solar room, breakfast-room, overlooking the most beautiful private gardens in the city, are finished in mahogany with lovely hand-painted silk tapestries.

From the breakfast-room is a large, cool porch, with tile floor, just the kind of a porch upon which one would enjoy a cool smoke, read any of the "six best sellers," or one could loll back in comfy chair on a summer afternoon and enjoy the view across green lawns and pretty gardens with lots of beautiful flowers giving out a fragrance which beggars description.

The most modern and up-to-date kitchen in tile and white enamel, with a specially constructed tile refrigerator with nickel trimmings, all built with the same careful attention given the rest of the house, and will stand the most critical examination of any modern housewife.

A beautiful and big, carefully finished staircase leads the way to the second floor, which contains four large, delightful bedrooms, and an enclosed sleeping porch, all exquisitely finished in white enamel; three tile baths with shower, and plenty of roomy closets.

Below is a large basement divided into three rooms with laundry and private lockers. Ruud heater, two gas furnaces, and a complete vacuum cleaning system making the house perfect and complete in every detail.

The yard is entirely covered by an automatic sprinkler system. At the rear is a big, well built double garage. Lot 75x150.

A special price of $22,500, if sold soon, with very reasonable terms, for this style of house makes it the biggest bargain in the city and places it in a class by itself. If you are in the market for a really beautiful home.......WE WOULD ADVISE YOU TO SEE THIS AT ONCE.

FOR SALE—

BEST
ALFALFA AND FRUIT LANDS.
$65 PER ACRE.

How would you like to buy first-class alfalfa and fruit land, with an inch or more of pure, flowing mountain water per acre, that only costs about 35 cents per year. Especially if the price per acre is only $65?
I specialize on lands in the finest valley in California, where water is more than abundant and cheap, where alfalfa makes 2 tons or more per cutting per acre, where the full market price is paid for butter fat by local creameries, and where cattle and live stock are fat the year 'round. Rich summer grazing can be had in neighboring reserves at cost of 25 cents per head for 4 months, and your stock comes out rolling fat. Climate is unsurpassed, water absolutely pure, right from mountain sources, good wells obtainable at low cost, and health conditions perfect. A natural sanitarium. The scenic beauties of this valley are famous, and the tonic qualities of its air well known. Now the home of many prosperous ranchers and orchardists, with room for many more. The finest place for a beautiful permanent home in all California, combined with good profits and a big, certain future. Only reason it was not all taken before was lack of railroad transporation, which it but recently acquired. I have studied this marvelous valley for years, made my own investments there successfully, and know it thoroughly. I can locate you right, on good properties, and at prices that will amaze you (considering the real values). Titles good. Will show you the valley thoroughly in my auto IF YOU MEAN BUSINESS. I can deliver the goods and if you are "from Missouri" I can certainly "show" you just what I describe. I also have some splendid developed properties that can be had at very reasonable figures, with good reasons for being for sale at all. Real bargains. Write, phone F6856, or call for personal interview at Room 302, I. W. Hellman Bldg. VAN DOKKELEN.

NORTH WHITTIER HEIGHTS.
THE "CREAM OF ORANGE, LEMON, WALNUT AND AVOCADO LAND SUBDIVISIONS.

A personal investigation of the citrus industry on the slopes of the Whittier Hills will convince the most skeptical that a 5-acre orange or lemon grove in bearing in this section will make a comfortable living for any average family, and 10 acres will bring you wealth.
No other horticultural or agricultural district in the whole of the United States can boast as many prosperous ranchers or orchardists who have started with so small an amount of capital.
The North Whittier Heights subdivision is being sold in either planted or unplanted tracts of 5 to 50 acres, and on exceptionally easy terms if desired. We will also contract to plant or care for groves for those who desire to have us do so.
Call at our office and let us take you out by automobile to see the 800 acres of young groves on our property and talk to the satisfied owners.

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

COME IN AND LET US SHOW YOU HOW YOU CAN BECOME THE OWNER OF SOME OF
THE CREAM OF THE SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY.
DOS PALOS RANCHO.

We offer in parcels to suit, 15,000 acres of the finest lands for the growing of alfalfa, dairying, fruit trees, grapes, olives, nuts and vegetables, that can be found in the State of California.
It is located in Fresno county, about 35 miles west and a little north of the city of Fresno, being but three miles south of the station of Dos Palos on the Southern Pacific Railroad, and connected by excellent roads, giving good transportation, freight, passenger and express facilities.
The soil of this tract is ideal in texture, being easily worked at practically any season of the year. It is a rich, deep, productive silt about 45 feet in depth and of great fertility, as evidenced by the native growth, and further proved by the crops we are raising there, and the splendid growth of our planted fruit trees.
There is absolutely NO ALKALI, NO HARDPAN, NO ADOBE, on the tract. It lies as level as a floor with a fall of ten feet to the north and 6 feet to the south, making it ideal for irrigation. The cost of preparing for irrigation is thus nominal. The soil takes water easily, retains it a long time and the water table is low enough to insure its never becoming water-logged or sour.
We have a banner stand of alfalfa, planted last April 2, 1913, yielding 7½ tons to date, with another heavy cutting on the way.
Fruit trees of all varieties planted about the same time last year have made a strong, healthy growth.
We have fully demonstrated the water supply as ample as to quantity and excellent as to quality, developed by wells and pumped by electricity.
Experts who have but recently examined our tract report it as one of the finest they have ever examined in California or elsewhere.
We will sell tracts in any size, with or without water development, at very low prices compared with real values.
Call at our office for full information and to see soil and crop samples, or write for descriptive circulars and information.
This property will stand right up to our every representation, and will bear the strictest investigation.
Will sell on liberal terms at $65 to $110 per acre.
If you are looking for the VERY BEST at today's low prices, on liberal terms, do not fail to look into our offer on this property. We will consider offers for large acreage on a basis that will be satisfactory to you.

INVESTIGATE THIS WITHOUT FAIL.
IT WILL PAY YOU.

GOVERNMENT LAND—

LAST CALL FOR
U. S. GOVERNMENT
CAREY ACT LANDS.
50 CENTS AN ACRE!
Under $1,000,000 Irrigation System
COMPLETED and in Operation.

This is your last opportunity to buy United States government land in the famous tested and proven Delta Project of Central Utah.

Former California ranchers who have bought and settled on this project value their lands at more than $200 per acre. If you have not exercised your Carey act right—act at once! Splendid water system completed and in actual operation. State of Utah has limited price of water to $40 an acre—$7 per acre cash and 12 years' time to pay the balance. For the land you pay only 25 cents an acre down, the remaining 25 cents an acre in 3 years.

Delta is now a settled district with ready markets and good schools. Only 5 hours from Salt Lake City and 20 hours from Los Angeles. Excellent climate and good, pure water. Water from irrigation system ready for delivery to every acre open to settlement. Come prepared to settle and establish yourself—speculators and those with practically no means are not wanted on this project. Fifteen tons of sugar beets to the acre have been raised here, up to 50 bushels of wheat and 100 bushels of oats from land one year from the brush. $75 to $100 an acre netted from alfalfa seed, 300 bushels of potatoes to the acre the first year. This type of land should soon pay for itself. Write or call at once for folder, containing detailed information, testimonials, etc. Special Homeseekers' excursion leaves Los Angeles Wednesday and Saturday mornings at 9 o'clock. Apply at our offices for special rates. This is a wonderful land opportunity. You should take advantage of it immediately if you are in a position to do so. Call or write for booklet giving testimonials from former California ranchers. Title to land is perfect; passes from the Federal government to the State and from the State to the settler.

BEST LOCATED CITRUS LAND IN CALIFORNIA.
$250,000 worth of land and water in the Redlands district, surrounding and adjoining the best producing olive, orange and lemon groves in the district. Over $300,000 worth of water now flowing from the tunnels and wells on the land this 18th day of July, 1914. This water can be increased any year at a nominal expense. Miles of water pipes, ranging in size from 6 to 18 inches in diameter. Land consists of 1000 acres, of which 160 are ready for oranges; about 400 acres can be prepared at a reasonable cost, and 400 acres bordering on stream contain millions of tons of granite boulders and gravel for crushing for road and building purposes. The last sale from this tract of land was made to a Redlands orchardist for $525 per acre. The county boulevards now being built to Bear Valley and all the resorts on Mill Creek and Santa Ana pass through this land. There are no hills or mountains. It has a gentle slope to the south and west. The uncultivated portion of it is exactly the same as the best part of Uplands and Claremont before they were prepared for trees. There are five packing houses within a half mile. Schools, stores and churches. Oiled roads, two railroads. Will consider in exchange a well-located hotel, apartment-house or good business property. THE GOLDFIELD TRINITY MINING COMPANY IS now launched and men are at work upon a cross-cut tunnel in which any blast may open up the big shoot of high-grade silver-lead ore that, according to the formation and actual find, runs through the great Tehoqua mine at Leadville, Washoe county, Nevada, and is followed into the adjoining Independence No. 4 claim (patented,) on which the tunnel is being driven. The vein is a true fissure, varying from a seam to 7 feet in width, and assays from $100 to $2000 per ton; sometimes carrying wire gold. On the Tehoqua claims this high-grade was struck at a depth of ten feet and from this point on to the 800-foot level, where the vein is six feet, is mined and shipped to the smelter at Murray, Utah, who charge nothing for treatment on account of its high fluxing qualities.

There are two concentrating mills on the Harmon property, used for the low-grade ore forming the vein matter, in which the shoots of high-grade are found. The "Harmon Company," operating on the Tehoqua mine, have refused $1,000,000 for their property. The Goldfield Trinity Company, operating immediately toward the west from the "Tehoqua," also refused $1,000,000 for their chance to make as big a mine as the "Tehoqua." Here is a splendid opportunity for the investor to join in the making of a big mine.

We offer for sale 2000 Home Makers at 6 1-4; 500 Commercial Oil; 1000 Midway View, at 4 3-4; bring in your Goldfield Trinity stock as we have parties who will accept it in exchanges, or give this stock for Home Building or other stocks.

SPECULATORS UNLOADING.

BLACK RUST AND WEATHER FEATURES OF THE MARKET.

Hope that a Spell of Coolness Had Conquered the Dangers of the Blight Cause a General Rush to Sell in the Wheat Pit of the Chicago Board of Trade.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, July 18.—Hope that cool, dry weather had conquered the worst of the danger from black-rust brought about general unloading today by speculators in wheat. In consequence, the market, although steady at the close, was ⅛ to ⅜c under last night. Corn suffered a net decline of ⅜ to ½ and oats of ¼ to ⅛@⅜. The outcome in provisions ranged from unchanged to a loss of 10c. Doubt whether any further spread of black rust will occur dominated the wheat pit at the start. Some crop experts even expressed the opinion that if atmospheric conditions remained auspicious the impairment of the yield of spring wheat taken as a whole would not prove to be of a serious character. Disappointing cables and liberal acceptance of bids sent from here to the country tended further to depress the market. Bullish percentages in the Canadian government crop report led only to a slight temporary upturn in wheat values. The effect was more than offset by the prospect of a decided enlargement of the domestic visible supply total on Monday. Corn weakened with wheat, and as a result of beneficial rains said to have fallen in parts of Kansas and Oklahoma. Free movement of new crops held buyers of oats in check. Provisions opened firm, but developed some weakness before the close. There was considerable realizing by longs.

VIEWS OF CANDIDATE'S WIFE

Mrs. Conrey's Reflections on the Evils of the Nauseating Direct Primary Law and Other Things.

BY ETHELYWN WELLS CONREY.

IT WOULD be interesting to have a convention of candidates' wives. It is certain that some interesting facts would be developed. Which one of the married pair is the ambitious one? "By that sin fell the angels;" and many a candidate's wife! Which one does the worrying? Not always the woman—men know how. Which one stands firmly for principle through all the temptations of a campaign? Alas! not always the woman. Women are weak on political and professional ethics, as yet.

The interchange of ideas at the wives' convention would be sure to result in reforms. I believe we would simplify things; but perhaps not. Reformers mean well, and they have done away with many evils, but one has only to be caught in the cumbrous creaking machine of the direct primary, which is the most roundabout thing in the world, to realize that we have not yet finished reforming our election laws.

In theory people name men for office, choosing thoughtfully, seeking for the best. In reality the candidate buys of verification deputies who secure signatures to his nomination papers. He cannot purchase all at once, but must take his nomination in microscopic sections at 5 cents a name—which sounds rather economical till you multiply by the necessary thousands of names, add the fees for precincting and indexing, and deduct about 40 per cent. of the names for illegibility.

After this I shall write my name so that it can be read, and I shall commit to memory the number of my precinct!

Non-partisan politics for many of our public servants is an excellent reform, but one has only to try a campaign without the stanch support of a party name to understand afresh the value of organization and union. We take such an endless time to educate ourselves to vote. Non-partisan will be an old story before we realize that we do not need to consider whether a man is a Socialist or a Prohibitionist when selecting a judge to decide if we shall be hanged. Heaven only knows how long the county officers and the State judiciary will have to be out of the party column before we understand what to do about them! And when we do understand the main fact, how can we find out about the men themselves? Lawyers know the judicial timber, and their wives may know, and the unfortunates who get into courts—but if you sell figured crepon behind a counter all day, and play bridge and visit the movies in your evenings of rest, how can you know the virtues of thirty-nine eminent judicial candidates? If an aqueduct is to be built, the men who do the work are selected by those who understand the requirements of the task; but you know how to sell goods, not how to choose engineers or judges. You have plenty of intelligence, but it is directed another way. The eminent jurists themselves could not sell a yard of crepon!

With no party backing it is every man for himself, and we may elect the man who shouts the loudest. One of the aspirants for high honors has caused our billboards to blossom with the blue and yellow statement that his motto is the Golden Rule. No doubt he will allow the rest of us to try to live by the same great precept. But war breaks all rules, even as elections damage the dignity of courts, and it is difficult to understand our billboard judge's point of view. It may be possible to justify the bitter competitive civilization of our day, but the Golden Rule should not be used as a cloak for personal ambition.

This convention of candidates' wives would have a platform. Perhaps it would start out: "We believe in husbands first and always." As a separate plank would be the demand that no child of a candidate should ever ask for an elective office. And we would end our platform with the slogan: "This once and never again!"

I met a candidate's wife last night who said her only fear was that her husband might really be elected. I have puzzled about her all day. Did she mean it? Some wives can't say a thing like that even in fun. Why they care so much they don't know, for their happiness depends on one man, not on the votes of 300,000 mere other people.

And yet, the other people have a great value just now. The individual has become a possible vote—a highly endowed instrument of fate, to be gazed at with awe and curiosity. His effect upon the candidate's wife may be one of two extremes. Either she becomes exceeding gracious, or she is so afraid of toadying that she is barely polite. There are quite a number of friends whom I wish to ask to dine with us, but I don't feel that I can do so until after election.

A candidate may be inconspicuous for a longer time than his friends desire, and yet live in dread of the limelight. That is a wandering spot of light that may catch him any minute, and fortunate is the candidate who is shown up smiling. As to my candidate, the only theatrical title bestowed on him is that of "Loan-Shark Harpooner." He has been publicly praised as the record maker in that line, but it did not strike him at the time that he was having sport, or earning a new name for himself.

In truth, my candidate hasn't been thinking of himself; hasn't been making speeches to remind people of himself; hasn't been looking after political fences. He has just attended to his work, giving always the best of himself to the task that the voters entrusted to him fourteen years ago, seeing in every case not only its legal tangle, but the human element behind the technicality.

An election is as much of a mixture of fun and of pain as life itself, and a planing mill is rather like them both. Did you ever see a board go through a planing mill? It protests and shrieks aloud, like the candidate's wife, against the knives, but once in it must go through, and it comes out at the other end, either better or worse for the process.

There is much noise and confusion both in the mill and in the election. The dust of wasted endeavor is thick in the air, but the fragrance of friendly helpfulness, like the incense of the fresh lumber, makes the place endurable. The worst egotist in the world couldn't face an election without the faith of at least a few friends. And even such an egotist, once in the mill, and meeting the disapproval of his associates, cannot turn back. It must be hard to run for office, when people tell you that you have made a mistake and had better have waited till you knew enough to fill the place wisely.

I started to write confessions, but that word brings a shadow of repentance with it, and as a candidate's wife, I repent of nothing—either matrimonial or political. I am aware that one cannot reflect without a calm and untroubled spirit, which is not an asset of campaigns, but one may cultivate difficult virtues—so I prefer to have made frank reflections rather than reflective confessions.

I am suddenly smitten with a new fear. The impossible does happen sometimes, and these wandering thoughts may be allowed the darkling glory of printers' ink; in which event, I would not place myself under the odium of being an anonymous protestor. Only, I will not show these pages to my husband, the candidate. It would be quite as effective, and far more agreeable to make a bon-fire.

SHOOTS GRIZZLY UPSIDE-DOWN.

OLD CANADIAN TRAPPER TELLS THRILLING EXPERIENCE OF LAST TRIP.

"Did y'ever lie on your back in the brush and shoot a wounded grizzly that was standing right above your head?" asked Joe Juneau, an old trapper of British Columbia, who works hard all winter in the mountain wilds getting furs and spends all that he has made each summer at the beaches of Southern California, upon his arrival in Los Angeles yesterday from the North.

"Well, it ain't so darn funny when you actually have to do it to escape gettin' hugged by the grizzly. While I like to come down here every summer and watch young people hug each other on the beaches and would like to get hugged myself sometimes by one o' them pretty lassies, grizzly hugging is one kind I don't hanker for."

"Ole Joe," as he is known from one end of the Northwest to the other, while down this way they call him Mr. Juneau, had set out for the mountains to get a perfectly good caribou head for a nice little tenderfoot who couldn't get one for himself.

"I never met caribou nor nothin'," he said, "till right on the edge of the timber. Suddenly I saw a big bear! Say, I cut loose with my ole Betsy without thinkin' at all. It was a grizzly and a dandy big whopper.

"Well, I follered him up. I'd got to a small cluster of trees before I seen him again.

"I was so blame excited, just like a dang fool tenderfoot seein' his first deer, I fired again tho' I could only see his head and shoulders. This would a' been enough if I had only been myself. But in the excitement I had forgot that my gun was sighted at 100 yards and I didn't even think to shadow shoot, so of course I overshot him. But I guess I kinda' parted his hair all right, for he turned and charged right at me.

"But suddenly his bearship changed his mind. He took a long circle, looping off thro' the meadow. Then I shot a third time and wounded him, too, but it only served to quicken his getaway.

"However, this time I must a' got a little reckless, 'cause I went right after him in spite of my creed, which is the creed of all old hunters and trappers, not to follow a grizzly, especially not a wounded grizzly, single-handed. I followed the blood tracks into the thick underbrush. Pretty soon it got so tight and tangled I had to get down on my hands and knees and crawl along, pushing my gun ahead of me.

"I might a' knowed it would happen, then. Suddenly I poked my head and shoulders through into a little clearing, and there was that grizzly reared up right above me.

"There wasn't no question about his intentions. It had to be dead grizzly or dead man in about the briefest sort of a jiffy of time. I jest rolled over on my back and fired at him upside down. The brush was so thick about me it would a' been impossible for me to get to my knee in time.

"Say, if that grizzly had a' toppled over forward instead a' backward, he'd a' fallen square on top o' me. That's how close we were.

"But he fell backward all right. And for a time after I heard the crush, I didn't know which was the deadest, that ole grizzly or me. It was my first attempt to aim upside down. The scare sort a' left me collapsed. But I'd hit him fair, under the chin, and right up through the mouth into the brain.

"Yes, I got him all right. Come on, let's have another."

CLUBWOMAN DIES ABROAD.

With Recovery from Chronic Illness Just Reported, Angeleno Passes Away in Switzerland.

Cabled information to J. J. Marquis from his uncle, August Marquis, yesterday conveyed the information that Mrs. August Marquis had died at Lausanne, Switzerland, just at the time when her recovery from a chronic ailment had been considered absolute.

She was prominent in Los Angeles social and club life and last September left with her husband for Europe to take radium treatments under some of the foremost specialists of the continent. During life, a large, healthy and vigorous woman, few of her friends had the slightest intimation of her sickness and to many, the European journey was merely for pleasure.

The Marquis home, a beautiful residence at No. 2302 West Twenty-fifth street, was placed in the care of the nephew, J. J. Marquis, and two weeks ago he began to plan arrangements for the return of his relatives. In a number of letters written recently, the complete recovery of Mrs. Marquis was reported. Whether her fatal sickness was the result of the treatments, or was caused from other than the original one, is not yet known.

With the permission of the Swiss government, the remains will be brought to Los Angeles for interment, but details as to this were impossible to ascertain by cable yesterday. Mrs. Marquis was about 42 years of age and left only her husband, who is a wealthy mine and land owner.

STEEL TRADE BETTER OFF.

BUT THE STOCK MARKET NEVERTHELESS SHOWS WEAKNESS.

Wall Street Unable Wholly to Resist the Sinister Influences in Individual Shares—Some Doubt that the Railways Will Get Their Five Per Cent. Rate Increase.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—The stock market proved unable to resist wholly the sinister influence of weakness in individual stocks this week. The severity of the Commerce Commission's arraignment of New Haven apparently gave credence to rumors of an unfriendly attitude to the railroad's claims for freight increases. There were rumors, also, of intended Congressional investigation of other railroads. Political motives found play in foreign markets as well, where reports of Austrian complications in the Balkans blocked the good effect of the French loans success. Huerta's abdication proved a small factor. Restraint thus was exercised on the influence of bountiful crop promise and reports of industrial resumptions and trade revival. Selling of the non-dividend railway issues was resumed at the outset of today's short session, and a few more new low records were established. Features of especial weakness included Toledo, St. Louis & Western common and preferred, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, Texas and Pacific, New York, Chicago & St. Louis. Erie and Baltimore & Ohio equaled their recent low prices. More foreign selling of Baltimore & Ohio preferred for future delivery was reported. Standard stocks were steady after the first half-hour, prior to which some material recessions were recorded. From steel trade centers came word of increasing operations at higher prices. United States Steel Corporation and several of the independents announced advances in rates for various manufactured products. An actual cash gain of $9,696,000 was made by the local banks, with a loan decrease approximating $35,000,000, and an expansion in revenues of almost $15,000,000. The bond market was again irregular, with weakness in minor issues. Total sales par value, $787,000. Panama 3's declined 1½ per cent. on call on the week.

New York Curb Stocks.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—The curb market was dull, with prices unchanged in most of the issues today. United Cigar Stores was in demand at the close, and there was a slightly better tone to Tonopahs. Greene-Cananea was strong. Prices were unchanged in oils. Prairie was quoted at a higher range, but trading was limited. The Boston market opened firm and higher, with week-end odd-lot trading. Alaska advanced quite rapidly. Calumet and Arizona is very strong. It rallied to 66 on a small volume of business. Following are quotations:

COMMERCIAL.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

A small glut of pineapples was quickly worked off yesterday morning at 5 cents a pound for the fruit. This is the lowest quotation made in some months and comes with the heavy receipts of the past week, two steamers having arrived with some of the fruit. The first quinces of the year have made their appearance and are selling at $1 to $1.25 per box. Nectarines are at the best of the harvest. The white variety, which has by far the best flavor, but is in least demand, is selling as low as 85 cents a lug. The red nectarines are bringing up to $1.25 on extra fancy stock. Damson, Wickson, Tragedy, Burbank, French prune and green Gage are a few of the plum varieties selling from 50 cents to $1 per lug box.

Trading in staple products was light yesterday, there being no session of the produce exchange and practically a closed market. Prices all through the list held steady. Receipts of eggs were 221 cases. Butter arrivals totaled 53,670 pounds, and the market in San Francisco was reported off ½ cent. Cheese receipts were 5520 pounds.

A few northern old stock potatoes are still coming in and are selling from $1.40 to $1.50. A higher price is looked for in the spud market during the next few days because of the fact that local stock is pretty well cleaned up and it will be essential to receive larger quantities from the river district to prevent a shortage in supply. Receipts have been on the increase during the week past and yesterday 1783 sacks were reported in. A firm market on all onions is reported and further advances may take place owing to the continued good call for local stock from outside points.

Fruit receipts were light. Ten cars of watermelons, a car of casabas, only a car of cantaloupes, 4788 boxes of peaches, 638 crates of grapes, 855 boxes of prunes, 701 boxes of apples, and 704 boxes of plums were reported from the outside districts.

$5,500,000 In Thirty Months

In thirty months' time the National mine of Nevada produced more than $5,500,000. In a lawsuit held at Carson City witnesses testified that in four hours the general manager alone, took out $94,000. At another time he mined a single piece of ore that netted $70,000. A shift boss took out

4500 Pounds Worth $365,500

Gold mining pays enormous profits. The Tom Reed is paying its stockholders 6 per cent. a month—72 per cent. a year; the Goldfield Consolidated has paid over $27,000,000 in dividends in the last few years, and the Tonopah Mining over $11,000,000. Scattered over the mining districts of the West are many mines that are daily turning out fortunes. Small sums of money put into gold mines frequently return immense sums. Mining makes millionaires of poor men.

A California Gold Mine

Recently Los Angeles mining men have secured a California gold mine. This mine has been nicely developed to date and there are quantities of ore in sight, and hundreds of tons have already been mined. This may not be a National, a Tom Reed, a Goldfield Consolidated, or even a Tonopah Mining, but it certainly is a mine of exceptional promise and one which we believe can be made to pay tremendous profits. And then, it may develop into a bigger and richer mine than any I have just mentioned. A company of but 10,000 shares is being organized to own and operate this mine, and to raise a small sum of money quickly a special inducement is offered to those who first subscribe for the stock. This stock will be sold unded a positive guarantee of your money back out of the first gold produced. After your money has been paid back in full you keep your stock and participate in the dividends. Full particulars free. You owe it to yourself to investigate. Write today. CHAS. L. FULTON, GROSSE BLDG., LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The market opened with the sale of ten shares at $69.50—up 1½ points. Ten more shares sold at $69. The closing bid was $68.37½ at $69. Los Angeles Investment touched 69 cents, being slightly easier than the previous day. Associated Oil shaded. National Pacific was firmer. Consolidated Mines and California Hills were barely steady. As a whole the market was quiet.

New York Cotton Market.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, July 18.—Disappointing cables and reports of a few showers in Oklahoma and the possibility of more over the week-end were responsible for easiness seen in the cotton market after the opening today. Reports from the textile industry show improvement. Mercantile agencies say the bumper crops in the West are responsible for a much better inquiry for dry goods from that section.

Slauson avenue. The Pacific Electric locals make the distance between downtown Los Angeles and Huntington Park in sixteen minutes, and the yellow cars do almost as well, with all their stops. Between them the two lines give the town a service that is unexcelled in the suburban field. The three transcontinental railways that skirt the town offer the best of shipping facilities and have helped to make the Huntington Park district the "vegetable garden of Los Angeles."

Adjoining Huntington Park on the south the sightly Walnut Park subdivision is being built up with attractive homes set in the walnut groves of the old Cudahy ranch. The intensive suburban development of the entire ranch and its incorporation within the limits of Huntington Park will be realizations of the next few years. The yellow cars now come to the edge of the property and many of the residents of Walnut Park and its vicinity are, like a large percentage of the population of Huntington Park itself, commuters having business interests in Los Angeles.

To the east of Huntington Park are the lands of the old Laguna ranch, nearly 3000 acres of which are now being added to the small-farm development around the town. A townsite has been laid out on this holding and the whole bids fair to become a thickly-settled community within the next few years, by which time Huntington Park will undoubtedly have expanded to meet and include the entire area.

It is the boast of Huntington Park that practically all of its agricultural back country is under actual cultivation, even the large unsubdivided ranch tracts being leased out almost entirely to truck gardeners. Settlers in the district do not have to make any experiments with the soil, as do the "pioneers" of so many sections.

The people of Huntington Park and its vicinity are wide awake to the advantages and opportunities they enjoy and have been progressive enough to do everything in their power to keep their district abreast of other Southland communities in all that makes for ideal urban conditions. They have just completed a $100,000 Union High School that compares favorably with the best in the Southwest. A new and thoroughly modern grammar school has also just been added to the educational equipment of the district.

The town itself recently voted $45,000 in bonds for a City Hall, an ornamental lighting system, an up-to-date fire-fighting apparatus and other municipal needs. These bonds have been sold and their proceeds are now being utilized. A site for the City Hall has been secured and plans for the building are now being completed by a Los Angeles architect.

Ornamental iron light posts have been distributed along both sides of Pacific boulevard for a mile and a half, and these will soon be set up. The installation of these electroliers marks the beginning in a plan now being matured for making Long Beach boulevard, from its juncture with Pacific boulevard at the southern edge of Huntington Park to Long Beach, a great lighted way.

In addition to the two new public schools, the town boasts two other modern grade institutions. Six churches have been built by as many denominations and others are being planned. The town is the seat of a Christian training school maintained by the Society of Friends. The Jewish Orphans' Home of Southern California recently completed a fine group of three buildings in the place.

Building permits in Huntington Park for the past year represent new structures costing in the aggregate $300,000. Approximately forty new houses are now being erected in the town and two brick blocks are being added to the improvements of the business section.

MANY CITIES SHOW LOSS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA BUILDING ACTIVITY NOT UP TO STANDARD.

Twenty-one cities of Southern California show a total of $16,632,880 in the valuation of building permits issued during the first six months of 1914, according to the Southwest Contractor. The total for the corresponding period of 1913 was $30,424,994. "The last half of 1913," says the construction publication named, "showed a continuous decline, whereas the prospect for the rest of this year would indicate, if anything, an increase in activity over the showing for the last six months. With general business conditions at a low ebb all over the country, Southern California may consider itself fortunate if the forecast of 65 to 75 per cent. of last year's total is attained this year, as we believe may conservatively be expected."

A review of the showing of the twenty-one cities included in the Southwest Contractor's statistics follows:

LAUNCH CAMPAIGN FOR AUDITORIUM.

BOND ELECTION THIS MONTH TO DECIDE FATE OF SANTA MONICA PROJECT.

An active campaign has been launched at Santa Monica for the support of a bond issue of $150,000 to cover the cost of a municipal auditorium at that place. Those furthering the plan hope to have the building completed in time to be available for the sessions of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges when that body meets in convention here in 1915, and to provide hall space for many other great gatherings of the exposition year.

Carl F. Schader has donated to the city of Santa Monica a site for the proposed auditorium adjacent to the new municipal pier. The ground is declared to be worth $20,000. The tender has been officially accepted by Mayor Dudley and the City Council.

The bond issue is to be voted upon July 28 and campaign committees are actively at work. In the proposed auditorium it is planned to install a pipe organ to cost $10,000, a gymnasium, art gallery and assembly quarters for clubs.

PAYS CASH FOR HOME.

William H. Russell, a Ventura capitalist, has bought a sixteen-room house at No. 611 South Moreland avenue, at a price reported to have been $17,000, cash. The house is one of the attractive large homes of the Moreland-avenue section and is a modern structure with ground improvements, garage and servants' quarters. Certain alterations are said to be planned by way of enlarging the house to suit the ideas of the buyer. The deal was made through Ralph E. Ford, manager of the house and lot department of the Janss Investment Company.

FOR WHOLE FAMILY.

Texas Rancher Buys Large Tract Near Niland and Will Divide It Among His Children.

A. A. Cox, a business man and rancher of El Paso, Tex., has purchased 200 acres near the new town of Niland, in Imperial Valley, and with members of his family has started overland to take up his abode on the property. The buyer, it is announced, will build a $2500 house for himself, houses for each of his two sons and their wives, a house for a daughter and her husband, and a fifth house for the employees of his place. The live stock for the new ranch and the furniture for the projected houses arrived at Niland last week, according to information to the California Land and Water Company, whose agents made the sale. Cox is shipping also gas engines for raising water from the irrigating ditches into high settling tanks, from which it will be distributed to the five houses. The 200 acres bought by Cox and his family are in section 25. The land will be divided into five forty-acre tracts, with a home on each. Each parcel will be farmed separately.

BUYS HILL TRACT.

Syndicate Acquires Acreage Near Glendora and Will Conduct Extensive Development Operations.

GLENDORA, July 18.—Philip Haas has sold to G. H. Blackwood and associates 162 acres of the close-in San Jose Hill land. The property is improved with an eight-room California bungalow, barn and garage. Two acres are set to family orchard. The consideration is given at $17,500. About half of the tract is cleared and ready for the plow. The new owners expect to raise a variety of fruits and to plant five acres to avocados.

Mrs. A. S. Huhn has sold to William B. Fleet a ten-acre tract fronting on Alosta avenue. The land is set solidly to nine-year-old Washington navel and lemon trees in a high state of cultivation. The price is reported at $18,000. The buyer brought a ten-acre grove adjoining six months ago.

Mrs. A. S. Huhn has sold to Dr. S. G. Herrington a five-acre tract fronting Alosta avenue and improved with a six-room residence. The property is set solidly a seven-year-old trees. The consideration is given at $10,000. Dr. Herrington is the owner of two other fine citrus fruit ranches, and has been a citrus fruit grower in this valley for the past four or five years.

LAUNDRY PROJECTED.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 18.—An up-to-date steam laundry is to be constructed at once at Huntington Beach, John F. Shearon and John H. May of Los Angeles having incorporated the Troy Laundry Company. A building 30x60 feet in size will be erected at the corner of First and Walnut. The laundry is to have capacity to take care of the business not only of Huntington Beach, but also of Newport Beach, Sunset Beach and other places adjoining.

LEADS ON COAST.

Los Angeles Still Surpassing San Francisco, Seattle and Portland in Point of Building Activity.

Los Angeles continued to lead the cities of the Pacific Coast in building activity during the month of June, in spite of the fact that its totals for the month revealed a falling off in construction operations as compared with the same month a year ago. As compared with the 946 permits and $1,682,057 building valuation of this city, San Francisco has 495 permits and $1,308,882 valuation; Seattle, 788 permits and $1,163,165 valuation, and Portland, 536 permits and a valuation of $834,435.

By comparison with some of the eastern cities whose records Los Angeles has been regularly besting for years, the figures for this city were not up to standard in the month of June. Of the places of less than 1,000,000, Buffalo eclipsed Los Angeles in total valuation with $2,569,000; Pittsburgh with $2,450,281, and St. Paul with $1,981,250. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, as usual, headed the entire list of cities.

FOR LONG TERM.

The Standard Equipment Company of No. 204 East Fourth street, wholesalers and jobbers of bakers' and confectioners' machinery, with the Cream Mello Manufacturing Company of No. 430 East Third street, bakers' and confectioners' specialty chemists, have leased for a long term of years the store at Nos. 234-236 East Fourth street, from Bryan-Garnier-Brandenberg. H. L. Suydam was the broker.

AT NUEVO RANCHO.

C. A. Pitcher has bought from the James R. H. Wagner Company forty acres at Nuevo Rancho, all of which he intends to plant to deciduous fruits. The consideration is reported at $10,000. This is the largest individual sale made in the Perris-Lakeview-Hemet Valley region for several weeks. G. L. Norton of Bloomington has purchased five acres in the same tract, with the announced intention of building a home within a small fruit orchard.

Transformation.

MERGING INTO VAST SUBURB.

Rich Farm Lands in Zone of City Development.

Old Ranches Passing Before Southeast Advance.

Huntington Park Territory Coming Into Own.

When the heirs of the late Michael Cudahy sold the 2000-acre Cudahy ranch at the southern edge of Huntington Park to a syndicate early in 1912 there were many who questioned the optimistic predictions of the purchasers that the property would soon be transformed into a residence suburb of Los Angeles. That the syndicate members knew what they were talking about, however, is amply attested by the phenomenal progress that has been witnessed in the tract, even in the short time that has elapsed since the old ranch changed hands.

The Cudahy ranch, in common with much of the other acreage lying in the vicinity of Huntington Park, was originally a part of the famous Nadeau vineyard, which at one time produced nearly a third of the wine made in California. The old Nadeau homestead is today about all that remains to remind one of the days gone by, one large parcel after another of the original land domain having responded to the call of modern development and progress.

When Michael Cudahy bought in the early nineties the part of the ranch that afterward came to bear his name, it was his intention to make the land the site of a mammoth packing-house. He abandoned this plan as soon as he discovered the wonderful productiveness of the soil of the place and at once began its systematic development as an agricultural tract. The result was that the Cudahy ranch at the time it was finally sold for subdivision, was one of the most highly-improved and developed tracts in Southern California.

Immediately following the transfer of the ranch a considerable portion of it adjoining a corner of Huntington Park was cut into residence lots. This part of the property is today well built up. A sightly portion of the property, comprising 500 acres of producing walnut orchard, is comprised within the limits of Walnut Park, which lies along both sides of Long Beach boulevard, directly adjoining Huntington Park on the south.

In laying out Walnut Park, the owners, instead of clearing the ground, as is so often done by subdivisionists, cut up the property in such a manner as to leave a number of trees on each site. As a result, the homes of the tract stand in a natural grove, and have a charm of setting all their own. Paved streets, sidewalks and curbs have been installed throughout the property, which also contains all the public utilities of a city. The proximity of the subdivision to the center of Huntington Park gives its residents all the advantages of the schools, churches and trading facilities of that place. The yellow cars come to the edge of Walnut Park, giving its residents a 5-cent fare into the heart of Los Angeles.

Three attractive homes have been completed in Walnut Park within the past few days, being added to the many already there. Sales in the tract have reached a high total during the present summer, according to Victor G. Kleinberger and Frank H. Edwards, the subdividers and agents for the subdivision, who also announce the early beginning of work upon a number of new residences.

PLAN LIGHTED WAY.

Following the installation of the mile and a half of ornamental lights on Pacific boulevard in Huntington Park, the iron posts for which have just been distributed, it is expected that the movement for making Long Beach avenue a great lighted way from its juncture with Pacific boulevard at Florence avenue to the heart of Long Beach will take new life. Arrangements have practically been made for carrying the system from Florence avenue south through Walnut Park. Five miles of Pacific avenue in Long Beach have already been illuminated in a similar manner, the ornamental lights of that thoroughfare now extending to Willows.

PLANS FINISHED.

Work to Be Begun at Once on Attractive New Morningside Grammar School at San Fernando.

SAN FERNANDO, July 18.—Plans for the attractive new grade school to be built in the Morningside district at the east edge of this place have just been completed by Architects John C. Austin and W. C. Pennell of Los Angeles. The school, which will be thoroughly modern in every respect, will cost approximately $40,000 and will meet a real need in a rapidly-growing community.

The building will be of reinforced concrete construction and will have a cement plastered exterior and clay tile roof. It will contain eight classrooms, departments for domestic science and manual training and rooms for teachers and principal. Construction is to be begun at once.

CLASSIC IN STYLE.

New Alvarado Street Theater Has Imposing Front—Contains Auditorium and Stores, with Apartments.

One of the handsomest of the many moving picture playhouses that have recently sprung up in various parts of Los Angeles is the new Alvarado Theater, on the east side of Alvarado street just south of Seventh. The place, which was planned by Architects John C. Austin and W. C. Pennell, is owned by Judge J. L. Murphy and is under lease to F. C. Randolph. The building covers a ground area of 50x150 feet and is of brick and concrete construction.

The front of the structure is unusually imposing, being classic in design. Four tall columns and a recessed entrance are features. On the first floor, in addition to the theater auditorium, are two store rooms, while the front portion of the second story is given over to apartments.

TANK CONTRACT LET.

Los Angeles Concern to Construct Gigantic Oil Receptacles at El Segundo—Rushing Railway Line.

EL SEGUNDO, July 18.—Adams & Abbott will commence work on two bungalows, of four and five rooms, respectively, near Penn street, the first of the week. Mr. Bruin has started a home on Eucalyptus drive. W. B. Forsyth of Glendale has leased two rooms in the McCray building, which he will remodel for a large dry goods and men's furnishing store. Work was started this week on the grading for eighteen additional oil tanks in Department B of the Standard Oil refinery here. The Lacey Company of Los Angeles has secured the contract for the erection of the tanks, each of which will have a capacity of 65,000 barrels.

Another gang of men has been put on the construction work of the new El Segundo-Hawthorne line and the poles and wires are already put in as far as the townsite limits. The Pacific Electric is rushing this work so that the line may be completed by August.

TRACT OPENING.

A new tract of small farms, named Chanticleer Acres was opened by J. W. Young & Co., last Wednesday. The tract is located on the Redondo boulevard, just beyond Inglewood. The first subdivision of the property consists of 160 half-acre lots. All the streets have been graded and the work of oiling and surfacing will be started within the next few days. Contracts have been let for the installation of a water system to connect with the Inglewood Water Company's mains.

southern edge of Huntington Park and Willows is the twelve-mile stretch of Long Beach boulevard yet to be provided for in the lighting scheme. The illumination of the boulevard through Walnut Park will bring the gap of unlighted highway down to eleven miles. The boulevard itself passes through a rich farming territory for its entire extent south of Walnut Park and most of the owners of the district are already said to have expressed their approval of the lighting plan. Plans are shaping in Lynwood, four miles south of Huntington Park, for carrying the system through a considerable segment of boulevard included within the limits of that place.

The people of the Walnut Park and Huntington Park districts are also lending their hearty support to the plan for carrying Alvarado street as a great travel artery for motor trucks from Los Angeles to the harbor. The proposed extension of the street would form the western boundary line of both places.

ALMOST ADJOINS CITY.

Two miles east of Huntington Park, along the line of the county's Laguna and Florence highway, another large suburban farm and residence district is in the making as the result of the purchase by the Laguna Land and Water Company from the late Arcadia de Baker of close to 3000 acres of the old Laguna ranch. Close to 200 acres of the property has been laid out as a townsite addition to the present village of Bell. The rest is to be given over to small farming tracts of from one to ten acres.

The tract is a small agricultural empire to itself, being at the present time almost entirely under cultivation by various land tenants. More than 1100 acres in one body is in sugar beets. East and south are thousands of acres of surrounding farming lands. At its northwest corner the property is only about a quarter of a mile from the Los Angeles city limits at Vernon avenue.

The district has already been provided with cement ditches for irrigation, with a modern domestic water system and with gas and electricity. The improvements of the townsite are in keeping with those of other suburban communities.

OF LOMBARDIC DESIGN.

New Intermediate School at Orange to Follow Italian Style—Will Be of Reinforced Concrete Construction.

ORANGE, July 18.—Construction has been begun upon the $45,000 intermediate school planned by Architect J. Flood Walker of Santa Ana, for this place, the Long Beach Brick Company having the contract. The school is to be ready for occupancy by the opening of the fall term.

The building will be of Lombardic design and of reinforced concrete construction, the walls being faced with old gold tile and tan stucco and the roof being of red clay tile. Provision is made for eight classrooms, domestic science rooms, sloyd rooms, teachers' and principal's rooms, an assembly hall and a library. The structure will cover a ground area of 207x75 feet.

SUBSTANTIAL GAIN.

More Permits Issued in Glendale Thus Far During July than in Whole Month of June.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLENDALE, July 15.—In the past week J. M. Banker, building inspector, has issued twenty-five building permits, which is a substantial increase over the entire month of June and more than double the number for the month of May.

Dr. N. L. Rudy was granted a permit for the construction of a $5000 brick block at No. 1220 West Broadway and has begun work on the structure. A. W. Ballinger will start at once a seven-room, two-story residence to cost $4500. Philip W. Parker has a permit to build a seven-room, two-story dwelling to cost $2500. Gustave Johnson will build a five-room bungalow to cost $2000, and N. W. Chandler has a permit for an eight-room dwelling to cost $3500.

TAKES ACREAGE OPTION.

Manufacturing Concern Secures Control of South Pasadena Tract as Possible Site for Extensive Plant.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOUTH PASADENA, July 18.—George W. Glover has given an option on his twelve-acre ranch in this city to Martin Kallman, manager of the Nomel Company. The consideration is rumored to have been between $75,000 and $100,000. The tract is situated in the northeastern section of South Pasadena and lies between Arroyo drive and Grand avenue.

The Nomel Company is engaged in the manufacture of pure fruit juices and extracts, and is said to be planning the establishment of an extensive plant on the ground secured. One-half of the land, it is stated, will be reserved for the laboratories of the company and for parkings, the other half being subdivided into building lots, to be sold to the employees of the company.

Architect Norman F. Marsh of Los Angeles is preparing plans for the city building to be erected at the corner of Mound avenue and Mission street. The structure will be used primarily for the housing of fire apparatus, but will also contain offices for the city telephone exchange and the jail. The second story will be fitted up to accommodate the families of the firemen. The structure will be of brick, two stories, and of an artistic design. It will cost approximately $10,000.

FOR ACREAGE TRACT.

Involving a reported total consideration of $14,300, an exchange deal was consummated last week by Robert Marsh & Co., in which twelve acres, improved, near Stanton, and an eight-room house at Normandie and Garfield avenues, in this city, figured. John H. Hollowell, with the Marsh Company, acted for both parties to the transaction. The acreage was owned by J. A. Stroud of Stanton and the Los Angeles property by Albert Linde.

WAR ON BUSINESS AGENTS.

These Leeches Demand to Be Paid for Their Influence to Prevent Labor Disturbances.

[Memphis Commercial Appeal:] Chicago is about to enter into a war upon the business agents or the walking delegates of labor unions engaged in the building trades and transportation by team and in excavation work.

The business agents, it is charged, have organized a system of blackmail, and unless contractors "come across" they find themselves struck, and if they attempt to secure other contracts the strike follows them.

A few days ago one of these business agents was shot to death by a small contractor. The contractor stated that he had already given this man several hundred dollars. The agent told him that if he did not give him $200 more he would order the workingmen off the job.

True to his word, the business agent appeared, the contractor was at the end of his rope and in a fit of frenzy he shot the business agent dead.

Now the whole matter goes into the Federal courts, John J. McLaughlin, a prominent contractor and State representative, has gone before a grand jury and testified to the giving of several thousand dollars to business agents.

It is charged that the business agents of electricians, boiler and tank workers, glaziers and painters have received their bits from every contract that has been undertaken in Chicago. The usual fees for business agents on a building costing more than $2,000,000 is $100,000.

These business agents are often just as great enemies of organized labor as they are of contractors. They call men away from jobs, and these men are often out a month. In the meantime their wages stop. They may receive a small strike benefit, but they must be content with little until the business agents and contractors fix up their differences.

The charges are specific and numerous, and they will probably go into a Federal court, where they will be investigated under the statutes denouncing conspiracy.

STRIKE IN BRITISH ARSENAL.

Unionites Attempt to Dictate to the Government as to Who Shall Be Given Employment.

[Washington Post:] The strike which began in the Woolwich arsenal recently over the dismissal of one man, has spread with such rapidity that the great government gun factory is now silent and practically deserted.

With such determination has the case of this one man been taken up that nearly 8000 men have already ceased work, and from 5000 to 7000 others may be involved.

The trouble arose over the employment of non-union labor. The union's executives recently issued instructions that if any man was called on to take part in a job on which non-unionists had been employed he should refuse to do it. The first man so to be called on was instructed to erect a machine on a concrete foundation which, it is alleged, was laid down by non-union men. He refused and was discharged, and the strike began.

"STAIRCASE BUILDINGS."

New Type of French Apartment House Built in Tiers After Plan of Egyptian Pyramid.

French architects have recently originated a type of apartment building that is bound to influence city planning and the construction of city dwelling houses the world over. It may be described as the "staircase building," and apart from being novel and attractive, it has the inestimable advantage of solving, to a great extent, the problem of light and air for all in narrow, crowded streets.

The first floor only extends to the building line. The succeeding floors are each set back a certain distance, the free space in front of each floor being utilized as an open porch or promenade, or converted into a window-box garden. Naturally, any given floor is narrower than those below it, until, when we reach the top, we find a floor so narrow that it can accommodate only one apartment. But that apartment has the benefit of light on all sides, if the building stands clear of its neighbors, and it consequently commands a higher rental.

This new idea is of particular interest to Brooklyn, which has been concerning itself for the past two years with a city-planning campaign, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The Height of Buildings Commission, appointed some time ago by the municipal government of the Greater City, has paid special attention to the question of protecting city dwellers from the evil results not only of overcrowding but of shutting off of light and air that may occur, for instance, if twelve-story buildings are erected on either side of one that is only five or six stories high. In Paris, that particular kind of problem does not exist. Buildings of all kinds are restricted to seven stories, and a new structure must be designed to harmonize with its Backed by all the resources of the Southern Pacific Railway, with the funds of the United States to draw against, Engineer J. A. Ockerson, using the pile method, failed in the long struggle to close this breach.

The efforts and failures of the California Development Company, using piles, to close the cut in 1905, should not be forgotten, nor the enormous cost of finally shutting off the water, stated by the Southern Pacific to have been $1,600,000, which, by the way, has never been paid.

The recent failure to pile across the breach in the levee south of Andrade, with a loss of $30,000, and abandonment of the attempt, is a sufficient reminder that the pile method is not necessarily successful.

Early in June, 1914, a breach occurred in the volcano lake levee, through which part of the water has since been flowing into the Imperial Valley, and if permitted to remain open it might enlarge until the whole river is again rushing into the Salton Sea, as it did in 1905-1906.

Work has begun on the closing of this breach by starting to drive piles across.

As I do not consider this to be the surest and certainly not the quickest or cheapest way of closing a breach, I propose to describe my method, to show that there is something to fall back upon, in case the present attempt should not succeed, and it would not cost $1,600,000 either—less than 1 per cent. of that sum!

There is nothing technical about my method; in fact, a friend of mine remarked, "that is not 'engineering;' it is just common sense; anybody might have thought of that."

The breach is about 150 feet wide and maybe twenty feet deep. I should take twelve lengths of four-foot hog wire, each 150 feet long, and lace them firmly together with wire to form a large net 150 feet by forty-eight feet; run a cable through each edge, one through the center, and one twelve feet from one edge; weight the center cable, and the front edge and drag the whole net across the breach so that the two weighted cables, and twenty-four feet of the net lie on the bottom under the rushing water, and twenty-four feet are raised into an upright position, so that all of the water is flowing through the meshes of the net; secure the ends of the cables to deadmen, and then begin to throw in sacks of sand at both ends so as to prevent the breach from widening; these sacks of sand lie on the net at the bottom, and cannot be carried by the water through the upright part of the net.

The weight of these sacks pins the net down, and by maneuvering the intermediate cable, the net is drawn into a sloping position, leaning to meet the direction of the water, so that, as the pile of sacks grows, it assumes the shape of an earth dam, having a slope at the back; there is not much pressure against the net because the weight of the pile of sacks is sufficient to resist the pressure of the water by its own weight, the function of the net being chiefly to check and hold the sacks in the desired shape. The sacks may be dumped into the water so as to sink onto the submerged net and form a layer clear across. To do this, a cable may be stretched across the breach and half a dozen sacks in a sling may be hung to a releasable hook on a wheel running on the cable; it will be found that the wheel will run by gravity to the center point, owing to the sag of the cable, and the sling may be released at any point by a jerk line, so that, sending from both ends, an even layer may be laid across the breach.

When the sacks have reached a depth of three or four feet clear across, covering about twenty feet in width, it is time to begin dumping in loose dirt thirty to fifty feet in front of the net; some of the lighter material will be lost, but the heavier dirt will sink and drift into the spaces between and under the sacks and build up a broad base of dirt in front and abutting against the sacks; this will counteract any tendency to leaks forming under the net.

There is a tendency for the water pouring through the upper part of the net to cut out the earth bed of the breach channel and form a deep hole at the back of the growing dam, which is dangerous; to prevent this a double canvas carpet, with gravel sewn in between the two layers, should be fastened to a cable and drawn across so that the overfalling water falls on this carpet, which protects the dirt bed of the stream.

Instead of casting in loose dirt to fill in behind the sacks, it will be found that the delivery pipe from a suction dredger will do the work more quickly and economically. As to cost, hog wire can be had for a cent a square foot, so that the material for the net will cost $72, and with the cables and work, about $125, as compared to the method now being used it would not be possible to haul the piledriver to the spot for the entire cost of the net, and the breach in most cases could be stopped before the piledriver could be set up.

In this particular instance there is no railroad along the breached levee, and no chance to dump in rock, so that one of the weapons usually used to fight the stream in connection with the pile trestle is not available, and it seems that resort must be had to sacks of sand and probably to wire netting resting against the piles. This has no advantage over my method, but is enormously more costly and much slower.

The Colorado has gone down about twelve feet, so that it is possible the breach may stop of itself and certainly will be easy to close if done before the river again begins to rise.

ORGANIZATION.

The height of the top of the breached levee is forty-one feet above sea level. When built, but a few years ago, it was believed to be at least three feet above high-water level. The water coming through the 1910 breach is probably about seventy feet above the sea, so that it is of importance to keep track of the direction in which this water is coming and the rate at which the whole country between the Volcano Lake levee and the breach is silting up. Assuming the river to bring down annually on the average fifty-three square miles of silt, one foot deep, the tendency will be for this mass of silt to spread out in a great fan-shaped deposit west and southwest of the breach. Water slopping over the northerly slope of this fan would be thrown towards the breach, and as the fan grows and extends the water will be pushed nearer and nearer to the Volcano Lake levee at a constantly-growing elevation.

I have reason to know that no one has kept up this very necessary data, and no attempt has been made to train or control the course of the river after it comes through the break; that, in fact, the flood water stood only six and one-half inches below the top of the levee when the break occurred, so that it was useless to try and stop the breach at the time, because that would only have caused it to break somewhere else, probably at a much worse place.

I suggest that there ought to be an organization in general control, among other things being charged with the duty of keeping track of the advance of the river and of its flood level, and in a position to raise any levee as it becomes necessary; it should not be possible for the flood level to stand within six and one-half inches of the top of a levee upon which the safety of the whole valley depends; taken in time, the raising of this levee three or four feet is no great matter, but when it is surrounded with water back and front it cannot be done, and the valley has had to stand the risk. The losses in credit and in interest rates on loans because of this break have amounted probably to a hundred times the cost of raising the Volcano Lake levee.

All interests above and below the Mexican line should be represented on a board of control. An engineer, with the necessary help, should keep the board posted as to the river course and levels below the line, and should guide and lead the river away from the danger point.

We have some indications of the way the country is rising. For instance, the United States government map of 1908 shows levels of the rim of Volcano Lake as twenty-four feet above sea level, while recent reports state that the level of the rim is thirty-four feet, and that the bottom has silted up from seventeen feet to twenty-eight feet above sea level.

The organization of the British government on the Indus Delta consisted of a superintending engineer of at least twenty-five years' experience, who was also responsible that all irrigation works in the province of Sind were laid out and run on economical lines; that the water in the canals was drawn from the river with as little silt as possible; that such silt as had to be taken into the canals was deposited, if possible, to strengthen the protective levees, and that such as could not be kept out of the canals should be removed in the least expensive way.

The breach of 1910, through which the river is running, could be silted up by putting in the necessary obstructions; it would take probably three years.

WANT YELLOW CARS.

At a regular meeting of the Compton-avenue District Improvement Association, held last Monday evening, a resolution was passed unanimously recommending a yellow-car line on Compton avenue. The route, as outlined, calls for the extension of the present East Jefferson line from its present terminus at Ascot avenue, to extent east on Thirty-eighth street to Compton avenue, and thence south to the city limits at Slauson avenue. The district that would be benefited by the extension now has the Pacific Electric local service, but this line gives no transfers, the result being that many persons are compelled to pay double fares in going daily to and from their work. It is also urged that the district south of Slauson avenue, and which is now outside of the city limits, is ready for annexation to the city and hence should have city service.

EUROPE'S POOR VIVISECTED.

USED AS SCIENTIFIC MATERIAL BY SURGEONS.

Remarkable Statements by Prof. Paul Foerster of Germany Which Are Supported by Austrian Doctor. Diseases Are Created Where There Were None Before.

[Chicago Tribune:] Europe's poorer classes are mere raw material for vivisection by surgeons and doctors. No ailing poor man, woman or child can be put in a doctor's hands without the fear that he or she will be sacrificed to science by being operated on for some non-existent complaint or inoculated purposely with some hideous and even fatal disease. So at least declares Prof. Paul Foerster of Germany, and he is backed by the Austrian doctor, Acken.

Particularly is that so in university and municipal hospitals and clinics, in maternity homes, and in foundling hospitals. This is no mere accusation of anti-vivisection zealots. The vivisectors confess it themselves. Their medical journals and their books show that all over Europe poor patients, without themselves suspecting it, are being tortured and ruined in health in order to increase the sum of medical and surgical knowledge.

Transferring cancer, infecting with bubonic plague, injection of the smallpox virus, dangerous experiments with the heart, wholesale injection of tuberculosis cultures, the artificial production of hideous diseases, and operations for ailments which do not exist, are only a few of the ways in which the poor in Europe's hospitals are victimized. The scientific operations on healthy organs are the least deadly of these experiments, as they do not usually result in death but Prof. Foerster declares that death often results in hospitals from experiments in inoculation and infection.

Dr. Acken says that a large proportion of operations in hospitals of central Europe are "undertaken merely to satisfy medical curiosity." He divides these experiments into three classes—operations on patients who need no operation at all; necessary operations which, however, are pushed for experiments farther than they should be, and in which healing is artificially delayed, and, finally, cases where necessary operations are not carried out because the human vivisectors, in order to solve doubtful questions of surgery, prefer to undertake unnecessary operations.

The amount of disease purposely caused by some of Europe's best doctors is large. Prof. Von Bergmann, one of the great physicians who attended the late Emperor Frederick, practised the experiment of inoculating patients with cancer, "to see how it took." Prof. Foerster gives names of three eminent doctors who inoculate poor children with smallpox poison, and of others who make dangerous experiments with their patients' hearts.

In Berlin the well-known Dr. Kolle admits having used bubonic plague cultures obtained from two men who died in London for the purpose of testing the virus on healthy men. In this case, says Kolle, the men agreed to the experiment. But in nearly all cases the patients, who are mostly ignorant men and women, imagine they are being cured. In reality they are being kept in hospitals for weeks, and even for months, while doctors inject into their veins the germs of terrible diseases and then conscientiously "cure" them.

One of the most popular experiments is with tuberculosis cultures. This has been carried out on a vast scale. Injection of tuberculin is defended on the ground that it does no harm to healthy men, while it hastens tuberculosis in men who have a hereditary taint. In this way forty Wurtzburg recruits were inoculated with the culture without suffering any harm.

Often the tuberculin is used more dangerously for injection into persons, and even children, of whom records as regards tuberculosis nothing is known. Prof. Lichtheim of Konigsberg University injected the culture into thirty-one newly-born infants. These experiments were carried out at a time when the use of tuberculin as a means of curing really consumptive patients had caused numerous deaths.

The director of the Royal Women's Hospital admits having inoculated forty newly-born children with tuberculin in doses fifty-fold stronger than Koch prescribed for 5-year-old children. This experimenter admits that his conscience was afflicted by the vision of "the hectic cheeks, tremendous rise in temperature, and wailing." All these were poor children.

In many European hospitals far-fetched and ingenious experiments are made and tremendous suffering inflicted merely in order to test vague theories of individual doctors. One experiment described by Prof. Foerster is the artificial stoppage of all the functioning of the skin. This is done in order to aggravate a sufferer's rheumatism. The doctors invented the theory that rheumatism is the result of insufficient activity of the skin. If this theory were true, then a complete cessation of skin activity would make the rheumatism worse. The theory was put to tests.

One test consisted in completely casing the arms and legs of two rheumatism sufferers in plaster of Paris and covering their bodies with collodium and castor oil. One patient was kept in this state for eight days in the hope that his rheumatism would get worse and thus prove the theory right. A third patient, a woman, was then subjected to a much rougher test. Her whole body and her face were daubed over with ordinary tar; her hair was cut off, and her head also sealed up. She was kept thus for eight days. The experiments caused torture, but they proved nothing, for the rheumatism underwent no change.

A favorite experiment of the human vivisectionists is to combine operations with artificial production of disease. Prof. Mange of Heidelberg reports eighty such cases. In these cases he introduced poisonous matter into the bodies of women whom he was about to operate on.

Dr. Acken declares that in Austria at least one operation out of five is carried out without need, and that at least one out of ten is carried out not only without need, but with the surgeon's knowledge that there is no need. That is, merely for purposes of experiment. "In nearly all cases when our surgeons are in doubt they operate." In the case of poor persons they systematically operate where no operation is needed.

Human vivisection, says Foerster, is carried out mainly for reasons of economy. Poor people are cheaper than animals.

available to the man of moderate means

Windsor Square, in spite of its beauty and its carefully drawn 50 year restrictions, is not beyond the reach of the man of moderate means. The restrictions are not prohibitive — they do not require a residence costing over $10,000. Yet they provide 25 feet of air space between residences for sunshine and air—a 40 foot building line—generous parkings—wide improved streets and handsome electroliers. The upkeep is guaranteed by a special fund set aside for the purpose.

INVESTIGATING ITS AFFAIRS.

Creditors Proceed Against Imperial Company.

Copper King Properties in Other Hands.

Developments in Leading Mining Districts.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) July 17.—For several days a legal investigation into the affairs of the Imperial Copper Company has been in progress, before Referee Fritz Bernard, with attorneys present for a number of creditors, secured and unsecured. The main action is that of the Bankers' Trust Company, which seeks to foreclose a mortgage upon the company's property. The total claims aggregate about $7,000,000, other material creditors being the Empire Trust Company, the National Park Bank, Thomas W. Joyce and the Development Company of America. Several of these claims are fought as fictitious.

Included in the same wreck are the Southern Arizona Smelting Company, which operated the Imperial smelter at Sasco, and the Southern Arizona Railroad Company, controlling the branch line between Red Rock and Silver Bell, via Sasco.

Three carloads a month of 23 per cent. copper ore is being shipped regularly from the Willie Rose mine. Much of the ore carries native copper in wire form.

The Copper King properties in Amole district, comprising sixteen claims, have been purchased from Martin Waer by the Morgan Consolidated Gold and Copper Mining Company. L. Pierpont Morgan has been installed as manager and is preparing to ship ore to the Hayden smelter. He is planning also for the erection of a 250-ton smelter, and for the building of a railroad line to Tucson. The ore averages about 11 per cent. copper and thus far is self-fluxing.

In the Rincon Mountains, M. W. Jones of Tucson, in doing assessment work, has cut into a fifteen-foot vein of rich copper sulphide, which is to be explored further.

Eighteen miles north of Douglas, in the Swisshelm Mountains, Porter Morris, a rancher, in an eight-foot prospect hole, has cut a ledge rich in native copper. The ledge outcrop can be traced for more than half a mile. Morris has located forty claims, covering all available ground.

GLOBE ACTIVITIES. SMELTER CONSTRUCTION.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) July 17.—The foundations for the reverberatory furnaces of the new smelter near Miami were to have been poured with slag brought twelve miles, from the Old Dominion smelter at Globe, but the twenty-five-ton slag pots received for the purpose were found poorly designed for fast railway speed. Instead, a large furnace shell has been secured from the Old Dominion Company and has been erected upon the furnace site, where slag will be manufactured as needed and poured directly into the foundations.

Five flotation machines with their equipment and a large amount of machinery, such as crushers and classifiers, are being installed at the Inspiration test mill, in competition between two rival methods of flotation. Rapid work is being done on the building of the 10,000-ton mill on which the company has concluded to expend $4,000,000 more than at first contemplated.

ADDING BIG MILL. THREE HOLDINGS SOLD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) July 17.—A big tube mill is being added to the reduction equipment of the Venezia mines in Crook Canyon. The company has about $40,000 worth of milling ore on its dumps, on which a start will be made August 1.

Three sales have been made during the past week in Black Canyon district. A. L. Harroun of Kansas City has sold to the Black Canyon Mining Company, which also has taken over the interests of D. J. Thompson and Claude Baker. Included probably in the same transaction is a deal wherein Harroun has purchased a number of claims belonging to W. A. Moses.

A REAL BEARDED WOMAN.

After Passing Forty Years She Assumed All the Outward Characteristics of a Man.

[Baltimore American:] The learned professors and surgeons of the French Academy of Sciences were confronted yesterday with a most remarkable case of what is known as "virilism."

Prof. Tuffier, an eminent Parisian surgeon, presented a woman of 62 years whose face and hands have become those of a man. She is something more than the bearded woman of the old circus days.

When she was 40 years of age she was attacked with an extraordinary hypertrophy of certain glands, and since then her whole being has changed. Her biceps have attained the strength of a healthy man's biceps, her shoulders have broadened, and she has become peculiarly muscular.

Most extraordinary of all, she has grown bald, and at the same time has developed a long black beard, which reaches to her waist.

When she first went to the professor's clinic she shaved her beard out of modesty, but in the interests of science she was persuaded to let it grow again. The scientists had the time of their lives recently in pulling it to see if it were real.

Butler-West End Case to Wait Until Fall.

Meanwhile Compromise May Be Worked Out.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) July 17.—Another bolt of red tape was unfurled in the Jim Butler-West End litigation, when notice was received this afternoon stating that the time for filing a replication of the Butler to the answer of the West End had been put over to the first week in August, owing to the absence of counsel from their respective offices on their summer vacations. This will delay the trial until some time in the fall, but there is still hope of finding some loophole by which both companies may come to terms before proceeding to the expense of a trial.

The Butler is making vast improvements and in addition has decided to raise the value of the ore milled from $18 to $25, which will make a considerable increase in the earnings on the net side of the account. This month is always the light month in production, owing to the time-honored custom of the mines to give their men two full days for the celebration of the Fourth. The time is improved to advantage in the overhauling of machinery and installation of fresh appliances.

Tonopah Extension has been busily installing underground electric haulage from a winze to the new shaft where the ore is taken by a surface trolley and delivered direct to the mill. The earnings for the month of May, reported at only $19,000, were curtailed by deducting the enormous cost of new installation, including equipping the winze on the enormous Murray ledge, with the most complete hoisting plant in camp. The gross earnings were $68,000, and it is inferred from this that profits for June will also help in defraying the cost of improvements.

DIVIDEND CHECKS.

Belmont checks for the last dividend were distributed this week, accompanied by a financial statement showing the splendid financial condition of that property. The report states that for the quarter ending May 31 receipts from the sale of ore were $829,962.12, from which were deducted mining, milling and administration expenses, amounting to $385,813.15, leaving a balance of $444,148.97. To this is added miscellaneous income arising from royalties from ore treated at the old plant at Miller's equal to $10,202.10, making a total of $454,351.07.

The available resources at the end of three months are given as follows: Due from smelters, $295,465.98; due from other sources, $9684.24; loans on collateral, $250,000; cash in banks, $796,610.66, or total assets of $1,447,760.88. This report, compared with the report issued in February, shows a decrease of $87,369 in available resources, supposed to be caused by expenditures on the new property at Surf Inlet, B. C., acquired by the Belmont on a year's option and which will be completely equipped with new machinery by the first of August.

The clean-up of the mill for the last half of June resulted in the shipment of 126,117 ounces of bullion, valued at $91,000. The mine is showing great improvement this week, especially on the fifteenth level, where the Belmont vein is looking better than ever.

A body of ore three feet wide is being opened in the footwall vein of the North Star in the raise above the 1130-foot level. Development work is being continued on the 1050, 1130 and 1200-foot levels.

HAS NEW METHOD TO EXTRACT ORE.

ELECTROLYTIC PROCESS SHOWS GOOD RESULTS IN EXPERIMENTS.

The direct extraction of metals from ore by electrolysis at considerably reduced cost may become a possibility in the near future, if an invention worked on for the past eight years by Timothy Mahoney of this city proves as successful in a commercial way as it is now experimentally.

A considerable degree of success has attended the treatment of ores containing copper, zinc and silver, on a small scale. No extended tests have been made with gold and metals of greater resisting power, but it is believed that equally favorable results can be accomplished.

Carbon electrodes are immersed in water containing about 1 per cent. salt, or certain other minerals, depending on the character of the ore. Between the electrodes is placed the ore. Under the influence of the current (which varies with the different metals treated) each metal separately is deposited on the negative electrode in pulverized form. It is then scraped off, and the small quantity of carbon which accompanies it, can be burnt off in the melting process.

The chief feature upon which the success of the invention depends is the voltage and amperage of the current, in relation to the resisting power of the metal, according to the inventor.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

ENQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Rocks.

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—Q.: Herewith I hand you a California sample of rock. There are many rock formations in California that seem to be incapable of successful classification, owing to the great number of those formations and therefore the confusing accounts of geologists and mineralogists should be overlooked. Take volcanic rocks; who can arrange their great number and properly classify them? When it comes to metamorphic rocks worse confusion appears in the books that I have read. Now, for instance, what say you of this California rock sample? What book can I consult on the rocks of California? A. L. K.

A.: It is not true, in fact, that California or any other State, possesses so great a number of rock formations that "confusing accounts" are given thereon. Nature is herself on this planet, and the same substances that occur in California are obtainable (in more or less quantity) at any point the world over, and are to be found in the sun, the moon, all stars, and in all matter floating in and through all space.

In further discussing this subject let us approach it in the most humble and simplest ways. Is it a fact that volcanic rocks are so great in number that they cannot be properly classified?

Volcanic rocks comprise but two common varieties, trachyte and lava. Trachyte (trachus, means rough,) and trachyte is a substance that is not only rough, but it is porous withal, and it usually has feldspar in the mass. Trachyte is, therefore, a feldspathic or porphyritic rock. By the term lava it is understood that, it is that substance which has been melted by volcanic heat, and strewn over ground that is now, or once was, volcanic territory. Lava is chiefly augite (pyroxene,) and feldspar. Feldspathic lava is of a light color; pyroxene is of darker hue. Porous lava is known as scoria. Ordinary pumice is a feldspathic scoria, and there is a variety of trachyte that occurs near Cedar City, Utah, with crystals of topaz imbedded therein that very much resembles pumice. Obsidian (volanic glass) is a variety of lava. The point is to differentiate between mineralogy, geology and chemistry, however.

"The gold-bearing rocks of California are mainly jurassic or triassic sandstones, with interstratified quartz containing gold. Where the quartz veins have come to the surface and weathered, the particles of gold have been washed out, and thus formed the auriferous sands. There are frequent dikes of trap and outcrops of granite. On the crests of the Sierra Nevada these masses of granite often assume a dome shape, and reach a height of 15,000 feet above the sea-level."

The sample of rock that you submit for test, etc., is (geologically) triassic sandstone. Mineralogically, the specimen is quartz, with native gold in the mass. Chemically, the rock is impure silicon dioxide; impurities iron oxides, with trace of manganese, and trace of aluminum; gold present.

Any work on geology is a good one for you to refer to.

Magnesite.

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—Q.: Will you please let me know what kind of mineral is contained in this sample? It occurs in a ledge located in San Diego county, and it is, at places, one foot wide; then it pinches down to almost nothing. Thanking you for past favors.

J. McH.

A.: The sample is a good grade of magnesium carbonate, and in sufficient quantities it can be readily sold in the open market.

Ores of Copper.

PAYSON (Ariz.) June 22.—Q.: Samples as noted and numbered from The Queen of the Hills group of mines. No. 8 from Big Blue tunnel dump. Does it contain silver chloride?" The sample is a mixed lime and copper carbonate (calcite, azurite, and malachite,) silver dromide a trace. One sample loose in canvas sack of grayish color. Lime, silica, and rich in silver. Cerussite, malachite, azurite, zinc and iron oxides. "No. 7 from big blue dump on north side of hill, thirty to forty tons." Cerussite, azurite and silver present. "No. 12 from upper tunnel. What is this mineral?" The quartz-lime carries sulphides of iron, copper, zinc, lead, antimony, and arsenicum, with pseudomorph after the sulphides named. Iron oxides, malachite, and azurite present. "No. 11 in face of big tunnel; is it chloride of schist?" There are two specimens in No. 11. The harder of the two is gray limestone, and the soft specimen (easily scratched with the nail) is talcose and chlorite. Lime present with copper trace. "No. 10, copper-silver ore from surface just above face of big tunnel." The samples are of quartz and calcite; lead, iron oxides, antimony, zinc, arsenic, copper (malachite and azurite,) and mimetite sparingly present. "No. 9, lead-silver ores from main vein." Cerussite, malachite, galenite, native silver, azurite and mimetite traces.

"No. 6 silver-copper ore from south side of hill, 300 feet from big blue dump." The sample is limestone chiefly, with quartz coating, azurite and chrysocolla on one side, lead (silver native,) present. No. 5, lead ore from south side of hill." Rather an odd lead ore manganese, copper oxide. of the Hills group vanadium ore from top of hill." Rather iron oxides, and lead present. "Queen doubtful as pay ore. "No. 3, what I suspect of carrying carnotite; some tons of it." Chiefly ferrous and ferric oxides, and the substance is not radioactive. "No. 2, from big blue dump on main vein." This is lead-silver-copper ore. "No. 4, lead ore 400 feet south of big blue dump." This is low grade, and in part conglomerate; lead present, with silver sparingly. Cerussite in the mass. "Mineral Hill group, (two miles northwest of Queen of the Hills copper ore cropping up all through it for 2300 feet in width." Some vein, that! The sample is also tagged "formation," and is composed of quartz, iron, copper, arsenic, lead and zinc; the named substances being present as sulphides. "M. H., some kinds of the ores." The samples are mixed ferruginous quartz, "peacock iron," chalcocite, malachite, azurite, arsenopyrite, lead and stibnite. Lime present. "M. H. No. 2, great quantities of this;" Is it zinc (blende,) blackjack? Blende sparingly present. "M. H., No. 3, is this ampelite?" If you refer to a variety of cannel coal it is not ampelite. The sample is impure Lydian stone, with traces of altered anthracite. "M. H., great deal of this on surface." The sample is ferric and ferrous oxides; in part Gossan. "M. H., No. 1, considerable of this in seams." This is plumbogenous, with a micaceous talc stained with ferrous oxide.

The company is one of the most prosperous of the small concerns in the State, and for a long time made its payments on a production of about 30,000 barrels a month in Coalinga field, which sold for 23 cents a barrel. The company is now securing a higher price for this oil, and is also getting a production of about 1500 barrels a day in Midway field. EXPORT TOTAL LARGE IN JUNE.

SHIPMENTS' VALUE MILLION AND HALF DOLLARS.

Movement from Northern District Is Heaviest in State's History. Nearly Sixty Million Gallons Shipped—Refined Oil Exports Reveal Increase.

With the total exceeding 56,000,000 gallons, exports of crude and refined oils from the San Francisco customs district for the month of June set a new high mark, by over 1,000,000 gallons. The greatest previous export for a single month was in April. The value of the shipments from the entire State in June totaled approximately $1,500,000.

The increase in June was due to the heavy shipments of refined petroleum. Shipments of fuel oil were smaller than in April by nearly 4,000,000 gallons.

An export movement of the size indicated takes care of nearly one-eighth of the total production of the State. Domestic sales are, of course, the principal item in consumption of oil.

Chile and British Columbia were the largest buyers of California liquid fuel last month, while the Hawaiian Islands and Panama figured third and fourth, respectively, on the list. All of the refined oil sent out went to China and Japan, most of it going to Japanese ports for orders, to be trans-shipped to various oriental countries.

The shipments last month were distributed as follows:

Fuel to—	Gallons.	Value.
Chile	14,091,000	$258,750
British Columbia	10,787,000	199,275
Hawaiian Islands	5,250,000	92,200
Ancon	3,904,000	69,000
Balboa	2,520,000	45,000
Alaska	1,800,000	31,500
Peru	1,409,142	20,265
Total fuel	39,761,142	$696,190
Refined to—
Japan	10,540,000	$478,550
China	5,700,000	254,500

Add fuel	39,761,142	696,190
Grand totals	56,001,142	$1,429,240

The following table, showing the June exports for a period of years, gives a fair idea of the expansion of the export movement:

	*Gallons.
1913	36,795,101

MAY SUBMIT TO ESCROW PLAN.

NATIONAL PACIFIC DIRECTORS TO ACT ON PROPOSITION THIS WEEK.

The proposition of submitting to a government receivership will be acted upon at the meeting of the directors of the National Pacific Oil Company this week.

The National Pacific is among those concerns which operate on land affected by the withdrawal orders. One or two other companies like the Midway Northern, for instance, have submitted to the receivership, in the belief that less risk was assumed during the time the withdrawal suits are pending, and also that conditions governing the sale of oil are more satisfactory.

A receivership of the character mentioned only requires that the company place all proceeds over and above actual operating expenses in escrow, pending a settlement of the withdrawal cases. The Standard is willing to purchase the oil when the terms just referred to are complied with.

The National Pacific Company is securing a production of about 500 barrels daily from its wells, and has been storing a large part of the product. The settlement of the government suits or the passing of a comprehensive land-leasing bill is expected to give permanent relief to the operators affected by the withdrawal orders before the end of this year.

CURRIER WELL DRILLING.

POMONA, July 17.—The work of drilling the "wildcat" oil well on the ranch of ex-State Senator A. T. Currier, west of here, which has been delayed for a month on account of the breaking of some steel casing, will be rushed. The casing has been removed. The well is down 2100 feet and several oil showings have been encountered. Supt. T. E. Collins, who is in charge of the work, is much encouraged. Drilling operations will continue to a depth of 4000 feet, if necessary, to determine whether there is oil.

Exploiting Pumice.

BRAWLEY, July 11.—W. S. Williams of Brawley, for the last two months has been at Lake Imperial with a crew of men securing from the vast deposits of pumice the first carload for experimental purposes. The deposits are controlled by Mr. Williams and Robert F. Laughlin, a well-known civil engineer of Los Angeles. Mr. Williams found pumice of the very best quality at a depth of thirty feet.

Oil.

BIG PROFITS IN ROYALTIES.

Aggregate Nearly Forty Millions Here.

Mainly Obtained by Private Interests.

Practically No Expenses Are Encountered.

One of the most profitable branches of the oil business is that of the leaser. Oil royalties have made many fortunes, and have placed on "easy street' many a hard-working farmer who sought to cultivate a barren tract of land.

Since the inception of the oil business in California to the present time it is safe to say that profits from royalties have aggregated nearly $40,000,000. It would be impossible to arrive at the exact figures in dollars and cents, as the profits are so widely scattered and are mainly obtained by individuals or small private companies who do not make public their earnings.

The returns of the oil leaser are virtually net, as there is little to be charged against them except, perhaps, some administration expenses. Royalties generally vary between 12½ per cent. to 25 per cent. of the total production of the lease, although special concessions are frequently made either by the leaser or the lessee, on account of the particular merits of the location.

There are quite a few companies in the State which own their own properties and therefore do not pay royalties, but by far the greater number lease, their holdings.

In certain sections of the State, like Midway-Maricopa and Fullerton districts, land owners have grown potentially rich over night as a result of the discovery of oil on their holdings, and this without taking any chances of loss whatsoever. Property values in these rich oil sections have soared, and special bonuses have to paid by those who wish to secure a lease for oil-operating purposes. Most of those who profit by royalties in these sections originally bought the land for agricultural or cattle-raising purposes, and little expected to come into riches with such suddenness as they did when oil was discovered.

The royalty business has taken far stranger turns in some places. For instance, in the Cushing field in Oklahoma, which has recently come into such prominence, negro and Indian children have become the possessors of Croesus-like incomes as a result of oil discoveries. Their parents secured the land through government grants during the middle of the last century.

There have, of course, been instances where companies were formed to hold land for leasing purposes, which had little or no success owing to the fact that the oil was not there. In general, fortune-making in the royalty business is entirely a matter of luck.

New World.

MENTAL ABILITY OF ANIMALS.

TAUGHT TO SOLVE MATHEMATICAL PROBLEMS.

Horses that Will Answer Questions, Either Written or Spoken, and a Dog that Will Answer Arithmetical Questions and Dictate an Intelligent Letter.

[Munich Correspondence of Brooklyn Eagle:] It is strange that the United States has taken so small an interest in an amazing controversy which has separated the zoologists and psychologists of the continent into two hostile camps, in one of which, stranger still, the Jesuit Father Wasmann and his arch opponent, the agnostic August Forel, are fighting side by side.

All this is over the question whether the feats of a few trained stallions are the true product of their mentality and education, or frauds, the result of trickery conscious, unconscious, or subconscious on the part of their trainer, a merchant of the flourishing manufacturing town of Elberfeld, in the Prussian Rhineland.

Already some twelve years back we learn from a couple of interesting studies in recent numbers of the "Archives de Physiologie," by Edward Claparede, professor of experimental psychology at Geneva, an eccentric old gentleman of Berlin, Von Osten by name, began training a horse, which so profited by his isntructions that in a few years Clever Jack (der kluge Hans) was able to count, to cipher, to read, to recognize the day of the week.

As his fame grew he was visited by two scientific committees, who investigated the phenomena, and decided that while there was no intentional trickery, the feats were probably to be explained by information communicated unconsciously by those who assisted at the trials, even in the absence of the trainer. This thesis was maintained even more definitely and strenuously by Pfungst, head of the Psychological Laboratory at Berlin. It was easier to suppose that the horse could interpret each and every sign than to admit in a dumb beast powers of calculation. All interest in the pupil's powers was arrested. The trainer became the butt of cheap jests in the comic press, and died disappointed and deserted in 1909, aged 71.

At least one friend and admirer was left, Karl Krall, who received Hans in his home, took up the question, and trained two new stallions and has since raised his stud to six and has obtained results which far surpass those of his predecessor. Figures are written on a blackboard, or are presented on cards, with the additional symbols to show the operation to be executed. The horse thereupon beats out the answer by pawing on a block, the units with his right foot, the tens with his left. The animals can show what figure is mentioned by sniffing at it on the blackboard. From this stage it was relatively easy to progress to reading, spelling out words by alphonetic alphabet, where pawed numbers replaced letters.

The next step was to teach them French, so that they could be questioned in that language as well as German. I transcribe one dialogue, Krall: "Why wasn't Zarif, one of the horses, good?" The horse spelt out: "Weil vaul isd"—"Because is lazy." "Why is he lazy." "Weil r (er) sagt begin will nijd wism (will nicht wissen)"—"because he says at the beginning that he doesn't want to know." This is delightfully childlike, and is not the only trait in which the horses seem to resemble show children.

Experiments were tried by Claparede in various ways. Sometimes, in the absence of the trainer, he took numbered cards at random, and only verified their number after the horse had given its answer. Results were also obtained with the stall quite empty of human beings, who watched from outside through glazed peepholes. The results varietd greatly. Sometimes the tens and units were reversed, though the correct digits weresupplied. Other times everything went wrong, just as might happen with a show infant prodigy who is rather capricious and sometimes playful or fractious. One is amused to read that when 'Fat Sero" (Faites zero) was written on the blackboard, the horse shook his head—the sign for "nought."

Another animal prodigy, whose exploits are said to excel those of the famous horse Hans and the hound Fritz, is just now exciting the attention of the German scientific world. It is a shaggy Skye terrier named Rolf, and by means of a "paw language" can read, cipher, reply to letters, and even, it is said, discuss religion.

Rolf is owned by Frau Dr. F. Moeckel, the invalid wife of a prominent lawyer of Mannheim, whose house has become the rendezvous of learned professors, who have submitted Rolf to extraordinary experiments with astounding results. What adds to the peculiarity of Frau Moeckel's dog is that, unlike the famous Elberfeld horses, trained by Herr Krall, he is largely self-educated.

Ever since Frau Moeckel purchased him he has been the constant companion of her children. He was allowed to sit by the side of Frau Moeckel's little girl during lessons, and, as is now recalled, always paid the closest attention. The discovery of Rolf's learning was made during one of these lessons.

Frau Moeckel states that one day her little girl was unable to answer a simple question in mental arithmetic, when she exclaimed: "How stupid! Why, even Rolf could answer that; couldn't you, Rolf?" To the amazement of mother and child, Rolf lifted his right paw and beat the exact answer to the problem.

An alphabet was fixed up, Frau Moeckel asking: "Rolf, how many 'paws' do you want for 'A,' how many for 'B?'" etc. The dog himself designated how many beats of his foot would designate the different letters by which he spells out his thoughts, ideas, and answers. Like the Elberfeld horses, Rolf uses something like Col. Roosevelt's "simplified spelling." He eliminates all useless letters.

Some of the things that are related and written about the "Mannheim dog," as he is known, are so fantastic that they would be unbelievable were it not for the fact that they are attested to by men whose word is beyond doubt. A professor from Basle has made on his experience with Rolf a report that reads like romance. He says:

"Frau Moeckel has just received a letter addressed to Rolf from a gentleman who had come to see the dog, and of whom Rolf had grown very fond. The letter read: 'Dear Rolf—I still think very often of you, and how kind and nice you worked for me. I have told our Pick (the gentleman's own dog) about it. He cannot read, speak or calculate yet. We also have a dachshund, but I am sorry to say he is sick. Many greetings.'

"Before my eyes Rolf dictated with his paw the following reply: 'Lib' big bei mudr gomn lrnn dagl aug dogdr holn grus Rol.' (Free translation: 'Dear Pick by mother come learn. Also Dackel—short for dachshund. Get doctor. Greeting.—Rolf.')"

The professor then asked Rolf why he (the professor) had come to see him. Rolf answered, "To see Rolf work." The letter "M" was written on a piece of paper and Rolf was told to give some words starting with that letter. He answered, "Mouse, man, Michel." The latter is the name of a servant in the house. While the professor was talking with the dog, a motor car went by in the street. A few moments later he was asked what had just passed the house. Rolf replied laconically, "Audo."

NATURE STORIES.

The Mystery of Scent.

[Manchester Guardian:] In shooting, as in the hunting field, the mysterious attributes of scent ever attract attention and form the subject of discussion. All who are accustomed to employ dogs as aids to the gun know that there are days when the instinct of setters and pointers is rarely at fault, when each point or set is almost certainly followed by the "whirr" of rising birds. At other outings they find the dogs are less sure of their game, and notice that the rigid pose they adopt as the delicate aroma of grouse or partridge reaches them is apt to degenerate into uncertainty and breaking away. In short, they realize that scenting conditions vary from day to day. But there is one aspect of the question regarding which naturalists and sportsmen were commonly supposed to be in agreement; and consequently the following statement, which appeared recently in a contemporary, seems rather surprising: "The argument that nature protects the sitting bird by endowing her with the power to suppress her natural scent will not hold water." In this case it would appear that an argument may be perfectly sound without being watertight.

Any qualified naturalist or experienced gamekeeper will testify to the fact that game birds on their nests do not give out their usual scent; it is suppressed, if not wholly, at least in great measure, and herein one cannot but recognize a wonderful provision of nature, who ever strives to assist the perpetuation of a species. The writer I have quoted endeavors to clinch his argument by stating that "Nature is just as likely to take sides with the fox as with the partridge, or the pheasant, or any other of the fox's victims." On the contrary, nature here takes sides with the creature which is actually engaged in bringing forth her young. But as argument is seldom convincing I will try to give that grain of fact which is said to outweigh a pound of theory.

Talking over this matter recently with a friend, a keen sportsman and a naturalist of high qualifications, he told me that some years back he was on an English grouse moor, during the nesting season, with its owner and his keeper. They had a pointer with them, and while they were standing engaged in conversation my friend happened to look down, and there, almost at his feet, was a sitting grouse, and the dog, which had been working around while the party were standing still, never detected its presence. The keeper aptly summed up the situation: "If that there grouse," he observed, "had had its usual scent the dog would have been on to her long before we came up." The bird was not disturbed, and my friend could not say whether she was sitting on eggs or young ones.

A Dog that Hates the Country.

[Boston Transcript:] In Westcott, idyllic village on the sandstone ridge above Dorking, is the dog who hates the country. He is a big brown spaniel, or rather, as his owners remark, he was bought as a spaniel, but grew up a retriever. All his twelve years had been spent in London, until his owners took the dairy and little tea shop at Westcott. "What's his name?" asked the Cosmopolitan who had to step over him in the doorway. "His name is Flirt," answered the dairymaid with the very London voice, "and he don't half hate the country, does he, mother?"

"Yes, and he don't only hate it, but it frightens him into fits. The first time he ever saw a black pig he tore home for all he was worth and wouldn't leave the house for a week.

"And don't you remember when he saw that field of corn sheaves? He trembled all over for days. And the first time he saw a goose he cried all night like a baby. And he's frightened of the trees, and he won't go near a hedge for fear something jumps out of it, and he's that nervous when the birds start singing in spring!

"And, believe me, that dog used to sleep peaceful in London downstairs by himself, tied to the safe, but he's so terrified of the country since he heard an owl one night that we have to bring him upstairs, and he lies awake all night with his head under a blanket.

"You see how fat he is, that's because he daren't go out for exercise—he lives in mortal terror of seeing another rabbit. We don't know what to do with him except to keep on feeding him all day—the country's given him a shocking appetite."

"Yes," added mother, "when we're cooking he never takes his nose away from the oven door, and he's so impatient that the water pours from his mouth."

"Do you like the country, yourselves?"

"Oh, we just love it, and the people, and the life. But it's done for Flirt. He's perked up a bit since the motor buses came here—but the country's breaking his heart, that it is."

Drama of Feline Motherhood.

[Philadelphia Record:] Here is a drama of cat life, exhibiting a new trait in the character of the cat. A cat which had kittens some weeks ago was allowed to keep them all. About 100 yards away in the same street another cat had kittens about the same time, which were drowned.

The other day mother cat No. 1 was sunning herself with her kittens in the doorway when mother cat No. 2 ran up and snatched one of the kittens, and ran away. Later in the day she came back, and attempted to snatch another kitten from the mother lying by the fireside, but the latter was on the alert, and set upon the intruder, causing her to retreat.

Yet a third time did the other mother come back, for during the night a tremendous feline squabble was heard in the attic, and victory rested with the cat whose kitten had been "catnapped."

The instinct of No. 2 as to the whereabouts of the cat and kittens was remarkable, as she had to mount the roof and enter by the skylight window, which was open.

A Wise Old Hen.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] Henry Barnhard of Marblehead, O., says he witnessed a most unusual sight while on his way to work in West Marblehead recently, following the severe rainstorm that precipitated flood conditions there.

"While passing a flooded coop," said Barnhart, "I saw a wise-looking old hen step out and onto a short two-by-four scantling. Using her wings for oars she rowed to a stretch of ground in the back yard of her owner's premises that was not under water, docked her craft and alighted upon terra firma with all the agility of a true sailor."

Barnhart says he will swear that his story is true.

Trees Grow in Odd Spots.

[New York Sun:] Judging from the experience of two small wild palms and a peach tree vegetation has a difficult time finding a place to take root in the great city of New York. Looking from the windows of the Yorkville Police Court, the two wild palms may be seen, ten feet up on the rear brick wall of the Palm Garden, which faces on Fifty-eighth street. In some way the seeds found lodgment there and the palms took root in the crevices. The trees are now about three feet high and seem to be thriving.

The peach tree found root high on the roof of the six-story apartment-house at No. 554 West One Hundred and Eighty-second street, and is growing from a crevice in the asphalt of the roof. The tree also seems to be thriving, and the tenants of the house give it every care and are promising to eat the fruit from it within a few years. It is now about four feet high.

Congressman, Unafraid!

WARNING TO THE NATION, DEFIANCE TO GOMPERS.

J. Hampton Moore, Representative from Pennsylvania, Says We Spend $34,000,000 for Chewing Gum, that the People Are Growing Lazy and Pampered—Shook His Fist at Sam Gompers in Congress.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, July 16. — The tight wad, speaking at least one word in his defense, pays his debts, though he may groan over the act, and his expenditures are less than his receipts. Still he is not what would be termed a popular character. Some time, however, he may be as greatly esteemed as the spendthrift, whose last days are lived on the bounty of his friends and relatives.

Professional money-savers, unfortunately, as they come to Congress, are either sour-faced men or humbugs. When they are genuine, they are almost always lean and lynx-eyed. The spenders revile them in the cloakrooms and sneer at them upon the floor. It requires some bravery to arise in the Senate or the House and say: "I object" when a new grab into the people's treasury is broached.

Able men, students of finance and society, say that many Americans are furiously riding to a fall. James J. Hill declares that counties, cities and States are scandalously and dangerously going into debt. The printing presses are at work, not upon paper money, but upon bonds payable fifty years hence. And yet those who wave the flag of warning are invited to go way back out of sound and sight and sit down.

Public men hesitate to talk economy to run, as they believe, against the fiercely onward current of the time. It will put them out of favor, they fear, at home. It will certainly put them out of favor with their comrades and colleagues in Congress, either branch. But Joseph Hampton Moore holds that the day is at hand when the red light of danger should be flashed in the eyes of the electorate and the general multitude.

Now J. Hampton Moore (the Joseph is silent in his name as he writes it,) may be lean and lynx-eyed, but he is not sour. Instead, he is an optimist, though, having been a rattling good newspaper reporter for thirteen years, he may be just a little cynical. Anyway, he can spot a fraud when he meets him—or her. Also he can index his forefinger toward the gallery and inform Samuel Gompers, who is watchfully waiting there, that he means to vote by his lights and not under threats.

OPINIONS, VOCABULARY AND STYLE.

Besides, Mr. Moore has been treasurer of the city of Philadelphia and the president of a trust, safe and deposit company. Moreover, he has studied law. He has been a member of the House of Representatives since 1906 and was elected over and over again president of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association.

A man of affairs and the father of eight children, Mr. Moore is qualified to discuss the cost of living and other practical subjects. Nor is he afraid of his constituents, or of any one else inside or outside his district. He has opinions, a vocabulary and a style that are all his own. Furthermore, he has been thinking about questions that touch every American home. You may have read his essays in the magazines. Well, he is more interesting and less conventional when he and an interviewer sit down by themselves.

"I believe in spending money," he said, "if one has it and can spend it in safety. It may be appropriate for Andrew Carnegie to buy yachts and automobiles because money so expended is put in circulation among producers and wage-earners. The average man, however, takes his chances with misfortune if he goes into debt for yachts and automobiles. Such statements, of course, are axiomatic.

"There are plenty of reasons for the present era of extravagant living," Mr. Moore continued. "We all want service. We want others to do for us those things which we might do for ourselves. Then, again, some of us want more luxury and leisure than we can afford. Dear living, in short, has been encouraged by education, by our general prosperity, by an increase in wages and incomes and the growth of population.

"Fifty-odd years ago Abraham Lincoln went to Gettysburg in a day coach to deliver his memorable speech on the philosophy of the Civil War. He was the President of the United States. Today the average man rides in a parlor car or hires a berth in a sleeper with all its trimmings.

HE WAS HIS OWN HOSTLER.

"Whereas in George Washington's time a man traveled on horseback and cared for his own horse, he now goes forth in luxury, with personal service done for him on every hand by others. And he must pay for the service whether it be a tip to the porter or the cost to the railroad of installing the electric buzzer that fans his heated brow as he lolls back in a velvet chair.

"These things have come along with the progress of the times. If there is complaint about them, one must remember the builder and his workmen who make the car and the persons who take care of the car after it is in operation. New ways of spending money, yes, but increased comfort and contributions to the support of new classes of wage-earners.

"What are some of the results of one's living beyond one's means? you ask. Much domestic unhappiness, not a few divorces, occasionally self-destruction or a prison cell. A few days ago a young man who held a modest position in a bank, not far away from the city where I live, decamped with a few thousand dollars because he could not keep the pace he had set for himself on the meager salary he received.

"If the young man had started in to be a carpenter he might have made a good carpenter, but he preferred to be a bank clerk because of the environment in which he was reared and the desire to live up to the environment was stronger than were his moral principles. As a mechanic he would probably have made more money at his calling, with greater personal satisfaction and happiness in the end, than could have come to him in a bank, but he preferred the easier way.

HOW CREDIT IS INJURIOUS.

"Sometimes what we call 'credit' has a good deal to do with disasters which overtake many men. Credit is so easily obtained and is so frequently overdone by those who ought to pay as they go that in certain cases it becomes a serious menace. If a poor man mortgages his home to buy an automobile he may get away with the social side of the performance for the time being, but he is courting calamity and a day of reckoning.

"Government figures are incomplete with respect to automobiles, but the figures are close enough to the facts to be interesting and instructive. Now I believe in automobiles, even if I don't own one myself. The census shows that the value of automobiles produced in the United States during 1899 was $4,700,000; in 1904 it was more than $30,000,000, and in 1909 it was $250,000,000. The best unofficial figures I can obtain show that over 100,000,000 automobiles are now in use in this country.

"In other words, there is one automobile for every ninety men, women and children. The figures are a great tribute to the wealth of the United States, whether each individual owner of an automobile can afford to have one or not, and prove conclusively that the automobile has become a fixture in the life of the people.

"In the meanwhile what are the statistics as to agricultural implements? We find that in 1899 the production value of these important agencies of agriculture was $101,000,000 approximately. In 1909 the production value has increased to only $146,000,000, yet we depend on agricultural machinery for our food supply.

"Also, let us consider artifical flowers, artificial feathers, and plumes. During the ten years when sluggish farm implements were making such poor headway what were we doing in feathers, flowers and plumes? Their productive value in 1899 was $6,000,000 plus; in 1900 it was $24,000,000, or four times as much.

MILLIONS FOR ART AND BEADS.

"The growth of the American demand for luxuries can be seen in our art importations. During the fiscal year 1913 we admitted art works, free of duty to the value of $45,000,000 plus. For the seven months of the present fiscal year the value of art imports was increased $27,000,000 plus. Thus in nineteen months we spent $74,000,000 abroad for pictures and so on. The value of all the carpets and rugs manufactured in the United States during the year 1909 was less than that amount. In the same nineteen months we spent $2,500,000 in Europe for beads and bead ornaments, which was considerably more than the import value in the same period of all the rice flour, rice meal and broken rice brought into the country. We are willing to spend for luxuries, even if the cost of living soars.

"Some time ago an American art lover purchased a picture in London for $500,000. The man was within his rights and may have done a good thing for those who will flock to see the picture during future generations. That sum of money, however, would have gladdened the hearts of 50,000 women with Easter bonnets at the knockdown price of $10 apiece, or it would have supplied 200,000 school children with shoes at $2.50 a pair. The bonnets would have been made in the United States, as would the shoes.

"No fault is to be found with the man who spends his money as fast as he makes it, if he makes it, though he may seem to be very foolish, but it is unfair to charge up the increase in the cost of living to any political doctrine. Several years ago it was my privilege as chairman of a subcommittee to make the first official inquiry into the cost of living in the District of Columbia. We found there were less cattle to supply beef and more people to eat it; that householders delegated their marketing to servants; that a large number of food commodities, like cereals, were no longer bought in bulk but in fancy packages and that many persons preferred to get their bacon in glass jars, for which they paid a good price, than to have it cut up in the old way on the butcher's block.

CHEWING GUM AND MOVIES.

"Moving pictures are not the result of legislation, they are not mentioned in the economic policy of any political party, but they are here. In 1909, so government figures tell us, the moving picture business of the country represented an investment of $4,200,000. That was only five years ago.

"If recent unofficial statistics are reliable there are now 18,000 moving-picture shows in the United States and 7,000,000 persons attend them daily. Their present cost, which ultimately comes from the people, of course, is said to be $275,000,000. Then we are annually chewing $34,000,000 worth of gum.

"Also reflect upon this year's statistics, which we are yet unable to give accurately, showing the effects of tango dancing on the silk industry. If we must dance we must be accoutered for dancing and the styles that have been set for modern dresses—no matter what the prudish may say about them—at least have the merit of keeping the silk mills in operation at full capacity.

"Textile mills producing standard woolens, cottons, etc., are running short-handed on uncertain orders, but the silk industry is booming. Neither political doctrines nor a law of Congress introduced the slit skirt or the tango to the favor of the American people.

"Thus far we have only talked of the money-spending practices of individuals. There are numerous other ways of dissipating one's revenues. This is an age of fads and fancies and the people are being worked more or less to keep them going. When I say fads, I extend the field from the Associated Organizations for the Slaughter of Cattle Without Spilling of Blood to the Benevolent Order of Political Uplifters to Remedy the Ills of Time and Eternity. They all cost money.

"It is dues, contributions, assessments, extra charges and taxes—for what? To stir up the pride and the passions of the people, to work on the credulity of the public, and to obtain funds for the salaries of officers. I know of no sadder spectacle than the well-bred, scholarly genius who has no trade, no profession, no means of a livelihood but his wits.

JACK MEETS A COLLEGE CHUM.

"'Hello, Bill,' says the engineer, who has just built a railroad tunnel in Arizona, to an old college chum whom he meets at an aristocratic club in the East. 'What are you doing?'

"It is a simple, friendly and natural question. But how shall Bill answer? What has he been doing? He knows that his friend has made good as an engineer and the question embarrasses him, but his wit is working, and he waves his cigarette in the air and flippantly answers 'Doing everybody, Jack.'

"And that is what he is doing, for he is general secretary of the Society for the Painless Elimination of the Mosquito. We know him in Congress. His elaborate essays on his favorite topic clog the daily mails and tax the capacity of our waste baskets.

"Even election and legislative reforms, such as primaries, the initiative and the referendum, are a 'heavy charge on the taxpayers, as can be learned by examining the expense accounts of the States which have adopted those new agencies of democracy. The cost of such measures comes back upon the real estate owner, the business man, and the wage-earner, either in direct taxes to maintain them or in reduced appropriations for other purposes. I am not convinced that the income tax, in the adjustments of the activities and accounts of those who are specially picked to pay it, does not also in the end fall as heavily on the poor man as it does on the rich man.

"As to fakers, the subject is too vast for much discussion at this time. They come to Congress in all sorts of guises, from the cheap-skate lobbyist, who reports to his principal that he dined last night with the President, who told him so-and-so, in strict confidence, to the bejeweled lady who pleads destitution as a reason for an increase in her pension and who reveals by her perfumed card that her receiving day is Tuesday.

HOW AMERICANS ARE SWINDLED.

"The extent to which American people are faked into spending money is really a serious matter. Not millions, but hundreds of millions are taken from the people—generally poor people—by fraudulent mine projectors and get-rich-quick scamps. Schoolteachers, housewives, working men and women, whose scant savings are lured from them by rascals, are, after all, the taxpayers, and it is the fakers and the frauds who increase their cost of living and add to their distress and discontent.

"If the people themselves persist in wasting their money, what shall be said of Congress? As a rule, Congress reflects the will and peculiarities of the people. Then think of the task that is put up to Congress. At this moment we are asked to amend the Constitution, to change existing laws, to enact new law, to raise money, to spend money, to declare war, to maintain peace, to promote business, to suppress the courts in certain instances, to establish prohibition and woman suffrage, to regulate interstate commerce, to revise the navigation laws, and so on and so forth.

"There are probably 20,000 measures which some people want Congress to act upon. I say some people, because I think most people want Congress to adjourn and go home. And all the while Congress is trying to do the will of the people. Mr. Fitzgerald—to whose party I do not belong—chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, says Congress, this very year, has become more extravagant than ever before in its history.

"We spent nearly $400,000,000 on the Panama Canal for the benefit of foreign nations; we spent $300,000,000 or $400,000,000 for the liberation of Cuba and the Philippines, and now we are going into the government ownership of railroads in Alaska and a variety of other enterprises.

BEATS ALL THE RECORDS.

"No Congress has done so much to establish government ownership as has this Congress. The railroad venture in Alaska starts with $35,000,000 assured. That is the money of the people. The sum represents about $1000 for every white person in the territory. Nothing like it has ever been done for anybody in the United States.

"The same sort of business was started in the Philippines, but we escaped responsibility in part by unloading the enterprise on the Philippine government. Literally, we did not fake investors into putting up money for Philippine railroads, but we sanctioned the Philippine government's doing so. The bonds held by the people—and they are mostly Americans—who were thus led into the undertaking are selling at a discount of from 30 to 35 per cent. The Philippine government, however, is paying 4 per cent. interest on the face of the bonds and we stand behind the Philippine government. In the Alaskan railroad project we take the bit in our teeth and spend the people's money direct.

"Surely we are an altruistic nation. Other countries marvel at our generosity and, as in the cases of Cuba, the Philippines and the Panama Canal, they don't even thank us for it. Meanwhile, we drain ourselves of money, complain that we don't have more of it and find fault with conditions at home. I have not heard even the most sanguine government ownership champion say that the Alaska railroad will pay. And that reminds one of the Postal Savings Bank, which, as reported on the floor of the House of Representatives recently, fell $1,000,000 behind during the first year it was in operation.

COMPETING WITH NEW ZEALAND.

"Moreover, we are now engaged in running an express business by means of the parcel post; we are preparing to enter upon the construction of State wagon roads and the proposal to take over the public utilities in the District of Columbia is intended to be an entering wedge for a larger control of similar enterprises. Add to these the positive legislation for government arsenals, government powder plants, government ship yards and government armor plate works and we are in a fair way to compete with New Zealand, the best advertised government-controlled country on earth.

"We cannot, as a government, go into business without taking the risk of loss; neither can we engage in war without providing for the cost. We are still paying for the war of 1812. The bill for our first war with Mexico is not wholly settled. Pension payments because of the Civil War continue to be enormous. We are now providing for the victims of the Spanish war. Although a hundred years old, the French spoliation claims have not been met. The taxpayers should know and then remember these facts.

"It is worthy of note, also, that we have begun to pay many of the claims resulting from the war of 1861-5. Congress would not consider them while the active participants in that great conflict were still alive. The House of Representatives not long ago waived proof of loyalty, which means that it will hereafter be possible for holders of claims for cotton taken during the Civil War, amounting in the aggregate, anywhere from $5,000,000 to $50,000,000, to get their money from the treasury of the United States.

"It seems to me that it is time for Americans, separately and collectively, to pause and reflect upon their case."

[illegible]OR FREEDOM FIGHT WINNING IN STOCKTON.

[illegible] Men Declare for Open Shop After Being [illegible] for Fifteen Years by the Unions — Union [illegible] Repudiates Tactics Used by Agitators, Who [illegible] Cause Trouble.

[illegible]TON is now an open-shop city.

[illegible] July 8 it was known as the "strongest union city" west of the Mississippi.

[illegible] hundred and fifty firms have joined the Stockton Merchants', [illegible] and Employers' Association to maintain open-shop con[illegible].

[illegible] grievance is that "business agents" of the unions have deliberately [illegible] the standard of efficiency among the employees to be [illegible] perpetually made trouble between employers and employees, [illegible] to ruin prosperous home industries when the union agitators [illegible] dictate how those firms should conduct their own businesses.

[illegible] McGaughey, editor of the News-Advocate, official newspaper [illegible] unions, has flatly announced that he will not suport the union [illegible] who are at present using outrageous and unjust methods to [illegible] ends. McGaughey voluntarily relinquished all union indorse[illegible] for his paper.

[illegible] of the union employees, glad to be released fro mthe domi[illegible] of the walking delegates, voluntarily surrender their cards and [illegible] at work.

[illegible] 334 firms and business [illegible] at Stockton have joined [illegible], Manufacturers and [illegible] Association, for the pur[illegible] establishing open-shop con[illegible] that city, which has been [illegible] termed the "metropolis [illegible] Valley."

[illegible] ON THE WAR.

[illegible] Stockton was in [illegible]. The hostelry service [illegible] the citizens subscribed [illegible] the Hotel Stock[illegible] credit to the city, both [illegible] and accom[illegible] A. L. Wagner [illegible] annoyed by petty [illegible] from the union [illegible] year ago an insolent [illegible] made trouble and [illegible] discharged and a non[illegible] in his place. At once [illegible] began leaving, the ho[illegible], and union pickets [illegible] attempting to [illegible] Letters were written to those living permanently at the hotel telling them, in language that thinly veiled threats, to leave the hotel at once. The pickets procured banners, with offensive inscriptions, and continually patrolled the hotel.

Naturally, this course of action made the people of Stockton indignant.

About the same time another event took place which shows how utterly unjust, overbearing and vicious are the demands of the union agitators.

TO KILL HOME INDUSTRY.

The Sperry Flour Mills is one of the largest industries in the city. Its pay roll is heavy and extremely valuable to the merchants of the city. The Sperry Flour Mills has left the unionization of its employees to the employees themselves. Most of them were union men, though the flour mill itself was not what is called a union mill. (There is only one in the United States and its products are not handled in the West.) Some of the engineers employed did not belong to the union, and the walking delegates ordered them to join, and appealed to the management to compel them to do so. The management said it was a question for the engineers to decide, and the engineers voted on the questions, deciding not to jin.

Again the walking delegates demanded that the Sperry Flour Mill management either compel the engineers to join the union or discharge them. This demand was refused, and and the Sperry products were boycotted—although every union man in Stockton continued eating what they knew to be "unfair" bread. Their purpose was to destroy the home industry if they could not bend it to their purpose.

The Sperry mills management announced that if the boycott was maintained the mill would be moved out of Stockton, because there were too many cities that would be glad to have such a mill; that the mill had never paid any employee less than the union scale of wage, and paid many of them more than the union wage.

NO CHANCE FOR PEACE.

The merchants and other citizens did not want their leading hotel boycotted, or one of their leading industries driven out. They formed a committee and met a committee from the unions several times in the course of the months that followed, endeavoring to arrange a "compromise," but the unions wereobdurate. They boasted that they had Stockton "on the hip," that it was "too well organized" for them to give in, and that they would not compromise.

All of the merchants, manufacturers and employers had endured, and most of them were enduring, the arrogant tyranny of some union "business agent," as the agitators and delegates are called, and the business men of Stockton felt that the time had come to act.

They organized. The policy of the organization as set forth by F. B. Nims, president of the Delta Canning Company, is: "We have not organized to fight any one. If there has been any fight it has been by the opposition. The unions seem to think they have a monopoly on organization. They seem to think the right to organize is exclusively their own, but we have a right to organize. They have a right, also, to organize, and, in fact, it seems to me that some other people have the right."

At first but a few of the business men of Stockton came into the association. The nucleus was formed by the manufacturers and warehouse men, together with the lumber and millmen, and the services of L. S. Calkins were secured to handle the affairs of the new organization.

As soon as the other business men saw that the fight was really on to establish open-shop conditions, most of them eagerly joined the association and it took the name of the Merchants', Manufacturers' and Employers' Association, and all of the leading business men of the city are members, although some of the more timid and minor merchants are holding out.

DAILY PAPERS COWARDLY.

There are three daily papers in Stockton, and every one of them is desperately riding the fence trying to retain the advertising of the merchants and not to offend the unions, of whom they—all three papers—are in fear. Not an editorial has appeared in any paper taking any side of the most important issue that has ever come up in the city. From top to bottom each paper is unionized, and union members own stock in one of them.

The M. M. and E. Association has served notice to all three papers that they will have to get down off the fence and show where they stand or endure the risk of competition and the loss of advertising patronage.

Since the fight started, however, J. D. McGaughey, owner and editor of the News-Advocate (weekly) and the official organ of the unions, has served notice that he cannot, and will not, approve of the methods and tactics now being employed by the union agitators to crush the open shop.

M'GAUGHEY—BRAVE MAN.

At a union mass meeting McGaughey took the floor and condemned the methods used, voluntarily relinquished all union indorsements for his paper, and stated that he would never give his support to the leaders in Stockton who were injuring labor, injuring the unions and violating the civil laws of the country by their work.

McGaughey has long been known as an honest man, and an honest union man. It was he who induced many of the unions to repudiate the leadership of P. H. McCarthy and Olaf Tveitmoe, and in the war that followed an appeal was made to the American Federation of Labor, which, since McGaughey was obviously in the right, sustained him.

It is reported that McCarthy has already made preparation to start a newspaper in Stockton in opposition to McGaughey, and a paper that will support the union agitators, no matter what they do.

HOW THE UNION WORKED.

The intelligence and justice of the union leaders was demonstrated not long ago, but before the organization of the M. M. and E., when two open-shop men found employment in Stockton, and stopped at the Hotel Arlington, which was under a management that employed union help. The hotel was immediately picketed, and the management was instructed to throw the open-shop men out.

The manager realized that he had no excuse for doing so. The non-union men were orderly and respectable, and would, unquestionably have had a good case in court to secure damages if they had been turned out of rooms they had engaged in a public hotel. But the union agitators insisted that the Arlington management should jeopardize itself, and maintained the boycott on the hotel and dining-room until the non-union men left of their own volition.

Such instances occurred week after week in Stockton. They incensed the people, offended the working-men as well as the business men, and made the citizens so indignant that they are now giving a loyal support to the Merchants', Manufacturers' and Employers' Association.

UNIONS DEFEAT BOND ISSUE.

When that organizataion was first effected, it was intended that the official declaration for the open-shop conditions should be made to take effect on July 1. It was then decided to postpone the enforcement until after the national holiday, and July 5 was designated as the day. But the city administration stepped in and urged that another respite be given until after the city bond election to raise $266,000 for civic improvements was held.

If any city on earth needs a bond issue it is Stockton. Its water system is inadequate, its sewer system is inadequate, its fire equipment has been pronounced by the chief of the fire department as suitable for a village rather than for a city of 40,000 people. It was considered a foregone conclusion that the bonds would carry, and the voting was not heavy. But the union agitators lined up their followers and snowed the bonds under, "just to show Stockton what would happen to it" when an attempt was made to institute open-shop conditions.

OPEN SHOP DECLARED.

On the morning of July 8 the open-shop conditions were declared. Most of the union men walked out, but many of them remained and some returned to work, still retaining their membership. But there is not a union mill, factory or lumber yard in the city.

A large number of employees, who have been harassed for dues and bossed about by "business agents," have voluntarily surrendered their union cards, remaining at work, and glad to be rid of the domineering agitators.

Practically all of the union cooks and waiters quit. Other help was immediately and without difficulty secured to take their places.

As yet there has been no violence, although threats have been made and rough work is expected. The bartenders' union some time ago issued mandatory letters to the merchants telling them that they must do ro and so. One of the merchants made the comment that, with the assistance of some of the W.C.T.U. voters, there might be no use for the bartenders in Stockton this fall.

But it is questionable if peaceful conditions will long remain. The abusing of the non-union workers, the employment of the pickets and boycott, the threatening and intimidation go on. And C. M. Fieder, the international organizer for the barbers, has been rushed to Stockton to take charge of affairs. He is well known as a "tough customer," and made his presence scarce in Los Angeles after the dynamiting of The Times.

Vice-President Conway of the International Drug Clerks' Union has also been sent to Stockton.

T. J. Vitaich, the official business agent of the Central Labor Council, and T. J. Woods, president of the Building Trades Council, were in charge of the union affairs until the arrival of the more "experienced" strike handlers.

ENCOURAGEMENT BY HOLT.

Pliny E. Holt, manager of the Holt Manufacturing Company, whose courageous example and splendid success with open-shop conditions during the past years has given the other manufacturers and merchants of Stockton great encouragement, said that when his plant started union men were employed exclusively. But after a short time it was learned that there were sixteen separate and distinct unions to deal with, and outside agitators were appearing every day. They told the men that they were working too hard and were doing more than union men of their class in other cities. "Our men," he said, "began listening to the agitators, and work began to fall off until the efficiency of the men was cut down 35 per cent. We couldn't stand such conditions and so, during the dull season, we shut down completely.

"When we opened up again it was with the 'open-shop.' Union leaders predicted that we would be forced out of business, and one Hagerty of San Francisco came here with about 200 men and endeavored to force us to unionize our plant. We refused and we have prospered.

"The success of any industry depends absolutely upon the individual efforts of each employee. The boys in the yard are as much a part of us as our office force. We must all work in unison. The best work accomplished is by the best paid men, and we pay high wages to get the best. We have found that the highest paid men give us the best results on our money. A man's stability and his devotion to his work is a combination that gets its reward."

The business men of Stockton have found to their sorrow that they cannot get loyal and effective work out of their unionized employees. They have found that the union leaders are grafters and trouble-makers, and do not want peaceful and harmonious conditions. The agitators want trouble, because it brings them dues; they can assess the union members, and it is profitable.

The business men of Stockton have found that manufacturers, looking for sites to establish new plants, declare Stockton to be the ideal location by virtue of its rich territory and transportation facilities, but that they will not locate in "the strongest union city west of the Mississippi."

VOTE AGAINST UNION TACTICS.

Philadelphia Employees Like Co-operative Plan.

Will Continue the System for Another Year.

Wages Go Up Under the Present Arrangement.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—The co-operative plan, a system by which the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company deals with its motormen and conductors as individuals rather than as an organization, will be continued in force for another year. The final vote by the employees this week shows that the men are strongly in favor of continuing the plan on its old basis.

THE VOTE.

Of the 6522 employees who were qualified to vote, 3406 cast their ballot in favor of the plan as it stood and 2801 opposed it. Since a two-thirds vote against the plan as it has been administered in the past was required to defeat it, the result was regarded as a complete victory for the anti-unionists.

The co-operative plan itself was not under consideration, but merely whether the old basis of dealing with the men as individuals should be retained or the union be the sovereign body representing the men.

The leaders of the union men when questioned, expressed disappointment that the union will not be recognized. They comforted themselves with the fact that the negative vote had increased about 800 over that last year.

CO-OPERATIVE PLAN.

The co-operative plan is a system by which the wage schedule, the working hours and other conditions connected with the work of the motormen and conductors is regulated and is the outcome of a determination by the new Stotesbury management of the company to institute a more friendly feeling among its employees and prevent a repetition of labor troubles and strikes which brought the company to verge of bankruptcy several years ago.

With the co-operative plan as the basis, the company has increased the wages gradually from 20 cents and 21 cents an hour to 24 cents and 25 cents an hour and has promised to continue the upward scale so long as conditions warrant. While many of the men belong to the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America, the union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, they have laid aside their former determination to stand out for union recognition and have realized that co-operation with the management along the lines laid down will eventually result more to their benefit.

UNIONIST FACTION.

One faction of the trolley men, led by C. O. Pratt, the leader of the two strikes which paralyzed the system here two or three years ago, has stood out against the company's plan, but they are in the minority as indicated by the vote yesterday. They have been expelled from the Amalgamated union and have organized a union of their own which they claim is the only accredited union, and the one deserving support from the A. F. of L.

The co-operative committees are made up of employees and employers, the employees being represented only as individuals. By agreement among these representatives the conditions under which the men work, is regulated.

GOLD-FILLED TOMB.

Remarkable Workmanship on Vases Found Buried With Body of Scythian King.

[Washington Post:] More buried history has recently been unearthed in Southern Russia, some dozen miles from the town of Nicolaeff. It carries us directly back to the days and scenes described by Herodotus, and, like so many other modern discoveries of the kind, it tends to show that the "father of history" was one of the best informed, as well as one of the most truthful writers that ever lived.

The most important part of the discovery consists of a previously undisturbed tomb of a Scythian king, who probably lived in the fourth century before Christ, or, say, 100 years later than Herodotus himself.

The body of the king was found preserved in the manner described by Herodotus as peculiar to the Scythians, and with it were discovered bronze and iron weapons, and gold and silver ornaments of the highest interest, some of which are of great beauty, as, for instance, the magnificent vase of massive silver, covered with gilded figures.

The workmanship of this vase is astonishing, considering the fact that the Scythians were a race of nomads, wandering from place to place when war or other necessity drove them, and not erecting, like the great nations to the south of them, famed cities or great works of architecture, but Herodotus says that some of their kings were very fond of Greek ideas, and this is borne out by the aspect of the ornaments found in the tomb in question.

The artistic treatment of the scenes represented on the great vase instantly strikes the eye. The human figures and the horses are drawn with a truth and spirit that could hardly be exceeded, and if the animal figures are less perfect, the fault is one that is fully shared by Greek work of the same age.

In the same tomb were found many personal ornaments of equal excellence of workmanship. One of these is a heavy gold necklace, which actually surrounded the neck of a dead king, and which is remarkable for its clasps, consisting of lions' heads carved in gold and richly ornamented with inlaid enamel. Then there were many golden bracelets upon his arms, while by his side lay a large sword in a golden scabbard. Five finely decorated silver vases, including the one above described, stood on the right hand side of the king's body. He was clothed in a robe that was ornamented from head to foot with engraved plaques of solid gold.

THE STOCKTON ISSUE.

[The Argonaut:] The war upon which Stockton has now entered is one that must eventually be waged and won in every city in California.

And because this is a war for industrial freedom and elementary human rights there ought to be some practical response from the collective civic decencies of the State. It means the difference between industrial prosperity and industrial ruin. Morally it means something far more than this. The closed shop means a reign of terror by the few over the many. It means the driving of the dispossessed into the highways and byways as hobos and criminals. It means the denial of opportunity to youth, and an unending stream of recruits for the jail and the reform school and the poorhouse. It means the prostitution of the police and the corruption of the bench. We have seen all these things in San Francisco again and again. Within the past year we have seen a hundred devilish outrages committed in the streets of this city and in connection with one small and trivial strike, and we have seen police and magistrates join hands with criminals for the persecution of innocent and helpless men and girls while our newspapers kept a concerted silence so that the bad work might go on unchecked. These are among the invariable fruits of the closed shop—the open and obvious fruits. The less visible fruits are the shrinking of the city's trade and the tacit warning given to enterprise to keep at arm's length from San Francisco under pain of ruin. Stockton is now to determine whether this cancerous growth is to obtain a permanent and fatal hold upon her or whether she shall take it off while it is still possible to do so.

The whole country now knows the deadly meaning of the closed shop. It means that no man shall work or live except by permission of a trade organization. It means a practical sentence of death or banishment upon all who elect to remain outside of that organization or who are deliberately excluded in order to produce an artificial demand that shall result in inflated wages and a monopolistic power for the few. At this moment there are hundreds, possibly thousands, of trained and competent men in San Francisco unable to work at their trade, either because they do not wish to surrender their liberties or because they are without the necessary "pull" or the necessary fees to secure their admission to a union. There are unions that admit none but the relations of members, and not many of them. There are other unions that enforce and compel the dishonesty of their members by idling, loitering and destructiveness. And there are still others, perhaps the majority, who are ready tacitly to condone the worst forms of crime and to subscribe their money for the purchase and defense of crime. It is against abominations such as these that Stockton has arrayed her forces, and she ought to have the support and encouragement of every sentiment of decency and liberty throughout the State.

The advocates of the open shop make no unreasonable demand. They ask no more than that the commonplaces of the old Americanism shall be preserved and that every man in every condition of life shall be at liberty to work or not to work, as he pleases, and that he shall be free to sell his labor on his own terms and without let or hindrance. That it should be necessary to fight for it is evidence of a descent that has yet to be measured in terms of moral and financial loss. At least it is worth asserting and worth fighting for.

Triumph.

STOCKTON WINS FIGHT FOR INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM.

Employers for the First Time in Many Years Are Unfettered from the Bonds of Unionist Oppression. Gone Is the Card, the Label, the Stamp and Grafting Business Agent.

BY LEONARD S. CALKINS,

Secretary-Manager of the Stockton Merchants', Manufacturers' and Employers' Association.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

STOCKTON, July 18.—In eight and a half months the powerful and unrelenting machine that the forces of organized labor have been engaged for many years in building up by coercion, false promises and craftiness has been smashed. Militant unionism with its tyrannies and annoyances has not only been put on the defensive, but it has been stampeded. Industrial equilibrium has been restored to the San Joaquin Valley metropolis, which has so long been pointed to with pride by the unionists as the best organized of all their strongholds in the West.

Late last fall a handful of local merchants, bankers, manufacturers and other employers of labor who yearned to cast off the industrial yoke which had burdened them and their neighbors so long and had been a brake upon the community's growth, selected me to take up the work of organizing and conducting a defensive and, if necessary, an offensive, movement calculated to afford relief. Within forty days after my arrival I had the employers of more than half of all the wage-earners in the city allied together in a compact and determined band known as the Merchants', Manufacturers' and Employers' Association. I proceeded to form numerous subsidiary associations from the main body, these representing the various branches of industry.

Three months later, when the membership embraced over 90 per cent. of all workers in the employers of the city, and the unionists were still sneering at the movement as one that could be easily wrecked when desired, the association was launched upon a defensive campaign. A move to open-shop the mercantile houses was met with the weapons of the boycott and the picket. The battle was short and vigorous and ended in a Waterloo for organized labor.

This was immediately followed by a similar crusade in behalf of the keepers of restaurants and hotels who had for many years had little or no say in the conduct of their business. The unionists were permanently enjoined from boycotting and picketing, and they were completely routed all along the line.

Next came the battle royal. All of the unions made a last stand about the standard of the building trades and here it was they expected to regain their lost ground and demolish the employing forces. They had underestimated, however, the efficiency of the organization that was battling for industrial freedom, and which had been carefully constructed with a full understanding of the principle that each link of a chain must be strong if the strain is to be a hard one.

Every branch of the master builders and allied contractors without a notable exception was lined up in a solid rank, and back of it stood all the mercantile, milling, lumbering, realty, manufacturing, transportation, public utility, financial, laundry and other interests. The unions, by resolution passed on June 26, were given two days in which to call off all boycotts, take down the few remaining display cards in the city, and cease discriminations of every kind against persons and concerns not unionized, under penalty of the association without further notice arbitrarily and without compromise enforcing the open shop in every line.

On Wednesday, July 8, the miracle was performed. The shop card, the label, the stamp, the steward, the walking delegate, were eliminated with one blow. And now the employers of the city of Stockton are realizing for the first time in many years what it really means to be free from the moloch of unionistic coercion and hoggishness. There will probably be a small amount of guerrilla warfare and misrepresentation carried on for a time, by the dismounted laborites at the instigation of the agitators and disturbers at their head, but the main fight is won and Stockton is on the map as one of the few cities of the world which are industrially free. The association is here to stay and to maintain this condition.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

The railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor has begun to gather data for the greatest hard-luck story ever written.

Sordid chapters from the lives of 35,000 men will be gathered and will tell the story of the hardships, the sufferings, the poverty and sickness of the union railway shopmen who foolishly gave up their jobs and went on strike thirty-three months ago when labor difficulties arose.

The vast amount of information and evidence is being collected by Frank Comerford, an attorney, and will be presented in an investigation of two Chicago railroad systems before the United States Commission on Industrial Relations at its meetings in Chicago next month.

Sixty thousand question sheets are being sent out by a corps of twenty international officers of the labor organizations. Some of the pertinent questions which each man is asked to answer are:

"Since the strike have you lost your home because you could not make the payments?

"Were you compelled to take any of your children out of school and send them to work?

"Was your wife compelled to take up work to earn money because you were forced out of your job?

"Have you been forced to get along with poorer and less food and clothing for yourself and family since the strike?

"Have you had sickness in your family since the strike directly or indirectly caused by your poverty?

"Do you know of any striker or member of his family who committed suicide because of the poverty into which he was forced by the strike? Doubtless "yes" will be the answer to all or most of these questions—asked by labor itself—and the tabulation and publication of the answers should have the effect of causing union labor to refuse any longer to be bulldozed out of its wages money for the support of a lot of lazy strike agitators.

There are fifty-two questions in all, says the Chicago correspondent of the Sun of New York, and upon the back of the circular is a space where each man is asked to tell the story of his life since the strike.

The investigation, and it is a wise one, will show how many homes have been broken up, how many men have been made tramps, how many have been forced to seek charity, the number of deaths, particularly young children, due to reduced standards of living, and the number of suicides. Analyzed the story will certainly be an appalling one, emphasizing again the fact that regular work and the regular wages pay envelope should be the worker's Rock of Gibraltar, even though the envelope may not contain as much money as the worker would like to have or the non-working strike agitator tells him he ought to have, and who, by inducing him to strike, causes him the entire loss of what he might have, week after week. This strike began on September 30, 1911, on the Illinois Central and Harriman lines.

Wages of Masons in Italy.

According to La Tribuna, published at Rome, a strike of the stonemasons and bricklayers at Siena, Tuscany, Italy, has been settled on the basis of the following daily wage scale, ten hours constituting a day's work:

Stonemasons and bricklayers, first-class	63 to 72 cents
Ditto, second-class	[illegible]
Ditto, third-class	[illegible]
Helpers, first-class	[illegible]
Ditto, second-class	37 to 45 cents
Ditto, third-class	[illegible]
Excavators of foundations	43 to 51 cents
Apprentices	A general increase of 15 per cent.
Workers at aqueduct at Vivo	45 to 52 cents
Excavators at aqueduct	51 cents
Stonemasons and bricklayers at Leghorn are paid	77 to 90 cents a day

American stonemasons and bricklayers can compare for themselves these "starvation" wages with the comparatively "palatial" wages they receive. Why, even the drivers of sprinkler wagons in Los Angeles—decidedly not skilled labor like mason work and bricklaying—are being paid $5 a day by our non-economical City Council.

Railroaders Back at Work.

The increase in freight and passenger traffic in the last three weeks on all railroads in the Pittsburgh district has resulted in the return to work of many employees who were laid off during the last several months both in the traffic end and the repair shops and roundhouses.

The Baltimore and Ohio has taken on several hundred men in its shops to repair freight cars in preparation for the expected heavy autumn traffic. The Pennsylvania has ordered every available freight car made ready for use, and many men are being taken back.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has ordered all the men who were laid off in the various departments a few months ago to report for duty. Orders have been given by the Pennsylvania to its Altoona shops to proceed with the construction of eighty-four locomotives, at a cost of $1,680,000. All the foregoing means an additional heavy wages disbursement.

Child Labor in Philadelphia.

Approximately 25,875 children, less than 16 years old, are now at work in stores, factories and other commercial establishments in Philadelphia, reports the Bureau of Compulsory Education. This is altogether wrong in this day of struggle for better American citizenship. Child labor is not a gain but a loss to every country and community. Home, school and play should be every child's portion in life.

More New Haven Pensions.

Directors of the New Haven Railroad have pensioned thirteen more faithful employees, making fifty-one retired in three months on pensions aggregating $1547 a month. In the list there are three crossingmen, two switchmen, two watchmen, one clerk, one foreman painter, one train baggage master, one station baggage master, one section foreman and one track foreman. One crossingman pensioned, 82 years old, had been fifty-nine years in the service.

Santa Fe Increases Work.

The Sun of New York has a wire from Los Angeles stating abandonment of the policy of retrenchment by the Santa Fe, and that the purse strings on all parts of the line in California had been loosened. An increase of 37 per cent. in the working hours is made effective at once in the San Bernardino shops. The men have been doing forty hours a week basis. Two thousand employees in various departments are affected. In Los Angeles the new schedule now in effect is fifty-five hours a week, within five hours of the minimum time ever employed in the local shop. The new order for an increase in working hours benefits the volume of wages paid in all branches of the operating department.

HOSTILITY TO BIG BUSINESS.

Those Who Have Achieved Success Are Called Rapacious and Corporations Represent Money Power.

[Prof. John J. Stevenson in Popular Science Monthly:] Labor unions and their defenders justify the use of violence because without it they could not succeed. The assumptions are that labor and society are at war, that the interests are irreconcilable and that demands by labor leaders are always just. McNamara at Los Angeles saw no moral turpitude in arson and murder, because he fought for a principle. The unions evidently agreed with him, for they extended a vast sum in his defense. Thirty-eight men were convicted in Indianapolis of complicity in his and similar crimes, but the union approved their work and re-elected the convicts to their offices. The daily papers report almost daily cases of murder and arson in localities where strikes have been ordered. Labor unions defy the law but are ever ready to demand its protection; their principles are no better than those of the India thugs, who practiced robbery and murder in the name of the goddess Cali.

The cruel disregard of other's rights is not born of folly. There is a general disaffection against those who have achieved success; it matters not what kind of success, the thing itself is a crime. The brutal rapacity of "capitalists" is a welcome theme and no charge is too absurd to be accepted as true. If it be proved false, retraction is made grudgingly with the reflection that the old wolf has escaped this time, but he ought to have been hanged long ago. It is still an article of faith in many quarters, even outside of those inhabited by peoples alien to our mode of thought and to our language, that the panic of 1907 was contrived deliberately by capitalists of New York City, the ground for the belief being, apparently, that they can bring on a panic if they choose. The worst charge that can be brought against a man is that he is rich, or against a combination of men, that it is a corporation. The most serious feature of present conditions is the blind, inconsiderate hostility to "capital" manifested by legislators, who are clearly ignorant of what the term means. The popular antipathy to "big business" has become almost a mania and a great part of the community trembles at the concentration of the "money power" in the hands of a few score of men—though why there should be such terror on account of concentration of the money power and no terror because of concentration of the labor power in still fewer hands is difficult to understand. Laws against mere bigness have been enacted as readily as though it were a crime like burglary. The case of the Harvester Company is in point. The Missouri judge recognized that the whole course of that company had been commendable and to the advantage of the community, but, under the statute, he was compelled to impose a heavy fine because, by acquiring practical control of the market, it had become able, if so disposed, to inflict injury. That the American Sugar Refining Company has reduced the cost of sugar by 50 per cent. and that it is satisfied with a gross profit of less than half a cent per pound is nothing; the concern is too big. That for every dollar of gain secured by the Standard Oil Company the community has gained many hundreds through the reduction of illuminating oil to one-sixth of the price forty years ago is nothing; that most of the profit gained by that company has come from utilization of what was regarded burdensome waste material is nothing; the company is too big and makes too much money. The stupendous service rendered to the country by the United States Steel Company by prevention of panics and depressions is nothing; it is too big. Attacks on these organizations by government officials win great applause, in spite of the fact that so-called "trust-made" products are almost the only ones which have decreased in price—although the great companies pay high wages and their workmen have steady work, because trade unions cannot gain a foothold to impoverish the wage-earner by strikes and compulsory idleness.

Relief for Women.

[New York Sun:] It is rather heaping up odium an old Noah to make him responsible for both the apple and the grape. The Chaldean version of the fall of man will be popular, however, in feminist circles, as it seems to free Mother Eve from responsibility for original sin.

Maricopa.

MODEL SHOWS GUSHER FIELD.

Interesting Portrayal of Conditions on "Flat."

Also Helps Operators to Locate Strata.

Operators Conquer Lively Oil Field Fire.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MARICOPA, July 17.—One of the most interesting exhibits ever constructed in Midway is a model of Maricopa flat, which has just been completed, and set up by the Kern County Oil Protective Association. The model shows in miniature and strictly according to scale, the underground structure of the district, including all oil, gas and water sands underlying sections 30, 31 and 32, T. 12N., R.23 W., and the west half of section 4, and the north halves of sections 5 and 6, 11-23.

This comprises the Maricopa Star, El Dora, Spreckels, Annex and Essex leases of the General Petroleum Company, Maricopa National, National Pacific, Pan-American, Pacific Midway, August, Miocene, Trojan, Old British-American, Midway Northern, Maricopa Northern, Midland lease of the American Oilfields, Lake View No. 2, where the great gusher is now flowing; International, Coronation and Jergins leases of the Union Oil Company, the new lease on section 4, 11-23, of the North American Consolidated, the Midway Fields property and those of the Kern Trading and Oil Company on sections 31 and 5, adjoining.

This district is at present more in the public eye than any other section of the California oil fields. Five gushers have recently been brought in and have increased wonderfully the production of the Sunset field. In addition to this the land has been involved—prominently of late—in government withdrawal legislation.

The chief trouble to the operator in finding the oil sands in his property generally lies in a confusion of the correlation of the various strata. It is to obviate this that the model has been made. The model is open to inspection of all members of the association, but not to the general public.

Lively Fire.

Threatening wells and quantities of oil in the neighborhood, a fire of some proportions broke out a few nights ago on the property of the American Oilfields Company in Maricopa flat gusher district. Auto trucks hauled lines of hose and extinguishers to the scene, and neighboring companies rushed men to the property to assist in controlling the flames. After several hours fighting they won out.

The fire started on the American Oilfields property, on the Midland division, apparently from the great flow of gas from No. 4 well, which came in Sunday. As the evening was a quiet one, with but little breeze, the gas had become quite dense. Suddenly it burst into flame, probably having been ignited from the fire in a boiler-house. The blaze was communicated to sumps in which a quantity of oil was stored, and also spread to the derrick of well No. 2, burning it to the ground. A small storage tank full of oil was also destroyed. The big new 25,000-barrel No. 4 well of the company was successfully shut in by the men on the property, and did not catch fire.

The flames were visible for a number of miles. The loss was not serious.

Would Dissolve.

The Lillian Oil and Mining Company, with headquarters at Hanford, and which formerly held some government land in South Coalinga, has filed a petition in the Superior Court of Kings county asking for permission to dissolve. The petition states that all of the company's outstanding indebtedness has been liquidated and that the stockholders voted unanimously in favor of dissolution at a meeting held recently. The directors of the company are: S. Renofer, Freeman Richardson, R. R. Cadway, E. Grawatt, Joseph I. Barberio and E. E. Bush. The hearing on the petition has been set.

The work of the Illinois Crude Oil Company of cleaning out and redrilling the wells is progressing favorably, and one well is already showing a material increase in production. The total production of the lease has already been increased, and it is expected that the output will be close to the former high mark when the ten or more wells on the property are in shape. The wells have been producing for about ten years, and the company has paid nearly $100,000 in dividends. The lease on the ten acres has several years to run. Two small assessments have been levied to raise funds for development work.

Work has been resumed on the twenty-acre lease on section 30, 12-23, formerly held by the Panama Oil Company, and which has been idle for a period of six months. The land had been taken over by the Hedrick interests, known as the Panama Oil Company, and the lease reverted to its former owners, George E. Whittaker and J. W. Laymance, when the Panama company became involved in financial difficulties several months ago.

Gilbert Chesterton.

[Boston Advertiser:] An amusing story of Gilbert Chesterton's absentmindedness comes from England. Once when Mrs. Chesterton was unable to accompany her husband on a lecture tour, he departed with these words ringing in his ears: "Now, Gilbert, you know where you are to lecture and what railway station." Arriving there, he banged down a sovereign at the booking office and said, "A ticket."

"Where for?" asked the astonished clerk.

"Free Trade Hall," replied Chesterton.

"Oh, Glasgow, then?" said the clerk, and passed out a ticket for that station.

Stepping into the street at Glasgow, he was hailed by a friend: "Hullo, Chesterton, what are you doing here?"

"Oh, I'm lecturing at the Free Trade Hall."

"Oh, no, you're not," said the friend.

"Oh, yes, I am," protested Chesterton. "I booked the engagement some months ago."

"But you cannot be," maintained the friend, "for the place is being renovated and the painters are in."

It slowly came over Chesterton that he was at the wrong place, and he immediately sent a telegram to his wife: "Am here. Where ought I to be?"

VIOLENCE AND LABOR.

As Soon as the Anarchists Come Into Contact With the Authorities They Adopt Violent Methods.

[Boston Advertiser:] There is poetic justice in the destruction of the three bomb makers in New York last week, by their own handiwork. Evidence tends to show that they planned to use the explosive against the court before which they were to be tried soon after. In their demonstrations before Mr. Rockefeller's home in Tarrytown they had been fairly peaceful; but as soon as they came into contact with the authorities they adopted violent methods. The only time the I.W.W. and anarchist groups of whom they were representative are in favor of the forces of the State is when the police are defending them. As soon as they are opposed they substitute dynamite for law.

The I.W.W. is famous for its "free speech" fights and its insistence on the rights of the press. Yet a member of the new I.W.W. union that has terrorized Butte for a number of weeks asked Mayor Duncan to deport a journalist who was writing things that did not please the men who are trying to break up the Western Federation of Miners. When the Socialist Mayor refused to oppose the freedom of the press, the enraged miner drew a knife and stabbed him several times. Mayor Duncan whipped out a revolver and shot his assailant. They may both recover.

The Reason Why.

LIVING COST PAST AND PRESENT

HAS BEEN INCREASED BY INCREASE OF WAGES.

Consolidation of Transportation Lines Has Aided in Keeping Down Cost of Freight, and Inventors Have Supplied Machinery to Do the Work of Unskilled Laborers.

[Prof. John J. Stevenson in Popular Science Monthly:] The manual worker is not left in ignorance respecting his rights, his wrongs and his importance. In season and out of season he is taught that the world owes every man a living and that he should receive wages enough to support his family according to the American standard; that his labor makes value and that his share of the profits is withheld; that capital, all-powerful, is consumed with passion to enslave helpless labor; that he can secure his rights only by compulsion, since the interests of capital are antagonistic to those of labor. These matters deserve consideration.

The world—that is, the community—owes no man a living; it did not bring any man into existence and it is under no obligation to support the children of heedless parents. One must emphasize this truism, because there is a rapidly-growing tendecy to believe that poverty and vice are due to the rapacity of employers and to insist on the responsibility of the community, en masse, for continuance of the evil conditions. During a so-called investigation by a commission of the Illinois Senate, an official of the Illinois Steel Company was asked to tell what he regarded as a fair living wage for a man with a wife and daughter. At a hearing before a Massachusetts commission it was shown that the wages paid are so small that one employee, in order to support himself, his wife and their eight children, was compelled to do outside work—and the heartless corporation was duly flayed in headlines. But it must be evident to any thoughtful man that wife and children cannot be considered in connection with the relations of wage earner and wage payer. The only question concerns the worth of the man's services. Introduction of other matters would so increase the uncertainty of business affairs as to make them little better than a lottery. If a man's services are not worth enough to secure wages which would support a family, he should not marry. He may not complain because the community is unwilling to have him gratify his desires at its expense.

The wage in shops and factories is said to be so small that women are driven to prostitution; one is told that, in each year, 200,000 women in our land are compelled to sell their bodies to procure the necessaries of life, and that each year sees 700,000 children perish because their parents have insufficient nourishment. But the voices which rise in bitter outcry against this awful condition do not rise in protest against encouragement of unrestricted reproduction among the wretched or against the wide open door which increases the population annually by a net half-million of, in great part, poverty-stricken immigrants—and this in face of the fact that our country is no longer able to provide work for those already here. If it be true that the alleged number of children die because they or their parents have insufficient nourishment, one must concede that their deaths are a blessing to themselves and to the community. Such children should not have been born. But the assertions are, a priori, they cannot be proved and are closely related to the other assertion that poverty is the cause, not merely a cause of crime. The statement of an abandoned woman before a State Commission is accepted as final, despite the counter-assertion of the associated social workers, whose close relations with the impoverished classes should make their statements authoritative. But the slanderous statement is spread broadcast and wage-earning women are viewed with suspicion.

It may well be that not a low wage, but a wage too low t ogratify vanity or the desire for luxuries may be the determining cause in a great proportion of cases. Sexual desire is the strongest natural appetite in every normal young man or woman. If there be a deep-seated moral sense, the wage will make no difference. If there be no moral sense, the wage is unimportant. So long as the chief deterrent from gratification of the desire is the fear of inconvenience and social disgrace, yielding to temptation will be dependent on the danger of exposure. Unquestionably, the majority of fallen women come from the poorer classes, because those classes are by far the most numerous; but a very considerable proportion has come from among those whose wages are far from low, while the record of divorce courts makes very clear that even the possession of wealth cannot prevent women from straying. This question of morals in women employees answers well as a slogan in attacks upon wage payers, but it appears to sink into insignificance when it involves the rights of wage earners as against the wage payer. A telegram from Everett, Wash., dated October 23, of last year, and published in the New York papers, gives the illustration. The manager of a telephone company, appearing before the State Industrial Commission, held that employers should weed out from their service all immoral girls and women. But two women members of the commission maintained that employers should not concern themselves about the morality or immorality of women employees, provided these perform their tasks efficiently; these commissioners insisted that the employer has no right to exercise any control over the conduct of employees outside of working hours.

The demand that all should be able to live according to the "American" standard, whatever that may mean, is coupled with the assertion that wages have not kept pace with the increased cost of living. Tables of comparative prices are published in the daily papers, which prove that the cost of food has increased incredibly within a decade or two. It is well understood that one can prove almost anything by means of statistics and these tables are illustrative. Some of them are as absurd as would be tables to prove increase in cost of living by comparing the price of diaphanous calico in 1858 with that of the finest cambric muslin in 1913. The writer has lived in New York City during almost three-quarters of a century and he knows that, whatever may be the conditions elsewhere, prices of the essential articles of food, with few exceptions, show comparatively little increase during the last fifty years, while some show a marvelous decrease—material of the same quality being compared throughout. Beef, such as nearly all New Yorkers ate sixty years ago, can be purchased at hundreds of large shops at barely 20 per cent. higher price; flour, grade for grade, has not risen in price, while the great fluctuations in price of the olden time are unknown—in 1854 or 1855 the writer paid $12 for a barrel of family flour for his father; eggs, grade for grade, are, thanks for cold storage, little higher during the winter months than they were many years ago; while refined sugar costs today little more than was charged for a light brown sugar in 1858. Butter and hog products have increased in cost and are likely to contiue increasing until ruled off the list of foods. The growth of urban population has destroyed the butter industry, as sale of milk is more profitable and less burdensome.

In former times, when corn was worth only a few cents per bushel, western farmers had their choice between using it as fuel or converting it into pork. But corn is worth now from 50 to 70 cents per bushel, according to the crop, and it cannot be converted into pork except at a loss. Pork will disappear as a food staple and butter will be replaced by the more wholesome oleomargarine products. Within our large cities, an anomalous condition exists in the price of vegetables. Wholesale prices have not increased, indeed in many cases they have decreased greatly; yet because of archaic methods of distribution, the retail cost is greater. But this does not concern the general question.

The stability of prices of the food staples, in spite of increasing demand, is due to several causes, of which only three need be noted; The consolidation of continuous transportation lines, which has made possible the extraordinary low freight rates in this country; the consolidation and localization of manufacturing interests, which has increased available capital and has led to introduction of improved methods; the ingenuity of inventors, which has made unnecessary a vast quantity of unskilled, even of skilled, labor. Our flour is from Dakota wheat, ground in Minneapolis, and our beef is from western cattle slaughtered in Chicago, yet the prices are, at most, little higher than those paid sixty years ago for flour brought by water from Rochester and Richmond, or for beef from Ohio and New York.

But in some other directions, where the inventor's work has not kept pace with expansion or where trade-union influence has prevented full utilization, the effect of increased wages is only too manifest; the mechanic has himself to blame for the untoward condition. Compared with 1858, a day's work means fewer hours and greatly increased wages. One illustration suffices. Building is much more expensive when bricklayers receive about $6 for eight hours of work than it was when they received $2 for ten hours' work. The increased cost of living in large cities is due very largely to increased wages for decreased hours of work. If one doubt this relation between wages and prices, he needs only comparison of the cost of pig iron and of ready-made clothing in 1897 and 1901, the difference being due almost wholly to wage increase.

The cost of living has increased out of proportion to the wages, but only because the mode of living has changed and the requirements are greater. The clothing of fifty years ago would not satisfy the people of our day. The clerk must ape the man who has twice his wage. The workingman demands luxuries for his table which the well-to-do man of sixty years ago never thought of buying. One is asked indignantly, has not the poor man a right to these things? Certainly, if he can afford to pay for them, just as every man has a right to an automobile and chauffeur, if he can afford to pay for them; but no man, rich or poor, has the right to expend so much of his income on things not necessary that, when times of depression come, he will have nothing left and must become a burden to the more provident members of the community. The complaint is the same throughout the scale; it is not confined to the "poor," but is common to all; the man with $2 a day is embittered as he considers the luxury of the man with $5; the man with $10,000 a year is unhappy because, in his limited condition, he cannot make so grand a show as does the man with twice or five times as much. It is impossible ever to reach the "living wage," because desires increase with the income and poverty is always present. Men's minds dwell almost wholly on what they have not; too few are willing to recognize the abundant blessings which they possess.

Labor certainly creates value and it is entitled to a generous reward; but this doctrine, as defined by labor unions, is not exact, since they lay the chief emphasis on manual labor. Yet they do not ignore the superiority of mental labor. The plasterer, whose work requires much natural as well as acquired skill, would be indignant at a suggestion that a hod-carrier should receive wages equal to his own. Unskilled labor is merely animated machinery for rough work and adds very little value to the final product. It is utilized because abundant and low in price; as soon as it demands an excessive wage, it is displaced by machinery. Skilled labor, combining muscular and mental effort, increases the value in proportion to the mental expenditure; but mental labor, involving no muscular exertion, adds most of all, it is the co-ordinating, creating power without which the others would be helpless. One E. H. Harriman is of more lasting service to a nation than would be 1,000,000 of unskilled laborers; without a Harriman they would be a menace.

THE SUICIDE CLUB.

The Latest Scheme for Advertising Adopted by a Young Man in Evening Dress With a Tray of Tarts.

[London Chronicle:] People who know Stevenson's "New Arabian Nights" rubbed their eyes in Leicester Square yesterday afternoon, for coming toward them was the young man of "The Suicide Club," in evening dress, distributing cream tarts from a tray, just as Prince Florizel saw him.

He approached an old gentleman, made a courtly bow, presented a cream tart daintily, and said, "Sir, will you honor a stranger by accepting this?"

The old gentleman's mouth was already wide open with astonishment—wide enough for two or three tarts to go in abreast—and he took the pastry with a puzzled air. Then the people crowded round, and the young man was soon handing out cream tarts as fast as he could. Old and young, rich and poor, accepted them, and many a dainty pair of gloves had to be cleaned last night, for you cannot clutch a cream tart without being defiled.

A member of the veterans' corps, who accompanied the young man, distributed cards which bore the words:

The young man with the cream tarts. The Suicide Club, Box-court, W. P. T. O.

On the other side were the words:

I'm giving you this cream tart, which I think you will enjoy. I am enacting the incident from Robert Louis Stevenson's "Suicide Club" [illegible] Colonial [illegible] Limited.

And with this [illegible] ple, who thought [illegible] suddenly awoke.

The ninth inning veered around with the crowd pulling for Harkness to get by with a no-hit performance, and the Seals determined that he shouldn't do anything of the kind.

Howard threw in a pinch hitter for Pernoll. "Rabbit" Mundorff was his choice. R. M. put a fly in short right just inside the line, and it looked for the world like a lucky hit. But Bayless made a remarkable catch, and everybody breathed easier. Fitzgerald drove a high bounder to McArdle, and slid into first base for a close play. Hayes gave Harkness the edge, calling Fitzgerald out, which was not a bad idea, everything considered.

Howard took O'Leary's turn at the bat. Del looked so destructive that Harkness hit him in the back. That seemed to be the only safe way out of it. With Schaller at bat, Howard stole second and third, Harkness letting him have all the leeway that he wanted. By paying a little more attention to Del, Harkness could have picked him off either first or second for the third out.

TRAFFIC SIGNALS CHANGE IS PROPOSED AND LIKELY.

Simple One - Arm System Now Being Investigated Which Should Be Popular With Motorists, as It Makes Even Break With Drivers of Left or Right-Hand Machines on Turns.

BY AD G. WADDELL.

IT IS possible that the traffic signals now in use in Los Angeles will become obsolete within a short time. Changes have been proposed and members of the traffic committee are known to be in favor of the system now successfully used in New York.

Lieut. Butler, chief of the Los Angeles traffic squad, is also of the opinion that a new set of signals will be popular with the motorists of this city.

The signals now used are with the hand in the direction of the turn. The operator of a left-hand-drive machine finds it difficult to extend the arm out to the side on a turn to the right. With a right-hand-drive machine the driver meets with the same inconvenience when making a turn to the left.

INVESTIGATION ON.

It is the intention of the members of the traffic committee to thoroughly investigate the signal system which is now in use in New York and urge its adoption if it is decided that it will be of benefit to the motoring public of Los Angeles and Southern California.

Signaling is done with either hand when the proposed system is employed. The man with the left-drive machine extends his arm out of the car and if a turn to the left is to be made, the hand remains extended in the direction of the turn.

This is a warning to those in rear of the car and they naturally slow down or stop.

If the turn is to be made to the right, however, the left hand is extended and circled forward with a beckoning motion as a signal to the rear that all is clear and the right of way is open on the left side.

SYSTEM SUCCESS.

Lieut. Butler said yesterday that this simple system has worked out in the East with great success and there is no reason why it should not be adopted here.

After reading over the ordinance covering this section of the traffic laws, the lieutenant stated that he believed the wording could be so interpreted as to permit of the use of the new system without any amendment being necessary.

Many of the prominent automobile men of the city have expressed a desire for the change and a number of owners are of the opinion that the one-arm system would simplify the signaling problem greatly.

HARD TO SEE.

With the top of a touring car raised it is almost impossible to see a signal to the left from a right-drive car. The same difficulty arises on the other side with a left-drive machine.

Lieut. Butler and members of the traffic committee are ever on the lookout for measures which will benefit the motoring public and if, after a thorough investigation, it is decided that the adoption of the new system should be made, it is safe to say that the one-arm signal system will be used here.

ONE BIG YEAR FOR FRANKLIN.

A report issued by the Franklin factory last week shows R. C. Hamlin, the local Franklin dealer, at the top of the business columns for the company. From October 1, 1913, to July 1, 1914, the local agent placed more cars than any other dealer in the country, and his increase was figured at 44 per cent. by the factory officials.

DEFEAT BEHR AND PELL IN TERRIFIC MATCH.

Every Set Goes to Deuce, Twenty-two Games Deciding First Set. Pell and Behr Win the Third and Fourth Sets—McLoughlin Is the Hero for the Winners.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEABRIGHT (N. J.) July 18.—Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas C. Bundy, the national champions in the doubles, defeated Karl H. Behr and T. R. Pell today in the finals of the Davis cup test tournament on the turf courts of the Seabright Tennis and Cricket Club. The score was 12-10, 7-5, 4-6, 7-9, 7-5. McLoughlin, at the end had to jump to the net and check the attack of Behr and Pell with spectacular smashing.

Pell toed the line for the opening service to the surprise of the enthusiasts, who expected McLoughlin to rake the opposite court with his sizzling drives, but nothing of the sort happened. The great champion drove returns into the net.

McLoughlin came up for the second service and there was not a trace of his old swift ball, which had been the terror of Wimbledon. Behr followed in the returns so ably as to lead the champion at 3-0 on games. Behr's service was the best. The ball failed to bounce high enough to suit

CONTEST HAS HARD ANGLES.

Bekins-Speers Offer Guess Worth While.

Picture One of Best Among Series Lot.

New Auto Used on Long Run for "The Times."

The landmark contest photograph for today shows Milo Bekins in a new Lozier at one of California's famous resorts. This place will be recognized by many motorists, although it is a great distance from Los Angeles.

There are many who have not motored to the place, but who have visited the resort in seasons past.

The Lozier was not to have appeared in the contest series until next Sunday, but the Moline Knight picture that was to have appeared today was thought "to easy" by Gilman M. Flint, sales manager for the local agency, and he requested that the Lozier take the tenth place and allow him to go on a long trip this week for his picture, which will appear next Sunday.

Following the Moline Knight, the Studebaker is to appear. Richard Bennett has been substituted for A. W. Maxwell in this picture. Bennett is very much interested in the auto club's landmark contest and consented to drive a car out of the city in order that a picture might be made which would puzzle the best of the touring experts entered in the contest.

The Lozier picture shown today was procured at great expense to the Bekins-Speers Motor Company, which sent out a new car for the purpose of making the Lozier picture one of the most attractive of the series.

ACROSS STATES FOR PICTURES.

MOTION PICTURE CONCERN HAS MOTOR SERVICE.

Transcontinental Run With a Camera Man on the Job to Work Car Into Pictures and Gather Information on Roads Which Should Be Appreciated by Motorists.

Across the continent in a 1915 Velie. This is to be the slogan of a moving-picture man, who has just purchased a Velie forty-five for a transcontinental journey on a moving-picture stunt that will keep him in the field for at least three months. Max Olsen, factory representative for the Velie Motor Vehicle Company, closed the deal and the car is to be sent out on its overland journey this coming week.

The Velie was purchased by the American Biograph Company and the reason given for its purchase was the fact that the car has lines that appeal to a maker of pictures.

This 1915 Velie will be sent into every State touched by the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway route. Equipped for a transcontinental tour, the car will be one of the important factors in an outing that will mean much to the touring information data to be gathered by the Colyear Motor Sales Company. The driver will send all information of the roads to A. T. Neely of the local Velie agency, who will keep it in shape for the sea-to-sea tourer.

The best route to be followed will be outlined so carefully that no mistakes need be made. The road information that can be secured on such a trip is invaluable, as no effort will be made to hurry on this particular outing. The country will be thoroughly explored and the roads of the States where the highways have been improved will be charted carefully and the route from Los Angeles to New York should be shortened by this latest information to be obtained by the road guides.

With thousands of motorists planning a tour from the East to the West, this coming year, the data secured by the Velie will be eagerly scanned. Pictures of the scenes that are most interesting will be forwarded to Curtis Colyear, who will offer his information to drivers of any make of car as well as to owners of Velie machines.

ADVANCE IS SHOWN IN AUTO INDUSTRY.

THREE TIMES AS MANY AUTOS SOLD THIS YEAR AS LAST SEASON.

Demonstrating the advances made by the light car, the progress of the Empire Automobile Company during the past year is deserving of attention.

The statement of business done during the first six months of the 1914 season shows that three times as many Empires were sold this year as during the same period of last season.

This increase in production and sales gives the Empire concern first place in point of numbers of cars built among manufacturers of Indiana. Along with this increase in production, there has been a steady development in the selling organization, not only in the United States but abroad. Empire cars are now sold in practically every automobile using country of the world.

FUEL TESTS MADE ON THE SPEEDWAY.

Motor car factory officials and fuel experts are conducting a series of tests of a substitute for gasoline on the Indianapolis motor speedway, under the observation of the speedway officials.

These tests have been made with a liquid solution said to be produced at a small cost and as a substitute for gasoline. John Andrews, a Portuguese, is the inventor. Cars from the National factory are being used for the tests.

On the Beach.

GALVESTON RACE MEET HAS NOVEL FEATURES.

SIXTEEN events are scheduled for the Galveston beach motor race meet which is to take place July 30 to August 3, inclusive. Contests for all classes of racing cars are on the programme, and $4650 in cash is offered in addition to many valuable trophies.

An innovation this year will be the day devoted to amateur races exclusively.

The first day of the meet the feature event is to be a fifty-mile class D free-for-all. There will also be a ten-mile class B event for cars of 230 cubic inches and under, a ten-mile class C, 231-300 cubic inches, and a ten-mile 301-450 cubic inches. Mile trials against the beach record will also be made.

No professional races are to be held the second day. The entire card to be given over to amateur drivers.

One of the features of amateur day is to be a class E "slow race." This is to be a half-mile event from a standing start. Cars are to be started in the low and must be engaged in high gear before passing fifty feet from the start.

Each car is to carry an official observer. Stalling the motor will disqualify the car. Clutch pedals must remain untouched from fifty feet from the start to the finish. The last car to cross the tape will be declared the winner.

August 3 a number of spring races are to be held, and August 3 there is to be another fifty-mile free-for-all class D, a ten-mile handicap and a ten-mile consolation event.

FIAT RACE PILOT TELLS OF WRECK.

WAS IN DINGLEY'S PIT AND HE GAVE SPEED SIGNAL TO DRIVER.

Frank Verbeck, winner of the Sacramento race with a Fiat last year and a contender in many of the great races of the country during the past season, was in Bert Dingley's pit at Tacoma when the Ono car was wrecked and the popular Los Angeles boy almost lost his life.

Verbeck tells a graphic story of the wreck.

Dingley was but a car length behind the Mercer. Both drivers had been given the green flag and Verbeck gave Dingley the signal to open up. He did; and then the wreck.

According to Verbeck the asphalt on the Tacoma speedway is over loose earth. The surface rolls like small waves. Dingley hit one of these with his front wheels on the turn. The car swung around and headed in the opposite direction, throwing Swanson, the mechanician, out.

The Ono then skidded the other way, throwing Dingley out clear of the wreck, and as he lay upon the ground the machine rolled over him and then went end for end, making four turns.

GAME YOUNGSTER NATIONAL PILOT.

A baby National racer is being built by Earle Y. Boothe, which is to compete in all the important junior races of the country in the future.

Allan Bruce, a budding speed king of sixteen summers, is to pilot the baby National in the junior contests. Young Bruce is the designer and builder of the car. The work is being done in the shops of the local National agency.

A Thieme engine is being used in the baby National, but design of the car from the hood back is closely patterned after the National racers.

CHEAP MILEAGE RECORD SCORED.

From New York to Boston for 80 cents is the passenger-carrying record established by a Paige "36" touring car, driven by E. M. Dailey, president of the New York Paige Company.

The car carried four passengers and covered a distance of 344 miles, from the Hotel Astor to the Touraine in Boston, in nine hours, at a cost of $3.20 for oil and gasoline, or 80 cents for each passenger.

EASY ON TIRES.

That the Hupmobile is the easiest car on tire wear of any standard car is the assertion of C. H. Smith of the Moreland Truck Company.

"How much tire mileage is a Hupmobile good for?" asked Mr. Smith of P. H. Greer, and when advised by the Hupmobile dealer that 7000 or 8000 miles was a safe average, Smith, with a great deal of surprise, answered that he had already done 10,000 miles without a sign of wear.

PACKARD SCORES ON LONG RAMBLE.

A record of 1050 miles in forty-one hours' elapsed time is claimed for a Packard six, seven-passenger touring car by E. C. Patterson, vice-president and general manager of P. F. Collier & Son, the publishers, in a non-stop run from Chicago to New York.

The run was made under the auspices of the Chicago Automobile Club. The motor was sealed and two observers appointed by the automobile club rode in the car for the entire distance. The four passengers ate their meals in the machine and took what sleep they could en route in relays.

MANY VICTORIES.

Tire Made Famous by Barney Oldfield Makes Great Showing in Fast Races of Northwest and Southwest.

Firestone tires came in for a great winning July 3 and 4.

Earl Cooper won at Tacoma on Firestones. He drove his famous Stutz No. 8 to first place in the 250-mile race at the rate of 73.53 miles an hour. Jim Parsons won at Tacoma on Firestone tires also.

Bert Dingley, who was battling for second honors, when he wrecked Frank Young's Ono car, was also using Firestone tires and after the wreck it was found that the four tires were not damaged.

Sam Murphy won the Prescott loop race, over an eighty-eight-mile course in 1 hour 40 minutes 54 2-5 seconds. His Mercer was equipped with Firestones.

The first four places in the Phoenix-to-Prescott motorcycle race, which was won by Ellie Wilson on an Indian, were won by the same tire.

BIG MONTH SCORED BY TIRE COMPANY.

The Firestone Tire and Rubber Company is enjoying one of the most prosperous years in its history. Each year this firm has added to its output in an effort to supply the demand, only to find that its estimates have fallen short. During the summer months of 1913 the Firestone factory was kept in operation twenty-three hours a day and still could not keep up with the increasing sales.

This year the Firestone company has increased its output 78 per cent. and still it looks like a repetition of 1913.

Manager A. T. Smith of the local branch states that this branch during the month of June, 1914, produced the greatest volume of business in its history.

SMALL CAR WINS HARD HILL CLIMB.

FIRST FOUR PLACES TAKEN BY LITTLE METZ MACHINE IN CONTEST.

The winning of endurance and hill-climbing contests is apparently getting to be a regular habit with Metz cars.

To the impressive collection of cups and trophies which the Metz Twenty-two already holds, and successfully defends, it added within the past few days another testimonial to its prowess.

It captured the Utica Automobile Club trophy, which was the prize contested for in the second annual hill-climb, conducted under the auspices of this club at Richfield Springs, N. Y., on the Fourth of July.

It not only captured it, but it won it in a manner to delight lovers of the sensational.

In class A of this contest Metz cars won first, second, third and fourth places. The hill is seven-eighths of a mile long, and in the steepest section it presents a grade that is the despair of many automobilists.

Another One.

OLD NUMBERS, NEW DESIGNS.

LATEST TO ENTER LIGHT SIX AUTO FIELD.

This New Creation Carefully Designed to Meet the Demand for Car of Type Built With the Same Care that Has Characterized This Building Concern from Start.

The Haynes Automobile Company of Kokomo, Ind., has entered the "light six" field with an actual production of 5000 cars for 1915.

Undoubtedly the advent of the Haynes into the "light six" field marks an epoch in the American automobile industry.

The Haynes "light six" was carefully designed with a view of eliminating all complications without sacrificing any of the fundamental features that make for power, endurance and general reliability. It is built with the same care that has always characterized the Haynes product, the low price having been made possible by the simplicity of the design, increased production, and improved manufacturing facilities.

Absolutely nothing has been slighted either in the design or equipment of this car; an oil pump for positively lubricating the motor parts, a large water pump and fan to insure effective cooling, a motor-driven tire pump, Firestone demountable rims, arch frame construction— these and many other distinctive features insure the car's popularity.

AUTO TOURING LINE LATEST.

HOURLY AUTO RUNS TO BEACH AT CAR RATE.

Young Automobile Man to Stage Automobile Tours at Reasonable Rate, Which Should Be Popular With Tourists Who Wish to See Southern California from Auto.

Ned Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company has established an auto line to the beach which promises to be popular during the rest of the summer season.

Young Lord has three cars in operation now, and soon two more big Maxwells will be added to the string and he will then have equipment enough to handle a large amount of the touring traffic.

The same fare is charged as on the electric railways. The cars stand on Hill street, and, leaving hourly, cover a definite route to Venice and Santa Monica, returning the same way.

The route is out Hill to Sixteenth and over Sixteenth to Hoover, south on Hoover to Washington and out Washington to Venice and from there to Santa Monica.

When his other cars arrive Lord intends to run auto excursions to Riverside, Redlands and San Bernardino. For $6 he has arranged for one-day tours to Riverside, a drive about the city, dinner at the Mission Inn, a run over to Redlands and back through San Bernardino, with a stop at Arrowhead, returning to Los Angeles over the Foothill boulevard.

The Maxwell cars used are not disfigured in any way and have the appearance of [illegible] cars.

The New Premier 6-49—and a Lower Price

Sturdy, simplified, economical, efficient, beautiful.

Back in 1908 highest honors for economy were conferred on the Premier when it won the only trophy ever offered by the Standard Oil Company for engine economy.

That same year, another stock Premier, under official observance did 12,189.6 miles in 100 consecutive days over very out-of-the-ordinary roads. At the finish the car was dismantled and inspected by the Technical Committee of the A.A.A.—the maximum wear on any part was less than 1-1000 of an inch.

Out of these performances grew the confidence that led these 10 Premier owners, and their families, to make a Coast-to-Coast tour in 1911, driving in secure comfort 168 miles per day for [illegible] days.

Now this new series 6-49—the same "Premier quality" brought down to date and costing less, sets a new standard of high class automobile value. Every detail is in harmony with the one Premier aim, "efficiency"—the aim that produces a car you can afford and enjoy.

Equipped with wire wheels and carrying an extra wheel and tire on rear, the gasoline-car effect is emphasized. This is the first electric ever manufactured carrying this full equipment. The speed control is by foot throttle and the steering is with the wheel.

The first model roadster was sold the past week to J. G. Young of Young's Market and on the first three days in exhibiting this car two additional orders were secured for delivery as soon as the cars can be turned out by the local factory.

Beardsley reports trade conditions as excellent. The fact that his first roadster was snapped up almost before the factory experts had finished the work on the car proves this statement.

For the present a detour is necessary to avoid construction work between Fullerton and Anaheim.

Orange is but a short distance east of the main road, less than two miles from Santa Ana. Orange also offers excellent garage service to motorists as well as hotel accommodations.

From Santa Ana the Seal Beach road runs through Westminster to Bay City and Seal Beach. An excellent paved highway runs through the beet and celery fields direct to Huntington Beach. From Orange to Tustin, through the citrus section, there is a paved boulevard, which connects with the Newport Beach road at Tustin. There are good roads between Santa Ana and Tustin.

A branch from the Newport Beach road runs around Newport Bay to Corona del Mar and ends there. It is planned to extend this road along the coast to Laguna Beach. The Laguna Beach road from Irvine is closed at present on account of construction work. Travel to Laguna Beach is by way of El Toro and Aliso Canyon. The coast from Corona del Mar to far below Laguna is extremely rugged and picturesque.

The popular coast road to San Diego through Santa Ana passes through Tustin, Irvine, El Toro and San Juan Capistrano. From San Juan Capistrano to San Juan Hot Springs there is a road through San Juan Canyon, still in the primitive for a distance of about fifteen miles.

The Trabuco Canyon road from Santa Ana into Trabuco Canyon is popular with motorists. This road leads to the foot of the trail up Saddleback Mountain to Santiago Peak and also connects with the Santiago Canyon road, which runs from Orange through El Modena by Orange County Park, by the entrance to Silverado Canyon and to the Modjeska Country Club. The Trabuco and Santiago Canyons are two of the most rugged and attractive canyons in Southern California.

The Santa Ana Canyon road, which is closed at present for some reconstruction work, runs from Santa Ana through Orange, Olive and Peralta. This is the road into Riverside county from Santa Ana and other Orange county points, and leads through mountainous country.

RETURN TO RACE GAME PREDICTED.

While Earle Y. Boothe and H. W. Jack Russell refuse to give out any definite information on the subject, it is generally believed that the National will return to the racing game this coming season.

Johnny Aitken, the old National pilot, is now in Europe studying the construction of foreign machines. He managed the pits for the winning foreigners during the last two Indianapolis Speedway contests and is thoroughly familiar with the racing game.

MANY LINKS ADDED TO SERVICE CHAIN.

During the past month the Bosch Magneto Company added nineteen supply stations to its already long list of service links throughout the country. The service station idea now carried out by the automobile manufacturer and maker of allied lines is of great benefit to motorists who use standard products.

The last links added to the Bosch Magneto Company's service chain for the purpose of rendering expert service in the fields of ignition, electric starting and lighting are scattered throughout the country in nineteen different cities of the United States.

DRIVER LICENSE REQUIRED BY LAW.

By the laws of twenty-five States, according to advices at hand, paid drivers must submit to some sort of test of their qualifications and be registered, yet in thirteen of these States a hasty reading of the law gives the impression that any one not paid to do so, or not in any way the servant of the owner, may operate a properly registered car to his heart's content. In Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Oregon and Vermont any person operating a car must possess a license. In Virginia every operator must have a license except members of the owner's family, who are exempt; but the chauffeur's evil reputation as a daredevil is recognized by providing him with a special form of license and requiring him to wear a badge.

In Oregon alone the word chauffeur is made practically synonymous with driver, and even the owner must wear a tag. In Connecticut, Delaware, Rhode Island, Maine, Maryland, New Jersey and the District of Columbia, the owner, or any other person who drives, is subject to personal examination and license. No special requirement is laid upon the professional driver in distinction from the amateur, except that in Connecticut a yellow tag must be added to the license tag, giving the registered number of the chauffeur of a factory test car. In fourteen States, on the other hand, there is no legal requirement of proficiency in order to drive, and no form of registration for drivers, paid or otherwise, is provided.

MORE GROWTH.

Officials of the Federal Rubber Manufacturing Company of Milwaukee, celebrated the third anniversary of the company's existence, July 1, by issuing orders for the erection of new factory buildings to cost more than $500,000. When completed, the new buildings will mean an increase of 150,000 square feet of floor space, making 450,000 square feet for the entire tire plant.

MOTOR LOCO.

A Mitchell automobile is being used by the Canadian Pacific for daily runs between Winnipeg and Transcona. Equipped with heavy flanged car wheels, the machine rides the rails well and is operated at much less than a locomotive for special runs. The Mitchell is under the orders of the train dispatcher and the driver is rated as an engineer on the road.

GREAT FOR DEALERS.

That Studebaker dealers the country over, have made more money up to date this season than in any prior year is the statement of L. J. Ollier, the Studebaker, sales manager.

REGAL

Men Like the Power and Economy of the New REGAL — Women Admire Its Beauty and Comfort

Just think of a motor that develops 39 h. p. on brake test, in a car that weighs from 300 to 500 pounds less than other cars around its price.

Power enough to go anywhere with ease—and the lessened weight means a good many more miles out of a gallon of fuel or a set of tires.

No car at any price has better body-lines than the Regal—a perfect streamline with even the radiator cap under the hood.

And five grown folks find plenty of room—there's a 48-inch tonneau seat, and doors nearly two feet wide.

Come to our showrooms and learn the rest of the Regal story. We will arrange the Regal ride to suit you.

SERVICE MAKES TOURING EASE.

Dealers Can Not Forget the Owners Now.

Lozier Concern Operates an Excellent Chain.

Popularizes Long Auto Runs as Pastime.

Service for the automobile owner has gradually narrowed down to the point where it is absolutely necessary for the dealer to provide in more ways than one for this, the most important factor in the retaining of the owner's business and good will.

A good example of the service systems which have been organized by a number of the local dealers, is found in the method whereby Lozier owners throughout the State are taken care of by the State distributors, Bekins-Speers Company.

A few years ago, just as soon as an automobile was sold, the purchaser was immediately forgotten and all interest was centered on the securing of new prospects. Now, practically all of the larger firms are establishing service stations where owners can consult automobile experts who are prepared to render all possible aid.

The string of service stations organized by the Lozier dealers extends over the entire State. In the larger cities, branches of the parent corporation have been located. In the smaller cities, subagents have been appointed to look after the interests of all Lozier owners. Practically a complete line of parts is carried in stock and expert mechanics are in charge of the stations.

The formation of this organization has done a great deal to further the popularity of Lozier touring. The fear of possible unrepaired breakdowns has been almost eliminated. For now when a Lozier tourist starts out on a trip, it makes no difference whether his destination is a few miles away or a thousand, he leaves with the assurance that a chain of service stations with factory-trained mechanics in charge, will be ready to assist him in case of an emergency.

AT EXPOSITION.

A space of 5000 square feet has been allotted to the Studebaker Corporation by the Pan-American Exposition for exhibits.

AUTOS EVEN THERE.

Three Motor Cars Break Into Society on Island of Frozen North and Make Good.

Before the advent of three Overland machines, all the traveling on the island of Iceland was done on foot or by horse power. The rough trails of Iceland furnish difficulties enough to discourage the most optimistic motorists. There are few roads worthy of the name and gasoline is practically unknown. Almost the entire country is bare volcanic rock.

The first car owned on the island was a special landaulet body mounted on an Overland chassis, purchased from the Overland agency recently established at Reykjavik, Iceland. It was the first self-propelled vehicle ever operated on the island.

Two more orders for machines from residents of the frozen country soon followed the first car.

TOWS FIVE TONS.

Over Rainbow Mountain and into Corona, the Studbaker "Six" owned by F. M. Baird, towed a heavy disabled car a distance of fifty-three miles. The entire load of the motor was found to be more than five tons.

GIVES UP AGENCY.

R. E. Hathorn, who for a number of years has had the agency of a well-known light car at Compton, has now taken the Hupmobile agency for that territory.

Easy Business.

LITTLE AUTO MAKES CLIMB.

Car With Long Mileage Mark Shows Up Well.

Forgot to Stop at Half-Way Rest Station.

Carried Heavy Load and the Family, Too.

In addition to a reliable machine it takes an experienced driver to reach the summit of Bear Valley, according to S. W. Clark, who recently turned the trick with a party of five in his Hupmobile.

"All along the line we passed auto campers who had enough of the steep grade. But it's a wonderful trip and the scenery from Pine Knot Lodge is beyond words."

Mr. Clark left San Bernardino with his wife and family and enough baggage and rations for two machines. It is customary for autoists on the long grind to stop at the Stone House, a mid-distance point for resting the engine, but his little Hup was working so splendidly that he went on through.

The entire trip to Bear Valley is 108 miles and in the nine miles between Clark's ranch and the summit there is a rise of 3000 feet. While the trip is somewhat dangerous for a novice, the roads are in splendid condition. Deep sand is carefully bedded at all curves, which is a great preventive to skidding, while the roadbed itself is carefully watched.

Clark's little 1912 Hupmobile, in which he has made close to 20,000 miles with never an overhauling, made the climb to Pine Knot Lodge and return without a hitch. The altitude did not affect the machine in the least and the entire climb was made on a gallon and a half of water.

NEW YORK CITY AUTO CARNIVAL.

Reviving the methods by which automobile enthusiasm was created and stimulated in the earlier days of the business, an automobile carnival is to be held in New York City next September that will exceed anything else of the sort that has been given for a long time. The committee in charge of it includes representatives of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers, and a number of other organizations identified with the motor car trade, and the affair is to benefit by funds supplied by the State of New York. There will be automobile pageants in Manhattan and Brooklyn, together with gymkhana events and night parades with red fire, and a number of valuable prizes will be hung up with a view to stimulating the interest of automobile owners.

The carnival is to be part of the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the beginning of the chartered commerce of New York, and a big appropriation for the celebration has just been assured by the signing of the necessary bill at Albany. The automobile part of the celebration, which is in the hands of the committee indicated, is scheduled for a satisfactory slice of the available funds, and the members of the committee are undertaking to make the motor car carnival one of the big events of the year. Motor car manufacturers throughout the country are to be invited to participate.

WITHIN THE LAW.

Frosted Glass Headlights on Machines, When in Cities Where Ordinances Require Dimmed Glows.

For cars not equipped with large and small bulbs in the headlights scouring soap may be used as an effective dimmer. With a dampened cloth the glass can be frosted, and the soap rubs off easily.

It has been suggested by officials of the F. B. Stearns Company, makers of the Stearns-Knight cars, that touring motorists include a cake of scouring soap in their traveling equipment.

Stand the Test.

WIRE WHEELS MAKE GOOD IN WRECK DEMONSTRATION

The average motorist having little or no technical knowledge of the truss theory involved in wire-wheel construction finds it hard to believe that so light a construction is in reality stronger than the heavier wood wheel.

These skeptical ones will find a convincing argument in the destruction tests made recently in England. A triple spoke laced wire wheel, a hickory wood wheel and an oak wood wheel were submitted to identical tests.

Each wheel was bolted to a stationary axle and subjected to a series of blows of varying length from a 450-pound pendulum suspended from the rafters.

The individual blows showed various results on each type of wheel. The final result, after five identical blows on each wheel, showed the oak wheel with practically every spoke and most of the felloe entirely demolished. The hickory wheel finished in somewhat, but not much better condition. The wire wheel, although deflected an inch and three-quarters out of true at the point of impact and with three spokes broken and a few bent, was still in a usable condition and able to carry the weight of a car.

He Comes Back.

WELL-KNOWN MECHANIC RETURNS TO FACTORY.

R. M. Bowzer has returned to Los Angeles and is now rated as inspector for the Moreland Motor Truck Company.

In the days of the old Tourist machine, which was designed by Wat Moreland, Bowzer was associated with Moreland in business and they rode together in the Tourist racer, which was well known here.

When the first Moreland truck was built, Bowzer was in overalls with Moreland and the two men were eight months working on the first two trucks put out by the company, which has since come to the front in a remarkably short time.

In the early days of the local built truck, Bowzer was the demonstrator. He drove on all the record trips and established the truck throughout Southern California.

Later Bowzer was elected "missionary" for his company and his duty it was to go out and open new territory. One by one the Southern California fields were tilled. Bowzer then was sent north, where he introduced the Moreland.

After being on the outside for the company for three years, the "missionary" has come back to the factory where he makes all adjustments, inspects all trucks before they go out and has general supervision over the service department.

The Truck Game.

RECORDS LOWERED WITH SUMMER HEAT RAGING.

All records for motor truck sales have been shattered during the past few weeks. Many of the great corporations of the country purchased trucks on an extensive scale during the month of June.

The effect of the summer heat on horses throughout the country may have hastened many sales, but the majority of purchasers were influenced, it is claimed, by improved service and economy.

Sales of White trucks in June exceeded those of any other month in the history of the industry. Eight five-ton dumping trucks and three platform trucks were sold to contractors. Four five-ton trucks were sold to road contractors and eight trucks of smaller capacity, including three trucks with power dumping bodies and tractor wheels. Four five-ton power dumping trucks were sold to coal companies and six trucks were sold to brewers.

Thirty-three trucks of various capacities were sold to oil companies. Thirteen White trucks were purchased by department stores. Six were sold to furniture stores, eleven to various departments of the United States government, four ambulances to hospitals, seven pieces of motorized fire apparatus to fire departments, forty-four motor busses to transportation companies and fifty-four trucks of various capacities were sold to merchants in different lines of trade.

A special folder, showing maps of main routes, ferries and bridges, and connections to and from Manhattan, the Bronx Westchester county and New Jersey has been issued by the American Automobile Association. It is of particular value to motoring visitors to New York.

The Briscoe Car Is Not Merely an Automobile Among Automobiles—It Is a Work of Art

If some board of competent judges were to adjudge all automobiles, taking into consideration price, quality, efficiency, style, in fact, all those attributes which are a part of well-rounded goodness, their decision most surely would be that the Briscoe car deserves to be called THE BEST CAR IN THE WORLD.

In the Briscoe car design there is comprehended a perfect co-relation of parts. When it finally does wear out (and it should wear twice as long, at least, as ordinary cars) it should, theoretically, wear out all over at once. For we have striven to make each part as strong as every other part. It has not, for example, a ten-year motor and a six-month axle, a ten-year body and a two-year top. It may justly be called THE CO-RELATED DESIGN.

Buy Tires ½ in. Wider

For the Price of Smaller Tires

The price of some tires nowadays will buy a half-inch wider Goodyear. And the wider tire will fit your rim. If you pay that extra, get some value for it. Get this larger size.

Say "No" to Extra Prices

Don't pay more than Goodyear prices for the same-size tire.

Don't pay for one size what will buy a half-inch wider Goodyear.

Don't pay for three tires what four Goodyears cost. There are 16 makes of tires today which cost too much, we claim.

It is Utter Waste

In Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires we give you the best we know in tires. And we spend in our laboratory $100,000 yearly just to learn how to better tires.

We give you in them four costly features found in no other tire. Those features save tire users millions.

We give you the tire which, in the test of time, has come to outsell any other.

By every measure it is the world's best tire. When you pay more for other makes, that extra is a waste.

Why No-Rim-Cuts Lead

They are the only tires which embody our No-Rim-Cut feature.

The only tires which get the extra "On-Air" cure. That saves the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric.

The only tires in which our patent method combats tread separation.

The only tires with the double-thick All-Weather tread.

They cost less than others because of mammoth output, new efficiency, new equipment. They cost half what they used to cost. But no price buys less trouble or lower cost per mile.

French Scheme.

NEW KIND OF GLASS FOR FRONTS OF AUTOMOBILES.

TO PROVE the efficiency of a new idea which needs an accident to demonstrate its practical value, is not an easy task.

For the last year physicists in Paris have experimented with a new kind of glass, which has interested all classes of industries engaged in transportation.

An automobile running into the Grenelle tramway, whose windows were fitted with the new "triplex" glass, two weeks ago, demonstrated the practical value of this new combination of material.

Two windows were broken in the tramway, but no one was hurt because the glass was broken very much like a sheet of celluloid would be, while the shield of the auto which was also crushed by the impact lacerated deeply the face of the chauffeur.

Since then a great interest has been taken in the so-called "triplex" glass, which is produced by placing a sheet of translucid celluloid between two of glass and uniting the three together under heavy pressure, in a heated press. The combination makes a perfectly translucid glass which does not break easily. When shattered by contact with some hard material, by a shot or blow, it crazes like oiled paper and the particles of glass remain held by the celluloid.

Recent reports have demonstrated that minor accidents of travel are nearly one-third due to flying glass and that over half of these accidents are serious, causing permanent disfigurement. Triplex glass might well be adapted to automobile shields, tramways and railroad coaches and greatly reduce such accidents now caused by the use of ordinary glass.

FLYING SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

Fifteen leading motor manufacturing companies of England have made an average annual profit this year of 51.9 per cent. on invested capital.

A depression in motor trade in Germany is ascribed to the financial stringency caused by the government's call for $200,000,000 extra war taxes.

Galveston anticipates the largest attendance in its history for the automobile racing events on the beach there during the cotton carnival. The prize money totals $5000.

Announcement by a Detroit motor-selling firm that it will accept horses and wagons in part payment for cars has created something of a sensation in the Motor City.

The United States sent $78,886 worth of automobile tires into Sweden in 1913, England and Germany alone leading it in these imports. A custom house forecast for 1914 indicates a larger trade in every respect.

It is estimated that 5000 persons attended the opening of the St. Paul Automobile Club's new country home at White Bear Lake. The clubhouse cost $65,000. There are now 1200 members in the organization.

On the principle that the same rule applies to motorists as to pedestrians, an Indiana court has allowed a motorist $5000 damages for a grade-crossing accident. The motorist proved that he had "stopped, looked and listened."

Automobile headlights have been placed under the ban in Pittsburgh's streets. In parks and boulevards, however, they are required, as the roads are not so well illuminated. This is the reverse of the rules in most city parks.

The statement by the Cleveland Audubon Society that automobiles have decreased the number of sparrows on city streets because of gasoline, bears out similar assertions made heretofore by S.P.C.A. organizations in other sections.

According to a Michigan judge, when an automobile and a horse-drawn vehicle are going the same way, and the motorist wants to pass the other vehicle, he must sound his horn or give some warning of some kind before going ahead.

The use of electric horns has been prohibited at night in Maryland towns, with the result that several motorists whose cars are not provided with bulb horns have been arrested and fined. The excuse that the car has no other horn to sound is not accepted.

New Jersey netted more than $100,000 from motor-vehicle licenses sold during the past fiscal year than it did during the previous twelve-month. Total collections for 1913 were $494,000, and those for 1914 were $600,000. Fines increased from $2600 to $5000.

Hail the cyclecar taxicab! It will carry two passengers besides the driver, will sell for $600 and will charge 25 cents for the first mile and 5 cents a quarter-mile thereafter. It is to be built by a taxicab company which has been incorporated in New York State with a capitalization of $500,000.

Dealers in Kansas City have been unable to keep up with the demand for motor cars in their section. It is said that the farmers of Kansas are paying $18,000 a day for automobiles and that the expectation of a large wheat crop indicates that after harvest more money will be spent for machines this year than ever before.

FAMOUS OLD CAR TO RACE NO MORE.

The National racer which was hailed as a champion in days gone by is coming home to roost, its speed days over.

With many victories to its credit, old No. 11 is coming up from the Imperial Valley this week to take a berth as a relic at the local National agency. This is the No. 11 which won the Los Angeles-to-Phoenix race in 1911 with Harvey Herrick at the wheel, cleaned at Bakersfield and in the Santa Monica road race the same year. The car has been purchased by the local National agency.

FROM THE FACTORIES.

An industrial library has been installed by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company for the use of employees at the factory in Akron, O. Books are to be loaned to workers, and a research staff is to keep individuals informed of items or features of particular interest to themselves.

Mechanical production of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, aside from tires, increased 333 per cent. in 1913 over the year 1912, and for the first quarter of 1914 showed an increase of 480 per cent. over the same period of 1913. Items included chiefly are belts, hose and packing.

A motor made for the Moon lightweight six has been installed in a 6000-pound bus to be used at Springfield, Mass. With its sixteen passengers, the motor is called upon to transport 170 pounds per horsepower, in a town of many hills.

JOHNSON PARTY DOING COUNTRY.

Mammoth Wash Easy After Texas Roads.

Cadillac Carries Complete Camp Outfit.

Circuit of West Purpose of Tourists.

One of the longest trips undertaken by an owner this season is the tour of Dr. C. D. Johnson, who arrived here last week with his wife and two children from their home in Williamson county, Texas. They will continue north to San Francisco, with detours to Yosemite and Lake Tahoe. Thence they go north to Portland and Seattle. From Seattle they will drive to Butte by way of Spokane and Boise, Idaho. Salt Lake will be the objective point from Butte, thence to Cheyenne and Denver and from Denver to Oklahoma City and home.

Dr. Johnson is making the trip in his seven-passenger Cadillac, and the only work required on the car after the long trip here was the loosening of one brake, which was holding. This is a remarkable record for any car, for the going was very rough in Texas and New Mexico, owing to the many storms encountered, which have washed away the road in several places.

Three weeks ago Dr. Johnson started from his home, and expects to be on the road for three more months. The first stages of the journey were the worst, and the speedometer registered 1000 miles when the car arrived in El Paso. This was due to the detours which were necessary to find passable roads. Hundreds of miles of highway have been damaged. It was necessary to go to Roswell, N. M., before reaching El Paso.

From El Paso to Los Angeles the roads are reported fair, with only an occasional bad stretch. According to Dr. Johnson the roads are much better marked from El Paso to the coast than they are east of El Paso. The trip could be made to the coast without the aid of a map, he says.

"One part of California which has a bad reputation as far east as El Paso is the Mammoth Wash," declares the doctor. "Upon arrival at the east side of the wash I deflated my tires to thirty-five pounds and started on the low. I had no trouble whatever and soon had slipped the gear into the intermediate. That went so well that finally I decided to try the high gear, and the car waltzed through."

A complete camping outfit is carried on the car, and camp was made each night at the roadside. Of the two children the boy is 9 years old and the girl 4, but both have stood the trip well and are eager to continue.

The camping outfit consists of a tent that covers the entire machine. The berths are then made up. The lower consists of a cot in the tonneau for the children. The upper is a full-sized berth made over the tops of the seats and Dr. Johnson says it is an ideal camp. Several nights they were caught in the rain, but their canvas house was water-proof.

OIL LEAKS.

A point deserving attention at the hands of many automobile designers is that of making cars oil tight. This is a fault found justly with many modern cars and is especially in evidence at points in housings carrying loads of heavy grease which often oozes out, damaging finish and collecting dust.

DE TAMBLE'S ROADSTERS NOT DUE UNTIL AUGUST.

E. S. DE TAMBLE has returned to this city from the Partin-Palmer factory at Chicago, where the new Partin-Palmer roadster is being built, and says that the first shipment of the new low-priced car will not reach Los Angeles before the last week in August.

A great change has been made in the body of the car. The design first announced was that of a stream line body with a drop in rear of the rear seats which detracted materially from the appearance of the machine.

The body has been so altered that the stream line effect is carried to the rear with the back gracefully rounded so that there are no sharp angles seen.

This low-priced car is to be equipped with electric lights and starter and fitted with many accessories seen only on the high-grade machines. The local Partin-Palmer agent says that he could have delivered at least 150 of these roadsters if he had had them here during the past month.

With only the specifications to work with, De Tamble has sold many of the cars and those who have placed deposits on the machines are to be the first to receive the cars when they begin to come in, next month.

Both the body and seats are of native design and make. Heavy side curtains have been attached to protect passengers from the dangerous rays of the tropic sun.

The finals will introduce Paddy Mills and Joe Lopez and Johnny Reese and Dave Smith of the Venice Athletic Club. Reese is the boy who came on here from New York with Johnny Dundee as sparring partner and will take part in the amateur events until he commands further attention.

Mills and Lopez are rivals and will settle a dispute. In their bouts two weeks ago Mills was awarded the decision after four interesting rounds.

WHEN LAVIGNE FOUGHT BURGE.

BIG FELLOW BROUGHT DOWN BY AMERICAN'S RELENTLESS FURY.

Freddie Welsh is the first real English lightweight champion of the world, by virtue of his twenty-round decision over Willie Ritchie in London, and thereby hangs a tale concerning little Kid Lavigne, who brought the crown from England to America eighteen years ago, and in all that time no Briton had been able to win it back. Of late years the most persistent challengers were Owen Moran and Freddie Welsh, but the latter was never able to get a match with the title holder. His match with Ad Wolgast was called off, when the champion developed a case of appendicitis the night before the scheduled battle, and Ritchie, who lost to Freddie yesterday, substituted, the Briton getting the verdict.

There was no question of points, when little George Lavigne fought big Dick Burge, the English lightweight champion. He ripped Burge into ribbons and finally in the eighteenth round the referee stopped the fight with Burge on the floor trying to get up. That is why Americans were able to call themselves lightweight champions of the world.

Sam Fitzpatrick, in a reminiscent mood, told the story, which is very timely, in view of Ritchie's defeat, as follows to Bob Ripley:

"Lavigne had just beaten Joe Wolcott at Maspeth when Dr. A. P. Ordway, representing the National Sporting Club of England, made us an offer to cross and meet Burge. We fixed up the match in an hour down in Arthur Lumley's office

"What was the amount of the purse offered?" we questioned. Sam laughed. He laughed right out as he compared it with the huge sum that Ritchie received for the same kind of a job.

"Well—it wasn't $50,000! No, indeed. Burge and Lavigne fought for the immense sum of $3500, to be divided as we chose. We were perfectly satisfied to get that, too. They allowed us $250 for expenses and we got on the boat. Though they didn't greet us with brass bands and parades, as they seem in the habit of doing nowadays in England, nevertheless they were very nice to us. Probably because they felt sorry for the Kid, I don't know. You see, they had a hard time convincing themselves that Lavigne was a fighter. He looked so small in his tight-fitting sack suit, and his modesty, combined with rosy cheeks and a pair of innocent blue eyes, made him look so little and harmless that they thought I was bringing over a 'ringer' and not the champion of America at all. They laughed at the idea of the Kid beating their champion. Burge was an excellent fighter and extremely popular, and it was impossible for them to conceive of a little baby-faced boy whipping him.

"Even the manager of the club, Mr. Fleming, was fearful of disappointing the crowd with such an uneven match. You see, Burge was almost a welterweight. He was five inches taller than the Kid and outweighed him ten pounds. Everyone felt sorry for Lavigne as he walked down the aisle. They all liked him and sympathized with him.

"Angle, the well known stock broker and famous sportsman, was referee. From his position outside the ring he started the boys off on their journey. Well, the Kid went after Burge like a whirlwind. He simply tore him to pieces. Burge was a mighty good fighter, too, but the relentless fury of Lavigne—the same fury of spirit that had beaten the great Joe Walcott—was more than he could stand. He was dead game, though, and in spite of the terrible body punches, he struggled on.

"In the seventeenth round Lavigne brought him down. It was plain to all that he was gone. The body blows had taken everything out of him except his courage. He surely was courageous. He got up, and again he went down. He lasted the round out, but the next saw the end. When the Kid brought him down again Referee Angle quietly called out: 'That's enough; he is finished,' while Burge was gamely trying to pull his paralyzed body up by the ropes.

"We received $2500 for our end. Burge got $1000. Quite a difference from Ritchie's end, isn't it?"

PICTURESQUE TOUR INTO OWENS RIVER COUNTRY.

J. A. Graves Gives a Charming Description of a Trip from Los Angeles to Tahoe, Going North by Way of Lone Pine and Bishop; Returning, Via Santa Barbara and the Coast.

BY J. A. GRAVES.

ON THE 11th day of last June, four of us, besides my chauffeur, left my home at Alhambra at about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, bound for Lake Tahoe by way of Owens River Valley.

We ran through Pasadena, over the high bridge, through Allendale, Glendale and Tropico to the San Fernando boulevard. This was followed to Saugus. Here we took the San Francisquito Canyon road, and after crossing the wash, turned to the right into Bouquet Canyon. We had magneto trouble, and the machine got pretty hot. After adjusting this we made good headway through the winding canyon, which is as crooked as it is beautiful. The road leaves the canyon in Leonis Valley, some five miles south of Elizabeth Lake. At 5 o'clock we were at Muns's ranch, just beyond the extreme westerly end of the lake. Here we remained all night.

At 7 o'clock next morning we were under way, and at 8:30 reached Mojave. Here we took on gasoline. It was quite warm at Mojave, but, after we got under way, the heat was not oppressive. We followed the road leading north by east, with the Southern Pacific Railroad track on our right and the aqueduct on our left. Mt. San Antonio was southwest of us, its northern slopes covered with snow glistening in the sunlight. Still farther off, to the south and west, Mt. San Bernardino, also white with snow, was in sight, and Mt. Tahquitz, a sharper peak than either of the other two, could be dimly seen, still to the south of Mt. San Bernardino. Our road was fairly good. It showed the effects of last winter's heavy rains and in spots was sandy. At Cinco Station we turned to the left through Jawbone Canyon.

Our course was now almost due north as far as Narka, when it became northwest, which was our general direction until we reached Mono Lake. In Jawbone Canyon we encountered immense steel pipes of the aqueduct. They are used as siphons over the canyons, down steep mountain sides and up still steeper ones, where a gravity-flow aqueduct could not be built. To the right of Cinco Station, out in the desert, is an immense dry lake. From the distance it looks like a lake of water, but when we got above it, and could look down upon it, it proved to be a vast, sandy depression, covered with alkaline deposits. It appeared to be a sort of catch-basin, in which the run-off from the surrounding hills gathers in the winter time, remaining there until soaked away in the sands of the desert, or evaporated by the sun's burning rays.

On our left, until we reached Jawbone Canyon, was a ridge of barren mountains. The aqueduct follows the base of these mountains. Colored rocks of many hues were laid up in great folds, one above the other, along this mountain range. Well could they be called the painted mountains. The entire country gave evidence of very heavy rainfalls. Deep gullies were made, down which torrents rushed on their way to the floor of the desert. The mountains themselves looked scoured. It appeared as though erosion had in many places removed all the soil and left only the indestructible rock masses, which were worn smooth and glistened as if artificially polished.

To our right was sagebrush desert, stretching miles and miles clear to the Cajon Pass, back of San Bernardino, and still on to Yuma. Broken ranges or buttes, barren and forbidding looking, were scattered over the desert. The sagebrush of the desert, green as alfalfa, was a great relief to the eye. Bird and animal life was almost absent. Not a quail did we see, nor did we meet with either jackrabbits or cottontail rabbits. Occasionally a dove sailed past us. Here and there a crow, a roadrunner or a bluejay were seen, but all songbirds were absent.

In Jawbone Canyon you ascend very rapidly. Then we passed over a rolling mesa, crossing the aqueduct several times, and dropped down into a canyon where Freeman's (a wayside station) is situated. A road from Kernville, by way of Walker's Pass, comes from the northeast down this canyon to Freeman's. Then we had more rolling country, more desert and more sagebrush. We passed Indian Wells, Narka and Little Lake. Far ahead of us, to the right, at the foot of the range of barren mountains, appeared a stretch of land, of which several thousand acres seemed to have been recently burned over. When we got nearer to this apparently burned mesa, we found it to be a giant mass of black lava, which had flowed in some bygone age from east to west. Its western edge terminated in a high wall, miles long, and almost straight. The whole lava mass seemed capable of defying the elements for all time to come. Great cracks appeared in the western wall, evidently made as the lava cooled. The scene here was one of weird desolation.

About this time it was high noon. We wanted to eat our luncheon, but there was no shade, and, standing still, the rays of the sun were quite hot. We discovered a cement culvert under the railroad, large enough to hold an automobile if driven into it. We had to walk up a rough wash about 100 yards to get to it. In the grateful shade of this culvert, through which a cool breeze blew, we ate our lunch.

On again we whirled, through sands and gullies, washes and sagebrush, over lava rocks, and through depressions caused by the great earthquake of 1876. After a time we came to Haiwee reservoir, which is a part of the aqueduct system. We were now between two mountain ranges, both snow-covered. We had gotten occasional glimpses of San Antonio and San Bernardino mountains through passes in the hills, both of which peaks were far in our rear. They were almost never out of sight, until snow appeared both to the right and left of us. All that day we were never out of the sight of snow. The mountains to our left, showing Olancha Peak, Mt. Langley, Mt. Whitney and various other mountains making up the range, extending from Olancha clear to Tahoe, were peculiarly beautiful. Their eastern slopes were extremely precipitous, almost as straight up and down as our mountains back of Pasadena, but they were rougher, contained greater rock masses, and, lower down at least, showed less of vegetation. The snowy peaks of all these mountains looked like the pictures we see of the Alps. Streams of water, formed by the melting snow, rushed from the base of these mountains eastward. Some of these streams are utilized by the settlers, and when the sagebrush is cleared away and water applied to the land alfalfa thrives wonderfully. Sleek-looking cattle grazed upon the unenclosed lands. We began to pass the homes of settlers and cattle raisers.

Ascending a ridge, Owens Lake, at an elevation of about 4000 feet, appeared. It was east of us, some distance from our road. It is in a sink or depression, and has no outlet. In size I should say it is about half as large as Lake Tahoe. Its waters are as blue as the ocean at Seal Rock, at the east end of Santa Catalina Island, but are as useless for stock or agricultural purposes as the sea itself. Opposite its south end is Olancha Peak; opposite its north end is Mt. Langley, both west of the lake, the length of the latter being, I should say, some fifteen miles.

Toward the middle of the afternoon we reached Lone Pine, 243 miles from Los Angeles. Sitting in the entrance of the garage there, I saw Elmer Wachtel, the artist. I hailed him, and we had a little chat. He and his wife had arrived there, the day before, on a sketching tour.

We were now in fairly well-settled country. Stock-raising is its principal industry. All the animals we saw, whether cattle, horses or mules, looked well bred and were in splendid condition. Considerable grain, wheat, barley and oats and much alfalfa is raised from this point on, until you ascend the mountains beyond Bishop. We passed through Independence, Big Pine, just this side of which is Fred Eaton's far-famed chicken ranch, at which it is said there are now 30,000 birds, and at 6 o'clock we reached Bishop, 218 miles from Muns's ranch at Elizabeth Lake, which point we left at 7 o'clock that morning. We covered this mileage without a mishap, in less than eleven hours running time. Before reaching Bishop we crossed the aqueduct for the last time. To appreciate the stupendous character of this work one must make this trip. It took nerve and brains and grit and money to construct these works over the burning sands of the desert country, and well may the greatest engineers of the world, who have inspected the work, congratulate Los Angeles upon its completion, and pay high tribute to "Bill" Mulholland, the master mind of the entire enterprise.

At Elizabeth Lake I discovered that I had left at my home my pocketbook, which contained funds necessary for the trip, barring some loose change which I had in my vest pocket. From that point I telephoned home for it, and we were compelled to remain at Bishop until 3 p.m. next day, awaiting the train from the south. Securing the pocketbook we left Bishop at 3 o'clock for Mammoth, fifty-one miles away. For ten or fifteen miles the road was good. We passed through Round Valley, one of the fertile sections of this country, and on leaving it we came to a lava mountain, over which we zigzagged and switched back, making the hardest all-around pull I ever experienced. At the summit we were 7200 feet high. We passed off of a lava mesa by a narrow road, up the left side of the Canyon Diablo, at the bottom of which Owens River runs. We emerged from the canyon into Long Valley, which sooner or later will be converted into a reservoir for the benefit of Los Angeles city. This is an immense valley, so situated that it can be made to store an incalculable amount of pure snow water.

Passing through Long Valley at 7 p.m., four hours from Bishop, we reached Mammoth, which has an elevation of 7600 feet. Here we got good hotel accommodations. We had now reached a point where we could step out of the machine into snow. The atmosphere was not uncomfortable. In the middle of the day it was even warm, and mosquitoes and gnats, which always accompany melting snow, were most annoying.

This point would have been our farthest point north on this route, but for Mr. N. G. Smith, the proprietor of the garage at Bishop, who, hearing that we wanted to go to Tallac, told me, while we were at Bishop, that if we would stay at Mammoth a day or two, he would build an automobile bridge over the Owens River at Thompson's ranch, twelve miles beyond Mammoth, so that we could go on.

We arrived at Mammoth on Saturday night, and spent Sunday and Monday fishing. Tuesday we drove over to Thompson's ranch through some splendid pine timber, and spent a part of the day with Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who were camping there. The bridge was just finished. We had lunch with them, and enjoyed trout just out of the stream, deliciously cooked over a camp fire.

Next morning we left Mammoth at 7 o'clock for Tallac. We safely crossed over Mr. Smith's bridge, bade him and his wife good-by, and began the ascent of the worst hill I have ever climbed with a machine. The grade is about two and a half miles long, very steep, and the road-bed in places over dry, mountain soil. At the summit my aneroid showed an elevation of 8200 feet.

We then descended through a country once timbered, but now desolate, all the timber having been cut for lumber. At Mono Mills we were told that Mono Lake was so high that the road was flooded, and we must make a turn to the left by what is known as the "Craters," three extinct volcanic cones, and make a detour some ten miles by Farrington's ranch. The roads here were over a heavy sort of volcanic sand, and at one place we were compelled to get into low gear even in going down hill.

We were now in a country wholly volcanic in formation. Evidences of former eruptions were on all sides of us. The craters stood in a line, running north and south. From them lava had flowed from the west to the east in great quantities. It was a dead land, without vegetation. A few scraggy pines grew here and there in a disheartened way. The whole country seemed to be heavily mineralized. Mono Lake has an elevation of 6400 feet. It is not as large as Owens Lake. There are two islands in it, on one of which somebody has drilled for oil, but without success. We could see the derrick still standing. Near the north end of the lake the road runs just above the water. The waters of the lake are beautiful to look upon, clear as [illegible] Baseball Family.

[illegible] has his own ideas about managing a ball team, and they are calculated to produce much loyalty on the part of his men.

Howard demands discipline, but he does not resort to the methods of the martinet in order to secure it.

Off the ball field he makes the players feel that they are his equals, and his associates on it.

In a game he does not hesitate to consult with Charley O'Leary, "Nig" Clarke, "Lefty" Leifield and other experienced players over the advisability of such and such a move in a critical situation. Especially, does he value their advice regarding the removal of a pitcher from the box, reserving for himself, of course, the final decision.

Baseball as a sport is an ideal which he continues to cherish, and he does not believe that the methods of the "slave-driver" or the "straw boss" have any place in sports.

When one of his pitchers has worked a full game, he not only gives him permission to stay away from the park the following day, but advises him to keep away and try to forget baseball.

"Possibly the fans are puzzled sometimes to see me consult with my players during a game," said Howard. "The truth is that I don't want [illegible] club whose advice I couldn't value. Sometimes I am guided by their judgment; at other times I figure that they are dead wrong and act accordingly.

"But you never lose anything by listening to what the other fellow has to say.

"It is true that some men have to be driven, but as a rule it is fair treatment, and an evidence of some concern in his wellfare, that brings out the best which is in a player.

"When one of my pitchers has worked, I figure that he is entitled to a day off. Not only does he appreciate this, but it will result in his doing better work, taking the season through. Let him get away from the park, and forget baseball. A little recreation tends to prevent track soreness."

It must be admitted that Howard has a very contented baseball family. Those who doubt it should drop into the hotel lobby some evening when the big leader is the centerpiece of a fanning bee.

Powell Passed Up Fortune.

Had Jack Powell's financial headlight been as bright as his hindsight he would today be wallowing in wealth up this belt buckle.

Ten years ago Jack had a chance to buy the Newark franchise, then in the Eastern League, for a measley $5500. By adding $11,000 to this he could have acquired the ball park also.

Now that they have tunneled under the noble Hudson River, bringing New York into close contact with Newark, the latter has developed into one of the most valuable minor league properties in the country.

Powell, in fact, believes that it is about the only city in proposed third major league which would stand the strain of big-league expenses.

"And to think that I could have had all that for a song or a warble," mused the big veteran, who has just drawn the first "blue envelope" of his career.

MISS ROLLINS IS TOURNEY WINNER.

The first of a series of tennis tournaments planned by the Zeta Beta Psi Sorority was held Thursday and Friday on the courts of the Hotel Leighton. There were seventeen entries. In the semi-finals, Miss Vanderberg defeated Miss Margaret Erdt and Miss Rollins defeated Miss Heber. Miss Rollins finally captured the much-sought-for cup offered by the sorority by defeating Miss Vanderberg, 6-3, 6-1.

Miss Crane entertained the members at a very pretty tennis dinner at the hotel, after which informal dancing was enjoyed by the girls.

Only One Hit.

ness and a hitless game. But with the crowd up on the balls of its feet in a high state of expectancy and holding its breath as breath has hardly ever been held before, Schaller smacked the next ball into right for a clean double, and 7000 people fell back in a dead faint. Howard scored, and Mr. Schaller, reaching second, kicked up his heels and made faces at Harkness. "Speck," just to prove that he didn't care, turned up his nose at "Biff." He then threw Downs out at first on a grounder, and walked from the field with his nose still in the air. "Speck" was justified in elevating his nose, for not only was it his first win of the season, but a humdinger in the bargain.

A juggle and wild throw by Downs, Leard's single and Kane's sacrifice sent Harkness around with a Venice run in the third.

With Elliott and Leard embellishing first and third bases respectively in the fifth, Kane clouted a long fly into left, the same landing on the line and bouncing therefrom into the bleachers for a home run.

There seemed to be quite a division of opinion as to whether the ball hit the line or missed it by an inch or so. Schaller even went to the trouble of coming clear in from the fence to talk over the matter with Hayes. But as "Biff" neglected to bring left field in with him to support his contention, and show where the ball struck, he was overruled.

FIRST GAME.

The crowd had great sport watching Messrs. White and Fanning work. Both were keyed up to a high pitch, and this made scoring very difficult. San Francisco broke through the Venice barrier for one run in the sixth. Fitzgerald sent the ball into deep center. Kane's desperate effort to catch the same cut it down to a double. O'Leary flied to left. Schaller mauled a single into right, and Fitzgerald was off from second to the plate. Bayless charged in on the ball and heaved it home in a gay and festive manner. Fitzgerald crashed into Bliss, bending Jack's stalwart neck back until his cerebellum rested against his shoulder blades. Not only did Bliss get his man, but he squeezed the ball. And then, while stretched on his back helpless, and half- unconscious, he instinctively tossed the ball to White so as to keep Schaller from going beyond second. After kind hands had again placed Jack in a squatting posture behind the bat, Downs scored Schaller with a drive that almost tore Litschi's celebrated right hand from its fastenings.

Venice tied the count in the seventh on Meloan's fielder's choice, Borton's sacrifice and a hit by McArdle.

The Tigers then followed their recently-acquired habit of losing in the ninth inning. Charles tripled in the final frame and came right home with the deciding tally on Corhan's single.

The Tigers are facing today's toil with grim determination, they needing both games to tie the series.

VAN COURT DISCUSSES CARPENTIER-SMITH FIGHT.

He Commends English Referees for Strictly Enforcing the Rules—The Game Has Become Rough and Slip-shod in This Country—Gunboat Smith Received a Good Lesson.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

THE Gunboat Smith-Georges Carpentier contest has brought out so many different angles that there will be room for plenty of argument for some time to come.

Smith lost the contest on a foul when he was apparently winning, if we can rely upon the reports sent over.

Smith admits that he hit Carpentier an unintentional blow when he was down. This is enough, and Eugene Corri was justified in disqualifying him. Delivering foul blows, whether intentional or accidental, should decide a contest instantly they are committed.

Smith was the champion and he should not have lost his head as he says he did. He has been fighting long enough to know the rules and the penalty of breaking them and, if he does not, he alone is to blame.

The fighters of today are in the same bad rut the baseball players were years ago, when a ball player could stand up and abuse an umpire. When fined they would often curse the ump and tell him in very forcible language to go to Hades, as his manager would pay the fine, anyway. Neither was there such a thing as sending a player to the bench, clubhouse or putting him out of the game.

These things went along until the game became more of a rough-house affair than a scientific ball game. The managers finally got together and formed a set of rules and today the champion baseball players respect the umpire.

There is an old saying, "When in Rome do as Rome does."

This applies to Gunboat Smith and any and all other American boxers who go to England or France to box.

In that country they have a habit of enforcing the rules to the letter.

Smith and his manager, Jim Buckley, surely knew this and should have gone prepared to follow their way of ruling.

When the English and French boxers come to this country, they follow our way of interpreting the rules and make no complaint.

We Americans alone are to blame. The boxing rules have been tumbled about, turned over so much, that there are few boxers and referees that really know what is what. It is a typical announcement in our clubs to hear an announcer say, "They will box under the straight Marquis of Queensberry rules, protect themselves in the breaks, hit with one arm free and break at the order of the referee."

Let us try and analyze this announcement. First, there never was such a set of rules for boxing as straight Marquis of Queensberry rules. It was always just plain Marquis of Queensberry rules.

Secondly, there is no such thing as protect yourself in the breaks, for the very reason there you are not allowed to hit as long as you are holding.

Holding and clinching is just as foul as hitting below the belt under the strict interpretation of the boxing rules. The man who holds or clinches should also be disqualified without any warning whatever.

Hitting with one arm free comes under the same head. That means you are allowed to hold with one hand and hit with the other and, as I said before, holding is foul. Such an agreement permits fouling without being disqualified.

Smith was warned several times for hitting in the clinches.

These things came about through our American boxers, promoters and referees. It would hardly be possible to find a referee in America that would have the nerve or backbone to enforce these rules as they were first intended. Many of our swell-headed champions have insisted on boxing under their own rules to a certain extent and the promoters have been foolish enough to allow them to get away with it.

If Gunboat had been accustomed to box under the rules, he would never have lost his head and committed the foul he did.

Never since John L. Sullivan's time has a boxer in this country walked to his corner when he knocked his opponent down.

The rule is very plain on this point, reading, "When a man is knocked down the boxer on his feet must walk to his corner and stay there until the fallen man is on his feet." In other words, the rule is meant to give the fallen man a fair and square chance to arise and proceed with the contest unless counted out.

After Sullivan's time, many of the boxers would only walk a short distance after putting an opponent down. This distance was from time to time cut shorter, until it is a common sight to see a referee holding the man on his feet away with one arm to prevent a foul, and counting over the fallen man with the other.

The referee has no business to hold any man from committing a foul, or place his hands on either boxer at any time during a contest.

The proper thing to do is to allow a boxer to hit another when he is down or allow him to kick him in the face if he chose to do so, then immediately disqualify him, and this dirty and cowardly practice would soon cease.

If Smith had been accustomed to walk to his corner and stay there until a fallen man was on his feet he would undoubtedly have this in mind and it is quite probable that he never would have hit Carpentier when he was down.

The question has arisen over this rule, many contending that if a boxer is knocked down in the corner of the man on his feet, it is not necessary for him to move away. That never was the intention of the rule. He should, in that case, walk to the next nearest corner, and, better still, to the furthest away. In the old days it was a rare thing for one boxer to be disqualified for fouling. But within the past two years we have had two champions disqualified for breaking the rules.

Jim Buckley and Smith no doubt received a good lesson in the enforcement of the rules and should profit by it. Buckley also made a howl after the contest to the directors of the club when he received Smith's share of the money, claiming that the referee's decision was wrong. He was very forcibly, but politely told that in England the referee's decision went, and it was not the custom of that country to question it. Another lesson of fair play for Jim.

The time-keeper claimed that Smith was down over ten seconds when he was knocked down by Carpentier and should have lost the contest then and there. But Corri, in admitting the truth of the time-keeper's statement, came back with his side of it. Smith insisted that the referee should count the seconds, the same as is done in most every club in this country except in Jimmie Coffroth's club in San Francisco.

Corri claimed he did the best he could to count the seconds without a watch in his hand.

This again was Smith's fault, still a lucky one for him at the time.

The rules say, "Under no circumstances shall a referee act as both referee and time-keeper."

To convince any doubting Thomas of the unfairness of this, just get a stop watch, count ten without looking at the watch, and see how near you hit it correctly. If you do once in a dozen times you are lucky.

It is a common occurence to see a referee count many seconds over ten.

Some again contend that Carpentier should have lost the contest when his manager entered the ring. I do not agree with them, as Smith had already committed the foul before he entered, and instantly Smith hit him when he was down, he lost no matter what happened after.

While it is strictly against the rule for a second or manager, backer or any one connected with either boxer from his corner to enter the ring, in this particular case he entered after the foul was committed and had no bearing on the rule.

While the contest was a decided disappointment to the Americans, and from the accounts, Smith would have probably won, it is another boost for boxing. Inasmuch as it will open the eyes of many of our referees, fighters and promoters to the fact that we are a long way behind in enforcing the rules, and until a very decided step is taken in this country boxing will continue to go from bad to worse.

CINCINNATI, July 18.—Boston's opportune hitting, coupled with Cincinnati errors, gave them an easy victory today, 6 to 3. Rudolph pitched excellent ball and was in no serious danger throughout the contest. On the other hand, Ames, who started for Cincinnati, was hit hard and was retired in facor of Lear. Score:

PIRATES AND THE GIANTS DIVIDE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PITTSBURGH, July 18.—New York and Pittsburgh divided a double-header today. The Pirates took the first game, 3 to 0, and New York won the second, which went ten innings, 6 to 5. The local team played desperately to keep from sliding into last place. When it won the first game it was the first time this season that Pittsburgh was victor in a double-header.

Harmon was master of the situation in the first game. Fletcher and Merkle were the only Giants able to hit his offering. Score:

Of other cars we can say nothing.
Of the Hupmobile we say you can expect, and will get, certain definite qualifications that have made Hup popularity the big thing it is.
One of these is lower running costs.
Another is continuous service and longer life.
A third is practically no repair costs.
Another is lower depreciation and higher second-hand cash value.

Ask Any Hupmobilist

These are established facts.
Every Hup owner knows them as such.
That is why the average Hup owner does not change.
He disposes of one Hup to buy another, because he will not abandon a certainty for an experiment that may prove costly.
Ask any Hup owner.
They are all willing to talk about their cars, and to confirm directly all the good you have heard of the Hup.
If you don't know an owner, talk to the Hup dealer.

GRIFFIN CLAY COURT CHAMP.

Terrific Battle With Elia Fottrell.

Wonderful Placing Exhausts the Loser.

Mary Browne Also Annexes a Championship.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CINCINNATI, July 18.—Clarence J. Griffin of San Francisco won today the clay court championship tennis title from Elia Fottrell, also of San Francisco, but it was by the closest possible margin. The match went five sets, three of which were hard-fought and in which one of the prettiest exhibitions of tennis skill ever seen here was shown. Endurance proved the victor in the match. For a long time Fottrell was within a single point of annexing the honor. The scores were: 3-6, 6-8, 3-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Fottrell had his man at his mercy during the first set. The steady, careful game for which Griffin is noted proved successful in the long run, however, for after the first set, the points began to grow on the side of Griffin. While he lost the second set by a close margin, his steady drives along the line began to tell on the fast-tiring Fottrell in the third.

It was here that the climax of a remarkable situation was reached. Fottrell annexed the first three games in this set after all of them had gone to deuce several times. Griffin's wonderful placing then began to tell, for he took the fourth and fifth games rather handily. Fottrell gathered in the sixth and Griffin came back strong, winning the seventh and eighth and making the score four all. Fottrell took the ninth and Griffin the tenth.

Then Fottrell took the eleventh and the first three points in the twelfth, thereby being within one point of the championship. Here Griffin rallied, deuced the game and then won it, making the games 6-6 on the set.

Fottrell had been noticed to falter. His drives lacked the force that had characterized them during the earlier games and after two more hard-fought games, Griffin won his first set.

By this time Fottrell was in a state of almost complete exhaustion, and it required a ten-minute rest before he was able to resume play. When he did his efforts were almost pitiful.

What had heretofore been drives developed into short chops and his returns were of the weakest. Griffin, gaining confidence at every stroke, ran out the set, 6-0, allowing Fottrell only a few scattered points.

In the fifth and final set Griffin took the first three games easily, but Fottrell braced, getting back to something like his old form and by tremendous effort won the fourth and fifth games. This used up all of his reserve endurance, and the remainder of the match was easy for Griffin, he winning the next three games with Fottrell scoring only a point in each game.

Miss Mary Browne of Los Angeles likewise had quite a struggle in winning the ladies' championship. She defeated her sister, Mrs. R. H. Williams of Chicago, but it required two out of three sets. Mrs. Williams only succeeded in winning the second game of the first set, but in the second set the Chicago woman brought the audience to its feet by taking the first five games from the champion. Miss Browne then won the sixth, seventh and eighth, but Mrs. Williams, by sheer pluck and a good service, won the ninth game and the set. Miss Browne took no more chances and ran out the third and deciding set by a score of six games to two.

Miss Browne and her sister, Mrs. Williams, also won the ladies' doubles, defeating Miss Mary Lyons of Louisville and Miss Marjorie Dodd of Cincinnati.

It had been previously announced that John Strachan, the title holder in men's singles, would not defend his title and the championship round will not be played.

The terrific play in the men's singles completely wore out both participants to such an extent that Claude Wayne and Nat Browne, both of Los Angeles, had rather an easy time defeating Griffin and Fottrell in the final round in men's doubles. At no time during the contest were the San Francisco boys dangerous and at no time did they show any of the tennis skill of which it is known they were capable.

Score, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

Got the Habit.

BEAVERS AGAIN WALLOP ANGELS—SCORE 8 TO 5.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 18.—Might as well keep those headlines, "Portland Wins Again," standing. Walt McCredie's Beavers continued their remarkable winning streak today by drubbing Los Angeles for the fifth consecutive time. The score was 8 to 5 and it was as weird an affair as any crowd of 4800 fans had witnessed in many moons.

Portland made enough hits off Charley Chech to win almost any ball game, but the Angels weren't content with that. The entire team seemed to have a sunstroke. There are no more errors left in the world. Once there were quite a lot of them, but yesterday the Dillonites threw eight bonafides overboard and a couple of "bones."

And so there are no more errors left in the world.

ROY AN ANGEL.

Even staunch old Roy Brashear tried his hand at booting them for the visitors. Who? Roy Brashear. Oh, we had forgotten to explain that Brash, released by Portland on Friday, was quite promptly signed by the Angels, and he was out there stomach and all, yesterday, holding down the second sack for the enemy. Moore is hors du slaughter with a felon on his hand and Gedeon switched over to shortstop.

But to return to the attack. The Beavers made eleven hits off the veteran, Charley Chech, in seven innings and then his light went out under an avalanche of runs. A blow by Capt. Bill Rodgers added the final touch of melancholy in the seventh when Bill poked the ball over the right-field fence for a home run, scoring Derrick ahead of him.

POOR OLD CHECH.

Chech added two walks and his team-mates threw in four errors for seasoning in the one stanza, so no wonder Chech threw his hands in the air and ducked for the shower bath.

Hiram West found the heat too terrific to bear after seven and one-third innings before the bake-oven and Hiram yanked himself midway in the eighth when he felt himself slipping.

The score at the end of the seventh stood 8 to 1 in Portland's favor, but with only one out in the eighth the Angels had scored two runs on a couple of walks and three hits and Hiram was wise in quitting.

The huge crowd cheered him roundly as he left the field and Rieger ascended the mound, for not only had the collegian toiled gamely under the burning sun, but also he had contributed a hit scoring two runs in the second inning after Chech had walked Fisher deliberately and filled the bases to get at West.

RIEGER IS EASY.

Rieger pitched one and two-thirds innings and presented the Angels with a couple of runs. Presented is the word, for the game was turned into a farce in the ninth. Brenegan, substitute catcher, let Metzger steal second and third without so much as throwing to the bases.

It was no joke to Harry Meek. The big Angel backstop relieved Brooks in the eighth and as his batting record isn't any too plump to date, Harry proceeded to fatten up with two pinch singles, driving in as many runs.

Dillon tried some unique strategy in the eighth in the way of a dose of brotherly Love, that's his name, Love, Slim Love, nearly seven feet of him, second cousin to a six-ounce fishing rod. Love furnished a heap of amusement to the crowd but no runs.

Dutch Metzger of the Angels broke his week's record of idleness in the initial inning when he caught Doane's liner and doubled Rodgers out by stepping on third. The score:

made on Thursday's race. Aeolus was given a ridiculous allowance of sixty-six minutes in the arbitrary handicap of the same race and carried off the cup put up by ex-Commodore Sinclair. Gretchen captured the second prize by beating Vite by six minutes on her arbitrary allowance, Rear-Commodore Weston taking the third prize cup. The South Coast sailors are glad to have the visitors take home the cups, but believe the regatta committee was playing a huge joke in giving Aeolus a full hour over her usual universal rule allowance.

All in all it was a pretty race and some fine sailing was witnessed by the crowd that followed up the coast in the fast cruiser Amanda in command of Capt. Cox of San Diego.

Aeolus led the pack of eight racers across the line at 1:00:10, Wasp following at 1:00:12, Alert, 1:00:17; Columbine, 1:00:18; La Jolla, 1:00:40; Vite, 1:01:05; Gretchen, 1:01:30, and Mischief, 1:02:50.

Columbine immediately took the lead and maintained it throughout the race. In the long series of short tacks along the kelp up the coast Aeolus and Alert had a merry scrap to maintain second position. The San Diego racer maintained her lead nearly to Portuguese bend, when Alert crossed her bows. In a long inshore tack Aeolus again took the lead, but Capt. Logan was not to be forced to third place and by clever seamanship and good luck again turned the tables on Wyatt, rounding the windward mark nearly a minute to the good.

Columbine had made the Vincente mark at 3:20:50, nearly nine minutes ahead of Alert, at 3:29:37, and some good Logan money was seen to "go a-glimmering." Aeolus took the mark at 3:30:33.

Commodore Hubbell had in the meantime been sailing a consistent race, making up for his bad start. He had repeatedly brushed with the smaller boats as he made his way to fourth position. Vite had overhauled Wasp above Point Firmin, while Gretchen, the last of the larger boats, seeming to sail better before her reef was broken out at Point Firmin. La Jolla, the tiny racer, was well astern. The time of the bunch of four at the windward mark, was: Mischief, 3:38:24; Vite, 3:40, Wasp, 3:43:25, and Gretchen, 3:45:55.

The wind had lightened by this time and the skippers were glad of the free run down the wind with both spinnakers and balloners drawing. A heavy fog blowing in from the sea nearl obliterated the racers from the view of the racing fans on the judges' boat.

Columbine finished at 4:44:15, Aeolus, again passing Alert, finished at 4:56:40, while Logan, the winner, finished at 4:58:50. Mischief, at 5:04:40, was but a minute ahead of Vite, while Gretchen, at 5:12:04, was but 38 seconds ahead of Wasp. La Jolla finished at 5:50.

Following a banquet last evening to the visiting yachtsmen, the cups won in the three-days' regatta were presented. A ball topped off the evening.

HISTORY OF THE TIMES CUP.

The trophy has been raced for annually for eleven successive times, having originally been won by the sloop Venus, in 1903. Seven races were held and the local boats always put up so good a defense that neither the Santa Barbara, San Diego or other competing clubs were able to get a look in.

Mischief was winner in 1904, then Venus again in 1905. Byron Erkenbrecher's Detroit carried off the cup in 1906, and then Walter Folsom won the race for two years. In 1909 the Wasp saved the cup by just six seconds, the Gretchen of San Diego proving a close competitor. In the race the next year the Gretchen, sailed by Capt. Ernest Shield, her owner, was victorious, and the cup went to the San Diego Yacht Club, and here it has stayed for three years, the Gretchen successfully defending it against all comers.

M'Loughlin and Bundy.

either McLoughlin or Bundy, who made many nets and outs.

By a tremendous effort the champions managed to catch Behr and Pell at five all. Bundy teased Behr into trying his smashes by lobs that fell short at the net. To the end of the set it was a bitter battle with fierce rallies. In the twentieth game, Behr and Pell were twice within a point of winning, when McLoughlin forced his smashes and carried the set at 12-10.

In the second set Behr encroached on Pell's territory and there were frequent mix-ups. After losing this set, Behr and Pell settled down to better team work. When the pairs reached the stage of two sets all, the crowd was feverish with excitement. Behr was playing well and his volleying was constantly scorching straight down the center of the opposing court. McLoughlin and Bundy got a lead of 4-2 in the fifth set, when Behr and Pell threatened to sweep the champions off their feet. Behr's drives had McLoughlin on the defensive and when the score fell level at five all, McLoughlin lifted his game and smashed out the victory.

RECEIVED STUDEBAKER JUL 9 1914

July 7, 1914.

The Studebaker Corporation,
Advertising Department,
Detroit, Michigan.

Gentlemen:

In response to your request for an expression regarding the STUDEBAKER SIX which I purchased April last, beg to advise that I have worn out four other autos during the last eight years and enjoyed myself every minute while doing so. With one exception these were high priced and heavier cars.

I have now had about 3,000 miles out of the STUDEBAKER SIX without experiencing a bit of trouble of any kind. I can think of nothing to say that more nearly expresses my sentiments than that it is the biggest satisfaction for the least money I have ever experienced, and that you deserve to be congratulated upon the production of such a car at the price.

Sincerely yours,
O. W. Hucey

Studebaker Quality has its inception in the honesty of purpose upon which all Studebaker Manufacturing Practice is based.

And the unequaled value of this Studebaker SIX, together with the intense loyalty and satisfaction of the men who buy and drive Studebaker cars, is simply the natural reflection of Studebaker manufacturing methods.

Studebaker SIX quality, economy and roadability cannot be produced by any means other than Studebaker laboratory tests, Studebaker heat-treatment of vital parts, Studebaker scientific engineering and Studebaker manufacturing accuracy and magnitude.

The same methods also give this SIX its perfect balance and alignment of parts, its light weight and great strength, and its extreme riding comfort.

How well Studebaker manufacturing and its results are appreciated is shown by these brief paragraphs from owners' letters:

I am thoroughly satisfied.

The Adventure With the Fairy Lanterns. By John Gruelle.

[illegible] evening Dickie and Mr. Twee Deedle were watching what Dickie supposed to be fireflies flitting among the branches of the trees. "Oh, they are not lightning bugs!" Mr. Twee Deedle told Dickie.

2—Mr. Twee Deedle whistled softly and the little lights drew nearer, and Dickie saw flying toward him many little elves carrying tiny latterns.

3—"These are the little elf watchmen," said Mr. Twee Deedle as he gave Dickie a lantern and the two joined the elves in their flight.

4—As the band were flying over the woods they heard some one crying softly and soon found that the sobs came out of a hole in an old log.

[illegible] are you crying?" Mr. Twee Deedle asked as a little fairy lady stood up in the hole in the stump. "Two bad imps stole my jewel box and my wishing ring!"

6—Well, it did not take the elf watchmen long to find out just where the bad imps were hiding, so with the little fairy lady the whole band flew to the spot and found the imps gloating over the magic ring and trying to think of something to wish for.

7—Dickie caught both of the culprits in his hand and the little lady with a joyful cry picked up her magic ring and her jewel box. Every one was glad that the two imps had been captured and the little lady's ring restored to her.

8—"These little imps," Mr. Twee Deedle exclaimed as he made a magic pass, "have never worked in their lives. So for two years they must take the form of ants and help those busy little creatures, for when a person has work to do he will have no time for mischief."

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

GRACE IN GRANTING AND RECEIVING.

"IF it's more blessed to give than to receive I wish people wouldn't be so ungracious about doing favors."

This remark, discharged with a rather vicious emphasis, was made to me not long ago by a high spirited young woman of my acquaintance. She went on to explain herself.

"I telephoned to a friend to ask her if she could do an errand for me while she was downtown today, since I have work that will keep me busy at home. I knew she was going anyway and the errand was a perfectly simple affair that didn't call for any trouble in choosing. Perhaps she didn't mean to be hateful, but she hesitated and wasn't sure if she were going near that particular shop, and wasn't positive that she knew just what I wanted and had so much to do for herself that she was afraid she might not have time, and so many other things that I felt as if I had asked her to go to the greatest amount of trouble. Then when I stiffened up a little and said I was sorry I had bothered her and I'd get along without the thing until I could go after it myself, she seemed quite hurt and said she would be delighted to do it."

"Perhaps that's just her way," I said.

"Well, if it is, it's a disagreeable way. I hate to be made to feel under such obligations to any one."

She went off and left me considering her remarks and her rather contradictory conclusion. I understood perfectly her attitude towards the friend she had asked to oblige her. The proverb: "He who reminds me of a favor cancels it," is one I always have comprehended. When I ask any one to do anything for me and the boon is granted reluctantly or with even a little hesitation I am made uncomfortable. But is it quite fair to dislike to be under obligations to those whom we love?

Why We Protest.

Obligations from others may be harder to bear. When an acquaintance or a casual friend does me a good turn with a manner that hints that she has put me in her debt I may wince. If I am fully aware that the person who grants the kindness considers it an effort and a nuisance it is natural that I should dislike it. But what is the quality in human nature which makes us shrink from accepting friendly or loving offices without a protest?

I put this question to some one else and she was prompt with an explanation.

"If you offer to do something for some one and he protests against it, he does it so that he may feel relieved from that very sense of obligation."

And as I uttered a word of contradiction, she went on decidedly:

"I have figured it all out and that is exactly what it means. Suppose you come and offer to do something for me, if it's nothing more than to go an errand, or write a letter, or carry a parcel, or something which spares me trouble and costs you an effort. I declare that you must not give yourself the bother, that I can do it myself; you urge me to let you do it and finally I consent. I have forced you to beg my permission and when I have granted this I have the sense of having yielded to you, not because I wanted to do it, but because you insisted. See the position? I have let you do me the good turn because I saw you would be hurt and unhappy if I didn't, so it is I who have done the favor after all, not you. Therefore, I am free from obligation."

Do you suppose this is really the case? I think it would be interesting to know the position of some of our Cornerites on the favor question.

Two Ways of Granting Favors.

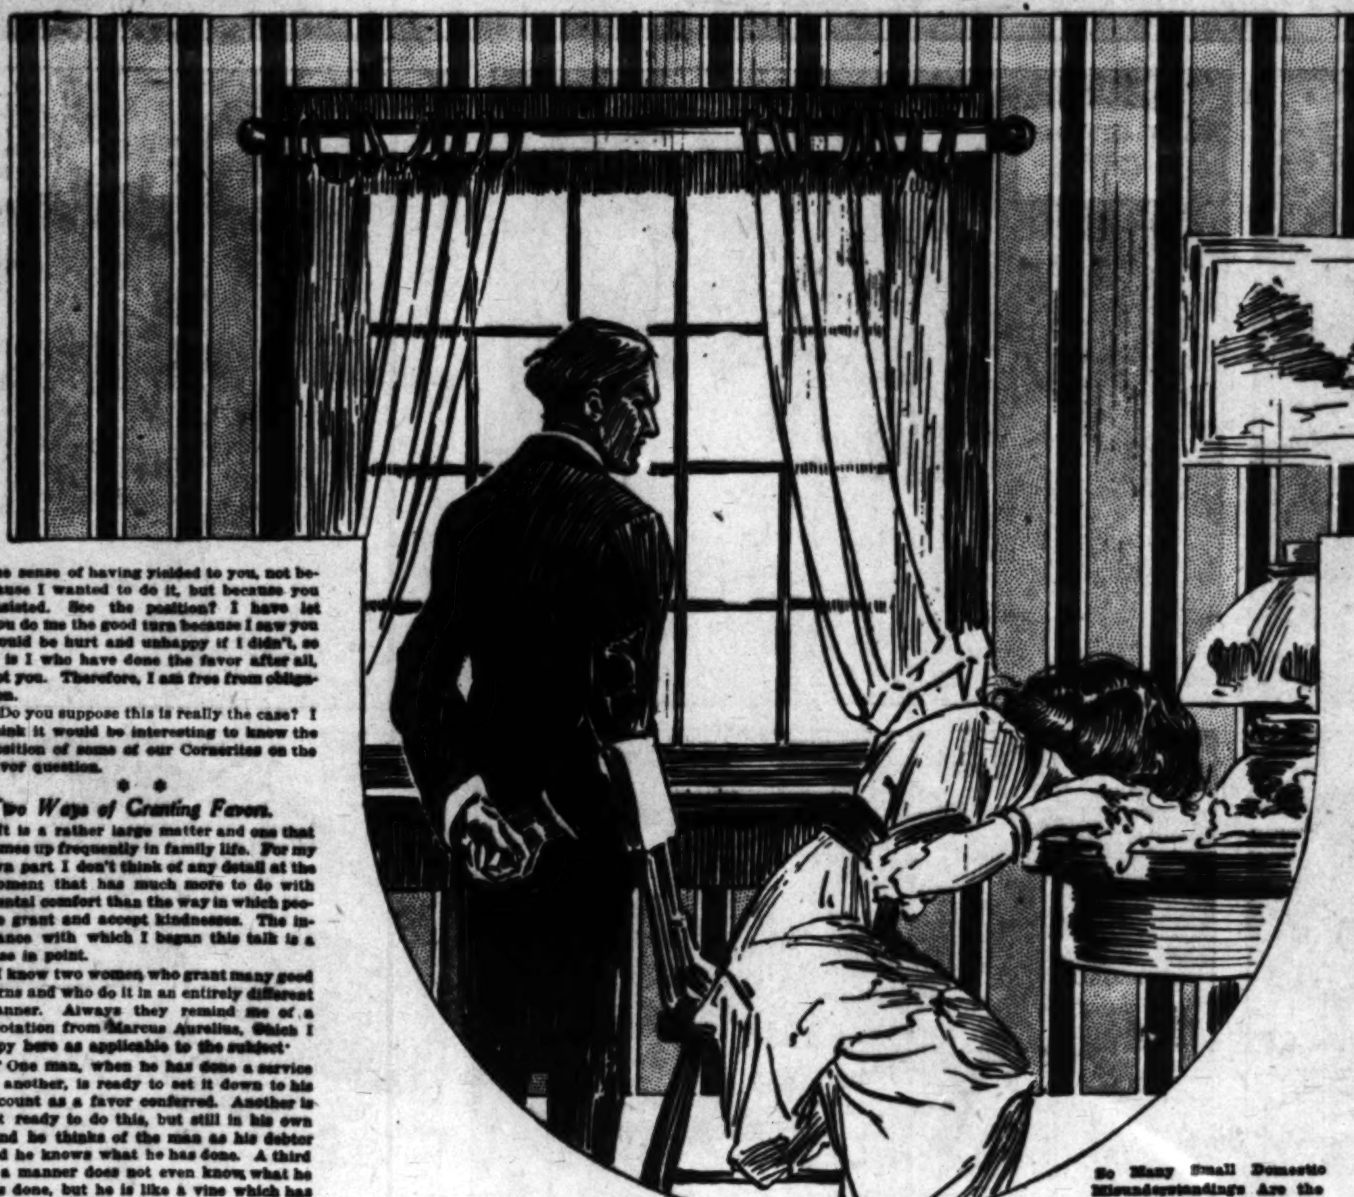
It is a rather large matter and one that comes up frequently in family life. For my own part I don't think of any detail at the moment that has much more to do with mental comfort than the way in which people grant and accept kindnesses. The instance with which I began this talk is a case in point.

I know two women who grant many good turns and who do it in an entirely different manner. Always they remind me of a quotation from Marcus Aurelius, which I copy here as applicable to the subject:

"One man, when he has done a service to another, is ready to set it down to his account as a favor conferred. Another is not ready to do this, but still in his own mind he thinks of the man as his debtor and he knows what he has done. A third in a manner does not even know what he has done, but he is like a vine which has produced grapes, and seeks for nothing more after it has once produced its proper fruit. He goes on to another act as a vine goes on to produce again the grapes in season."

These two women seem to me to belong to the second and third class. Both are free and ready in their offers of help and in their kindly offices. For a long time I felt that I could turn to either without feeling a painful sense of obligation, but after a while I began to notice a habit of speech of the first one.

"Of course I was glad to go shopping with her, or to read aloud to her, or to do an errand for her, or to mend a glove for her, or whatever the office might be, but I had to give up going to the concert to make up for the time I had spent." Or it might be that she was forced to sit up late to finish delayed work, or to forego some pleasure of her own for the same reason. After I had heard her make remarks of this kind a number of times I came to the conclusion that she was thinking in her own mind that she had made the friend she had served her debtor, like the man of the second class named by Marcus Aurelius. Will the rest of you understand me if I say that after that it always made me uncomfortable to have her do me a favor? Was I ungracious that I felt I would rather do things for myself or go without than have her put my name down on her mental debit and credit list?



So Many Small Domestic Misunderstandings Are the Result of Lack of Thought.

The other woman absolutely fulfilled the description of the third class. Always doing good turns for some one, she took it as a matter of course and I do not think that even to herself did she figure out that she was putting a friend under obligations by taking trouble, giving her own time and efforts and even denying herself rest and enjoyment.

Method in Ungraciousness.

There is not the least question in the world which woman is the more agreeable to associate with, to have as a housemate and a familiar friend. At the same time I do not think that the first woman grudged her kindly acts or was unwilling to be of service. It was only that her habit of mind and of action moved her to weigh her favors against her own personal convenience or comfort and to appreciate what they cost her. Yet none of us would care to feel that our friends counted up their good turns for us.

Sometimes I am quite persuaded that there is method in the ungraciousness of certain persons who have the chance to grant favors. I recollect a young man I once knew who was so surly and cross-grained when asked to do an errand by any member of his family that he entirely escaped any efforts of this sort. The rest of the household would run their feet off when tired or go without the things they needed sooner than request the cub of the household to do a commission. His demeanor had won him immunity from service for others. But who would wish to purchase immunity at such a price?

Another lad I know has the happy knack of making the persons he obliges feel that they have put him in their debt. Apparently he is the favored one when he has the chance to [illegible] to discharge an [illegible] some one else [illegible] that he has a good deal [illegible] the ungracious boy [illegible] feel that the [illegible]

For, after all, we don't ask [illegible] the mere pleasure of [illegible] under obligations to others. [illegible] most of us rather shrink from [illegible] and do it only because of the [illegible] feel of doing something [illegible] with the strength [illegible] would spare us. Don't we all [illegible] it is more blessed to give than to [illegible] in this as in other [illegible] would rather be the one who [illegible] comfort and ease for others than [illegible] whom the comfort and the [illegible] fied? And isn't it part of our [illegible] not to make it any harder than [illegible] for those who request kindness [illegible] Have you looked at it in just that [illegible] fore?

Result of Lack of Thought.

At the same time there is something [illegible] said on the other side. There is [illegible] ciousness about accepting [illegible] takes all the happiness out of it. [illegible] a mistake if we forget that [illegible] to give there is also a degree of [illegible] ness about receiving as well.

"I don't want you to take the [illegible] do that," I heard a friend say [illegible] who had offered to attend to a [illegible] for her.

"I don't think it's a trouble [illegible] it were it would make no [illegible] for you," was the response.

"I wanted to give him the pleasure [illegible] he protested against it so that [illegible] to beg so hard to be allowed [illegible] it took all the joy out of the [illegible] was another remark I heard [illegible] lar circumstances.

So many of these small domestic misunderstandings and hard [illegible] sult of lack of thought that [illegible] while to give a little consideration [illegible] and to see if we are not [illegible] those about us unhappy [illegible] without the least idea of it. [illegible] well ourselves how we [illegible] stop to reason that others [illegible] renders and take our [illegible] times simply on their [illegible]

"I don't mind in the [illegible] over to the [illegible]," [illegible] the other day to his mother. [illegible] no use in the world in his [illegible] off instead of [illegible] been glad to go with him."

"Then why didn't you [illegible] the mother. "When [illegible] could drive him over [illegible] go. I had [illegible] mind!' Of course [illegible] after that!"

"I didn't think!" [illegible]

Isn't that the [illegible] both in our giving and [illegible] "Evil is wrought by want of [illegible] well as by want of heart." [illegible] chance here to put the [illegible] practical operation!

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"I WOULD like to ask you and the Cornerites some questions about suitable dress for middle aged and elderly women. I might say right here that I am the woman in the case, and as I have just passed my fifty-fifth birthday I suppose I no longer have the right to speak of myself as middle aged, but may just say I am an elderly woman. In the circumstances I feel as though I ought to dress rather quietly, but I can't see any other women of my age who seem to look at it as I do. I have a friend who is several years older than I am, although she still has a lovely color and a youthful face, but her figure is dreadful. She is stout and badly shaped, and in her place I would try to dress inconspicuously. Instead of that she wears clothes which I would consider youthful for my young women daughters. The other day I met her downtown, and at first I thought Mont Blanc had come into the city! She had on a white frock and a white coat, both made of pique or something of the sort. Besides this she wore a white hat loaded with bright pink roses, and I mustn't forget to say she had on white shoes on a pair of good sized feet. I must own her hat was becoming and the white gown set off her pretty color, but I cannot think it suitable for a woman hard on 60 to dress like a girl of 16. What do you think of it? I was much interested in the letters you published about the indecent way in which women dress in these days. My friend's clothes were made modestly enough, but the point I would like to have settled is if it is the correct thing to make no difference in the dress of grandmothers and young girls. Is my friend in the right with her white frock and her giddy hat, and am I an old fogy and a back number? I'd like to have your judgment and that of some of our other sensible women, too.

"PUZZLED GRANNY."

I am afraid I am not quite the person to speak with any degree of authority on this matter, because personally I agree with "Puzzled Granny." I feel as she does that there is something inappropriate in a middle aged or elderly woman clothing herself as she did when she was hardly out of her teens. Especially is this the case when she appears in public. I like to see elderly and old women wear white or delicate colors in their homes, unless they are so large that they look absurd in doing so, but I feel strongly that when they go on the street they should dress quietly and not call attention to themselves by costumes which impress observers as incongruous and absurd. I have seen the same sort of imitation of youthfulness to which you refer. I recollect a few years ago when young girls were adopting mannish stiff collars and men's ties that a dear old lady whom I knew "broke out" in something of the sort, with no apparent perception that she succeeded in making herself ridiculous. I have figured out one cause of the eccentricity of costume you find occasionally in the line of wearing light colored frocks after one has put on a good deal of flesh. The women who were slender as girls find it hard to believe they have put on so much flesh they can no longer look well in delicate tints. I would be willing to wager something that your Mont Blanc friend was slight in her girlhood and that she has never appreciated the fact that an increase in bulk renders white garments on the street as out of place for her as is such a hat as you said she wore. I am not stating my convictions on the subject as a fact, merely as my own opinion. I would like very much the verdict of other Cornerites, and see if they think there should be a difference between the clothing worn by old people and by the young. I don't mean that the seniors should abjure dainty garments or make frumps of themselves. They can look charming in raiment suitable to their years, to my way of thinking, but I am interested to know how other women feel—the young as well as the old—on this subject.

Clothes for European Trip.

"What clothes ought I to take with me when I go abroad in August? I have never been across the water, and we plan to sail to Trieste, then cross to Venice, and go north from there into Switzerland, down the Rhine, to Paris, and home by way of England. We shall have to crowd it all into a little over two months, and I am sure, with the sightseeing I shall have to do, I won't have time or inclination to stop and fuss about clothes—though I would like to bring home a Paris hat. What ought I to take with me in the line of dresses, and shall I need a large supply of underclothing? Give me any points you can, please.

"IGNORANT."

A few years ago I traveled from Paris to Vienna, by way of Germany, and then back and across to England, with only a large straw suitcase with me after I left Paris. I had there a small steamer trunk with extras in it, but the suitcase—it was one of the double kind—held all I needed while actually traveling, for over six weeks. I have known others who did as well. While shirtwaists and skirts are sometimes troublesome to adjust, they are a convenience because they permit of freshening the costume readily. I would advise you to have a neat lightweight suit of substantial material, like a fine serge or its equivalent, several shirtwaists, preferably of soft silk, since they launder easily, and one rather dressy one piece frock which will do if you wish to make yourself dainty for the evening. Have your hat serviceable and easy on your head, since you will almost live in it, and provide at least one extra pair of shoes, besides slippers. Be sure the shoes are comfortable. For underwear I would recommend the combinations which do not require ironing, and a silk petticoat, with whatever lingerie you have very simple. It is always possible to have washing done at a hotel if you stay over a day in a place, and there is no reason why you should burden yourself with a quantity of changes. Travel as light as you can and yet keep yourself provided with enough to be comfortable and look neat and trim, and avoid anything which is not simple and unpretentious. A raincoat is a valuable possession, and you should have a suitcase umbrella, if possible. The trip should be most interesting, and I hope you will enjoy it.

Needs a Wheel.

"The ready response to the calls for help in your Corner emboldens me to ask a favor for a delicate young woman who is trying to earn something for herself and thus help reduce family expenses. She is collecting on commission for a publishing house. This requires a good deal of walking, for sometimes she is obliged to go over the same ground twice each month. She is very anxious to have a bicycle, but her commissions are not enough to warrant her in buying a wheel. I would like very much to secure one for her and would gladly pay the express charges.

MRS. E. O. F."

I trust that the young woman's want may be met and that the hard work of struggling to make a living may be rendered a little easier for one who apparently has not much physical strength with which to meet the situation.

How to Cook Rice.

"Will you please tell me how to cook rice so that the grains will stand apart? I have eaten it several times and like it very much, but I have never succeeded in cooking it in the right way. I have boiled it fast and slow, in plain water and in salted, but I never have any luck. Always the rice sticks together, although I stir it constantly. Is there any trick about getting it dry? If so I am sure you must know about it. I wish you would tell me what it is. L. K."

The only "trick" is to cook it fast, in plenty of hot water and not stir it. You spoiled it by your constant stirring, perhaps, unless there was the other fault of scanty water or of slow cookery. To boil rice wash a cup of rice clean, putting it in the colander and letting the water run over it and through it. Have ready on the stove a saucepan containing at least two quarts of boiling water. Too much water is a good fault when you are cooking rice. Add a couple of teaspoons of salt to the water and see that this is at a furious boil when you put in the rice. Keep the water at a hard boil after the rice goes in and do not stir it with a spoon. If you think there is the least risk of a few grains of the rice sticking to the bottom of the pot slip a fork in at the side of the saucepan and make sure that the rice is boiling free from the bottom. When the rice has boiled hard for fifteen minutes take out a couple of grains and pinch them to see if they are soft. If not cook the rice a few minutes longer. When the rice is soft turn the water off of it by pouring the rice into a colander; set this at the back of the stove or in the oven to dry off for a few minutes as you would potatoes; then put into a vegetable dish and send to table. These are all the "tricks" there are about cooking rice. With these directions there is no doubt that the rice will be dry and soft and the grains whole and standing apart instead of the gray, pasty mass which is frequently served under the name of boiled rice.

No Acknowledgment of Gifts.

"I wrote to Mrs. I. L., the woman in the almshouse, but have as yet had no answer. I also sent a bundle of silk pieces to another applicant whose name you gave me. I suppose they reached her safely, but I have not yet heard. A. M. G."

It does not always seem necessary to the persons who are helped to write a line of acknowledgment, although there are many who do it promptly. I wish on my own behalf to thank you for your generosity in this and in other lines and to express my appreciation of the kindness you have shown to those in need and distress.

Salads for Summer.

"I send recipes for one or two rather hearty salads which we often have in summer instead of a regular meat dish. They are good if you have a cold lunch in the middle of the day or for supper when you want something rather solid. The first one is made with sardines and you don't have to use the finest. The large ones are cheaper and answer just as well, or if you have a little cold fish in the house you can cut that up fine and use it instead. They are used for stuffing tomatoes. Collar and Cuff Set has been a turning in the tion of the needlewomen, ly helped by fashion, and embroidered blouse has to its own again. in a darker shade will make the collar appear as if it were entirely separate from the blouse. Around the collar line put a band that is of another fine material so that it can be removed and washed after the bastings are taken out. You will see that the revers of the collar are worked in the same way as the back.

The cuffs should have a band of lawn so that they can be attached to the sleeves. The work is the same as on the collar; on the side motifs again there is the same method of working.

To this design, which can be made into a separate set by omitting the motifs, can be added a frill of net or lace at the edges. Any little innovation can be made if you are clever. The demands of the dress will decide the way in which you finish the embroidered design. Let me hear from you how this succeeds. I am sure that you will like it.

A Unique Apron

WHEN making a gift apron our chief effort is to have it different from any other the recipient-to-be has received before. Of course, if she objects to card playing you won't be able to make her this particular unique apron, for it is a plain, simple little affair edged with lace and ornamented with two playing cards embroidered upon it. One of the cards may form a pocket and the other is embroidered in the opposite lower corner. A card is very easily traced upon the apron, so that you will not have to hunt in the art needlework store for the stamped material or the pattern with which to stamp it. If you want something difficult you may try the face cards, but the spot cards are very effective and not half so difficult to do. Take any card you may wish and trace it upon the material by first placing a piece of tracing paper, face downward, upon the material and then the card, face up, upon that. Hold it firmly upon the material so that it does not slip and then proceed to go about the spots of the card with a pencil or some pointed instrument that is yet sufficiently dull not to cut through the card and so spoil your tracing paper and your material. You will have to bear heavily on the card because of its thickness, so that it will trace successfully upon the material. Outline the cards in silk the color of old gold or in red, and the spots may be worked solidly in red or black, as the nature of the spot may require. Every marking on the card is traced on the apron, even to the tiny number and miniature spot in each corner. If you wish you may border the material just inside the lace edging with hearts, spades, clubs or diamonds worked from two to three inches apart. By all means put a spot on the end of each apron string, if you make the strings of the material.

If you give a card party at home and must serve the refreshments yourself, it is a pretty idea to don one of the little card aprons for the occasion.

Children at Table

OLD-FASHIONED bibs are coming in again—bibs that please baby as well as baby's mother. Sometimes they are in outline and sometimes in cross-stitch; rarely are they in a stitch more elaborate. They are worked in different colors, sometimes two colors being on one bib. Old damask towels make the nicest kind of bibs. There is always a good place in a worn-out towel, and a bib can be made of it in no time; and a little design in the form of a dog, horse, etc., or a nursery-rhyme scene can be embroidered on it almost before you can count ten. These bibs are just as much fun for baby as a picture book, if they are made properly.

Bibs are excellent and perfectly proper things for young children; but do not make the mistake of forcing a child to wear a bib when it is old enough to learn the use of a napkin. For a time the napkin may be fastened about the neck of the child, but as soon as possible he should be taught that cultured people never fasten their napkins to their collars or dresses, but allow them to lie across the knees.

Teach the children, too, never to crumple their napkins. A napkin, after being used, should be almost as immaculate as before it is unfolded, with the exception that the folds are loose while and after using. It is never too young to learn table manners.

Tidies and Boudoir Caps

IF YOU have one of the fast-disappearing garrets, or even a generous storeroom, you are sure to have things that common sense tells you should have been thrown away or given away long, long ago. But if you are soft-hearted, and if you have room to keep them, these old things that have lost their usefulness like worn-out men and women, it seems rather heartless to discard them utterly, and so they become "hangers-on."

And yet, most of them will earn their "keep" if you will but give them the opportunity. In fact, they just long to be independent and would voice, if they could, dear, dumb things, a wish to be of use to you. A lovable, sentimental woman, who seems to feel the attitude of these left-overs from another generation, goes annually to her garret to look carefully over the old things and see if there are any that might be made to "work." Just a week or so ago this sentimental one came down the garret stairs holding gently two handfuls of knitted tidies that her grandmother had made for her mother when that mother was a bride.

The daughter of the sentimental woman raised her hands in horror at sight of the poor crocheted things, thinking that they were to find their way to the backs of their modern chairs; but she was pleasantly surprised a week later to find in her room two of the prettiest boudoir caps imaginable—and completely astonished when, upon closer examination, she discovered them to be partly made of nothing more nor less than those despised tidies.

The next day, too, there was a surprise of a new centerpiece on the bright mahogany table—a centerpiece which proved to be another of the tidies, laundered and quite perky looking because of its renewed youth and usefulness.

If there had been enough tidies to go round, there would have been plate doilies as well; but about a half dozen boudoir caps and two centerpieces for the table had exhausted the supply.

The boudoir caps were made upon net. The caps were of double net, upon the center of which were appliqued with small basting stitches the antiquated tidies. A further touch of bright ribbon made the caps irresistible.

How to Transfer

PLACE a sheet of impression carbon paper between your fabric and the newspaper design, the latter on top. With a sharp pencil or a glass-pointed pen go over the outline. The design will be transferred to the material and will last until worked.

Your Blue-and-White Room

THERE are ever so many pretty ways of obtaining the color scheme in your blue-and-white room, but has it ever occurred to you to have a blue-and-white spread? You are fortunate indeed if you have one of those very old colored spreads on hand that your grandmother used in her bride days, and will need nothing handsomer for your own bed in your blue-and-white room—that is, if the spread is blue and white. Some of these old spreads are red and white, and, of course, wouldn't do in your blue-and-white room at all, at all, my dear.

It would certainly be a tremendous amount of work to ask you to go over the entire surface of a white spread and embroider it in blue, but it's just enough work for a pleasant length of time to ask you to go about the edges and embroider a border. You'll have one of the quaintest bedcovers imaginable when that border is completed; and if you're not too tired by that time, think what an addition it will be if you embroider a design of blue right in the very center—a very foxy way of telling afterward if Mary Ann has put the covers on straight.

In this hurried day even embroidery is keeping up to the times, for that beautiful work which took millions of fine, carefully laid stitches is becoming rare, and new stitches are coming in that are large and careless, and yet withal effective.

For the working of your spread it might be well to have the cotton used in two shades of delft blue. One shade will do if you do not feel sufficiently expert to use the two, though in either case the embroidery is very simple when you get started. The embroidery cotton should be very coarse to work up quickly, and will really look better than the fine cotton upon such coarse material as the spread.

In making the design you may stamp the edge of the spread with a transfer design and work according to that, or you may select some design in the spread itself and work over it. The design will very likely be raised, and if you work over it the design itself will act as a padding. There are ever so many large effective stitches that you might use, among them the lazy-daisy stitch, the tapestry stitch, the thousand-flower stitch, the solid satin stitch (which doesn't take long to do if worked in coarse thread) and several others.

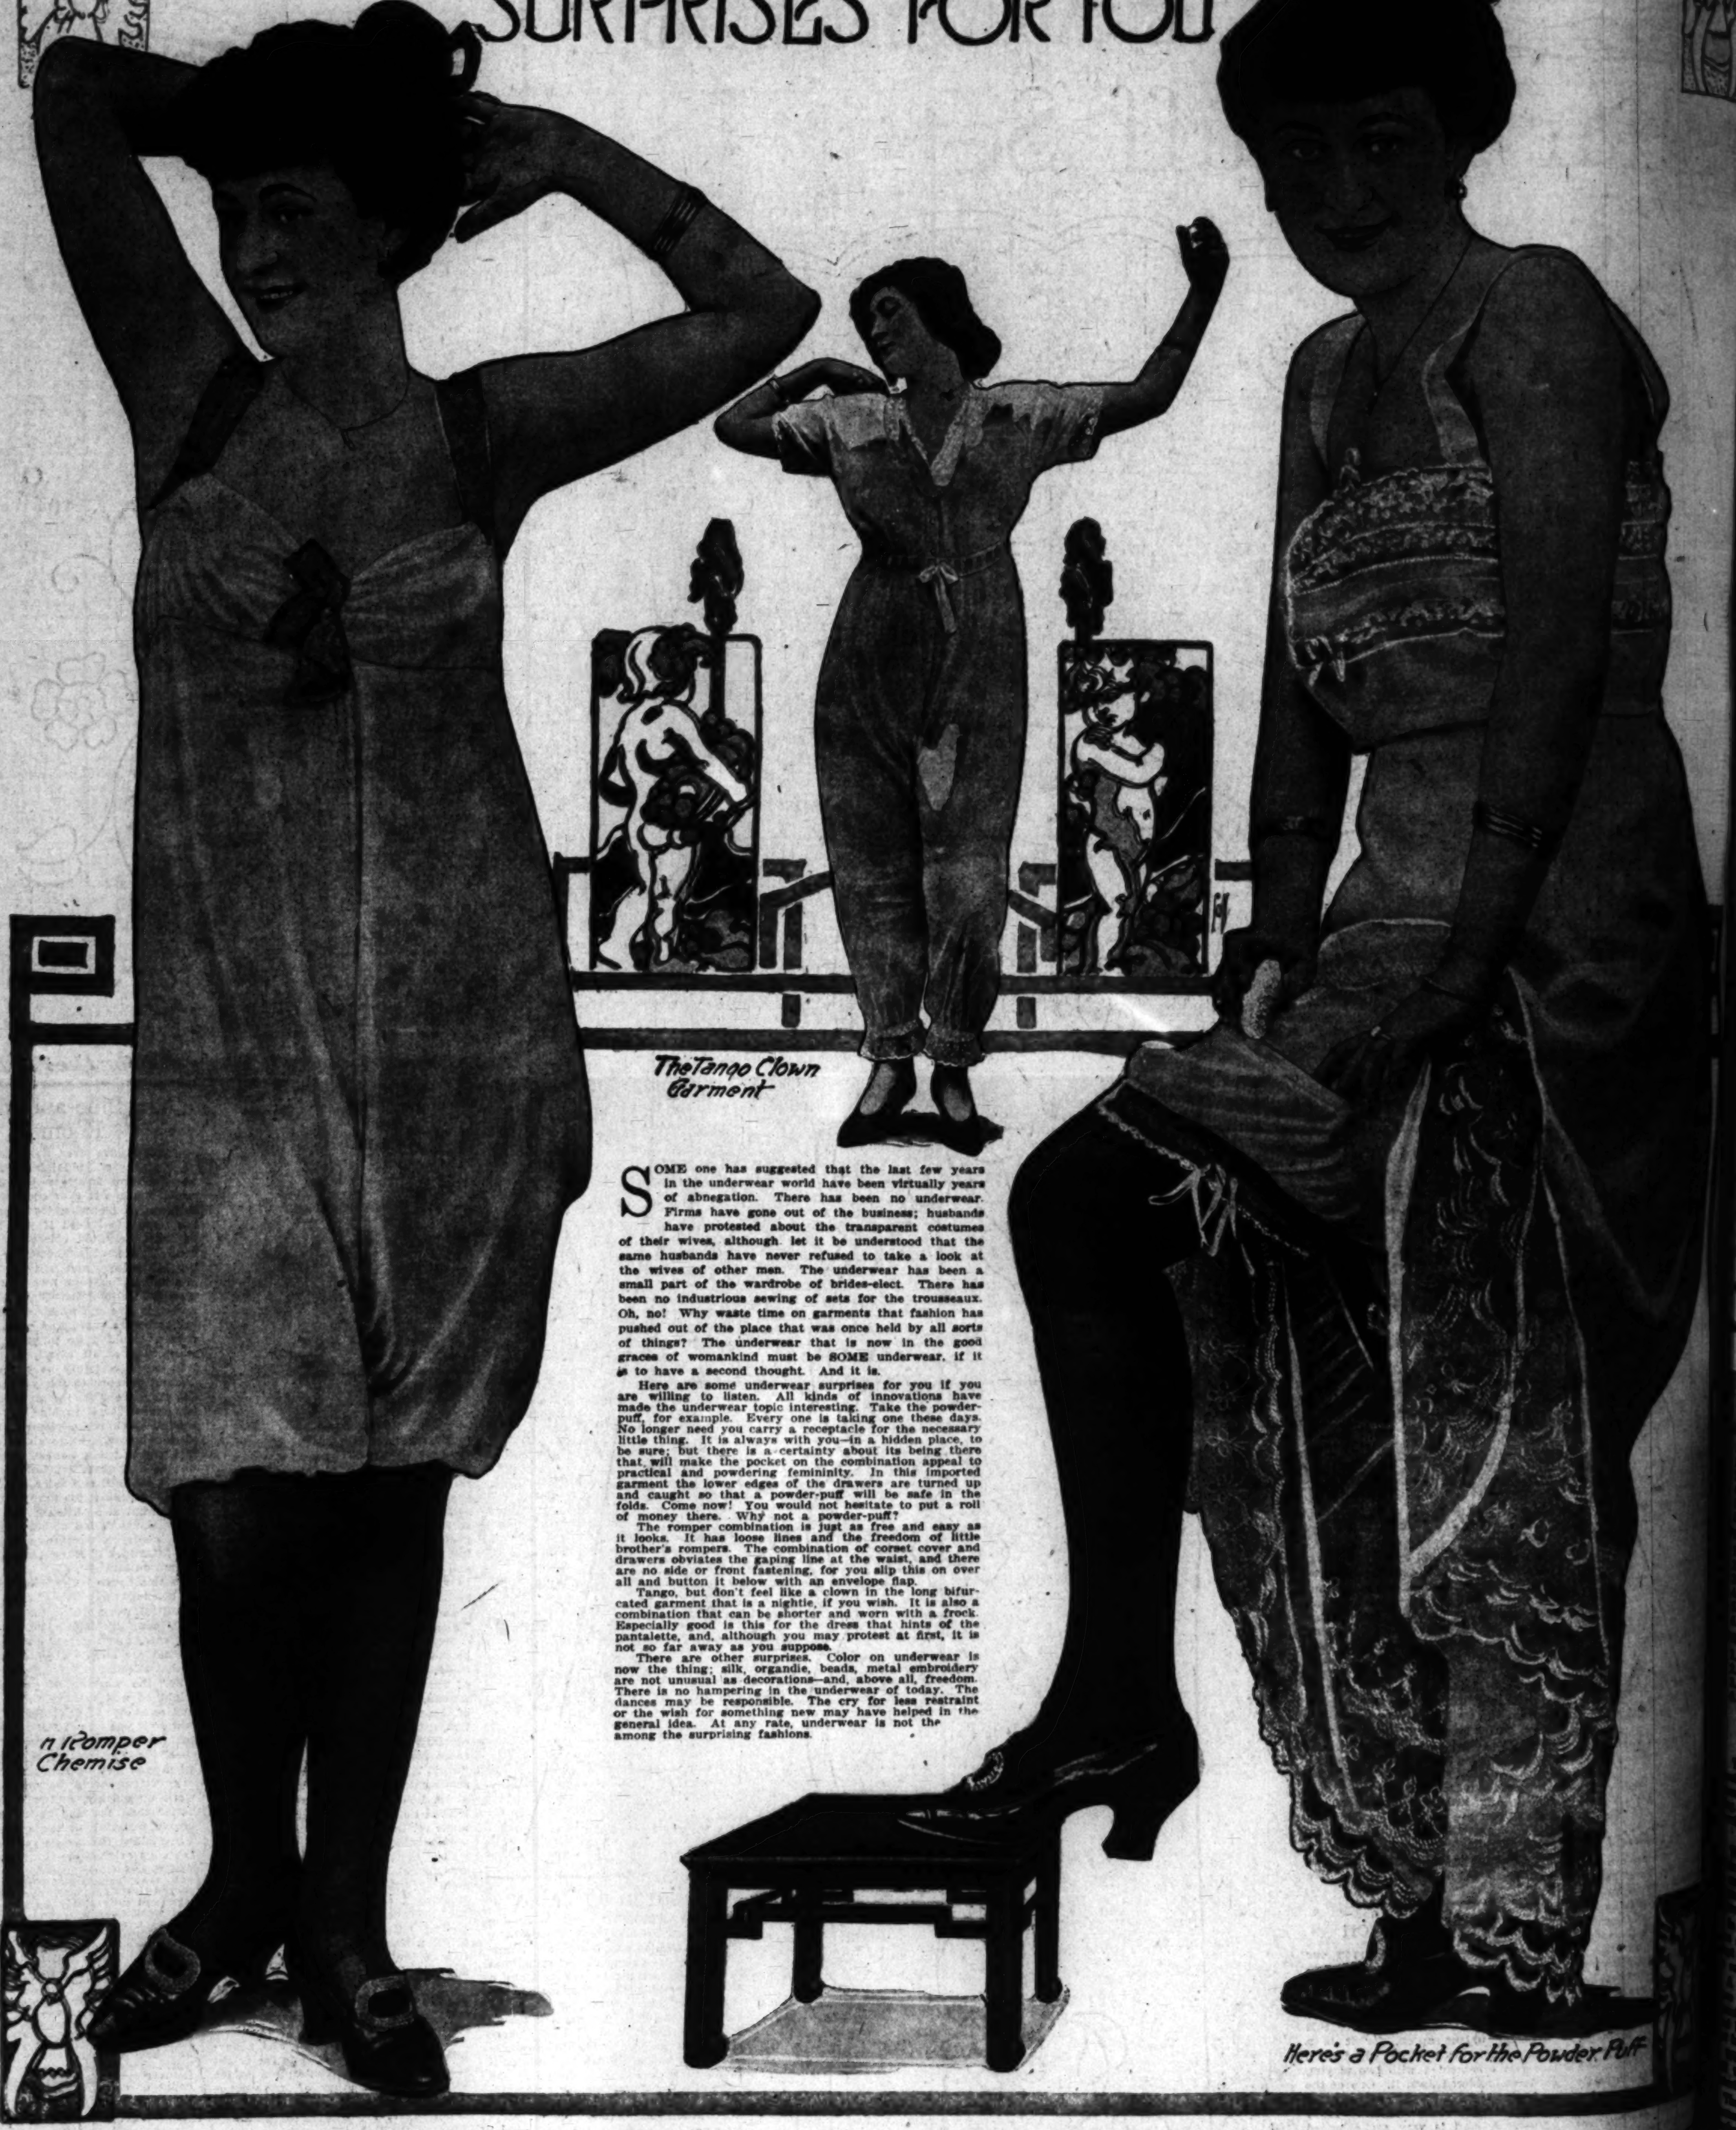
When the border is finished seek out a central design in the spread and ornament it in some embroidery stitch of blue. You will be surprised what a really charming coverlet you will have and how pleasant you will find the work. This kind of embroidery is particularly good for any one who, on account of defective eyesight, cannot do the finer stitches in embroidery.

Really, if you have a blue-and-white room you can't afford to be without a blue-and-white spread.

Novel Sashes

FOLLOWING out the Indian note that every now and then creeps into our symphony of fashion features comes the beaded sash. The beads used are usually of bright-colored wood, arranged in various and weird patterns. Sometimes the wooden beads are made to combine with silk thread and so form a fringe, while at other times they are fastened into a symmetrical design by a needle and silk thread. These sashes sell for rather high prices at the shops, but an examination of one or two of them will reveal to you the secret whereby you can procure the beads at the bead counter in the fancywork department and make your own beaded sash. The average beaded sash is not more than from three to five inches wide, but it is sufficiently long to wrap about your waist twice and fall in two hanging ends.

SOME UNDERWEAR SURPRISES FOR YOU



A Romper Chemise

The Tango Clown Garment

Here's a Pocket for the Powder Puff

SOME one has suggested that the last few years in the underwear world have been virtually years of abnegation. There has been no underwear. Firms have gone out of the business; husbands have protested about the transparent costumes of their wives, although let it be understood that the same husbands have never refused to take a look at the wives of other men. The underwear has been a small part of the wardrobe of brides-elect. There has been no industrious sewing of sets for the trousseaux. Oh, no! Why waste time on garments that fashion has pushed out of the place that was once held by all sorts of things? The underwear that is now in the good graces of womankind must be SOME underwear, if it is to have a second thought. And it is.

Here are some underwear surprises for you if you are willing to listen. All kinds of innovations have made the underwear topic interesting. Take the powder-puff, for example. Every one is taking one these days. No longer need you carry a receptacle for the necessary little thing. It is always with you—in a hidden place, to be sure; but there is a certainty about its being there that will make the pocket on the combination appeal to practical and powdering femininity. In this imported garment the lower edges of the drawers are turned up and caught so that a powder-puff will be safe in the folds. Come now! You would not hesitate to put a roll of money there. Why not a powder-puff?

The romper combination is just as free and easy as it looks. It has loose lines and the freedom of little brother's rompers. The combination of corset cover and drawers obviates the gaping line at the waist, and there are no side or front fastening, for you slip this on over all and button it below with an envelope flap.

Tango, but don't feel like a clown in the long bifurcated garment that is a nightie, if you wish. It is also a combination that can be shorter and worn with a frock. Especially good is this for the dress that hints of the pantalette, and, although you may protest at first, it is not so far away as you suppose.

There are other surprizes. Color on underwear is now the thing; silk, organdie, beads, metal embroidery are not unusual as decorations—and, above all, freedom. There is no hampering in the underwear of today. The dances may be responsible. The cry for less restraint or the wish for something new may have helped in the general idea. At any rate, underwear is not the among the surprising fashions.

The Serpent In the House

By Evangeline Booth

Commander of the Salvation Army Forces in the United States

I have been asked many times the question: "Is drunkenness the cause or the result of trouble in the home?"

There has been a vast deal of discussion of this question. The trouble is it has been regarded from too narrow a point of view. Too many persons draw what they believe to be deductions as to general conditions from individual experiences. The family in one case is embittered by an experience, and allows this experience to discolor or warp its judgment. We frequently come across cases where a man moderately strong has finally succumbed to a series of disasters at home and found oblivion, if not solace, in drink. Quite often we meet people who boast that their children are free from the curse of drink because they have taught them to drink temperately at home and use that fact as an argument that all children should be taught to drink—at home. In the domestic relations court are occasional cases where the husband, when brought up for intoxication, claims that he could not stand the wife's nagging. There are villages where local option obtains where drunkenness is comparatively unknown. Are these villages then in a position to legislate on the liquor question of great cities?

I have had an exceptional opportunity for forming an unbiased opinion of the various aspects of the liquor question. From the reports of the tens of thousands of cases of rescue by the Salvation Army—reports of cases of victims from all parts of the world and from all social strata—we are enabled to form a more or less scientific deduction as to general conditions.

One fact alone, a fact deduced from our reports, should settle for good and all the question, "Is drink the cause or the result of trouble in the home?" and that fact is that more than nine-tenths of the drunkards in the world were habitual drunkards before they were married, having acquired the habit either in clubs or saloons, according to their social status. And the drink habit is almost invariably due to the positive influence of social intercourse of the wrong kind and in our great cities to the lack of the restraining and uplifting influence of social intercourse of the right kind.

OUR reports also show that where men have contracted the habit of drink after marriage, an almost negligible number were driven to the so-called solace of the bottle through commonplace troubles, such as nagging on the part of the wife or of the pinchings of poverty. The troubles at home that cause drunkenness are the great disasters such as the death of the wife, the ruin of a beloved child, a crime committed by a son or a brother, or a continued series of unbearable business disasters.

We find that where attempts are made to shift the responsibility to the shoulders of the wife, such responsibility can generally be traced to the man's own behavior. [illegible] instance, if the man's drinking is due to the wife's infidelity, we find [illegible] the wife's infidelity was due in almost every case to the brutality [illegible] neglect of the husband.

We often hear of cases of men being driven to drink because of the daughter's having gone astray. But in an incredible number of cases [illegible] daughter's downfall is due to the fact that the father's treatment has [illegible] home life unbearable to her and has forced her upon the street. [illegible] comes realization by the father, remorse and cowardly recourse to [illegible] bottle—thus forcing upon the mother, the natural guardian and [illegible] bearer of the family, the spectre of drunkenness and disaster.

IN a vast number of cases we find that the husband complains [illegible] wife's temper has driven him to drink. But upon investigation [illegible] almost invariably shown that the husband was a heavy drinker [illegible] marriage and wed during one of his periods of sobriety. Thus [illegible] not suffering a start on the downward path through her, but only [illegible] customary relapse. It is positively appalling, the number of cases [illegible] trusting women have been "taken in" by men in this way.

If the mother ever is the cause of drinking in the home it is when [illegible] has permitted the child to [illegible] the family table. A sip of [illegible] a very pleasing thing to a child [illegible] the condition that follows [illegible] alluring. Common sense [illegible] destroy the fallacy that [illegible] should be taught to drink at [illegible] But it does not seem to do [illegible] here is where people [illegible] rule made from their own [illegible] observation.

WHY teach children [illegible] at home? Is the [illegible] thus created any [illegible] controlled when fully [illegible] than the appetite created [illegible] saloon?

Some persons claim that [illegible] child is taught to drink at home [illegible] will not drink elsewhere. [illegible] might as well argue that [illegible] at home he will not at [illegible] Others urge that when [illegible] is first permitted to drink [illegible] he will drink moderately [illegible] after. So will a fire [illegible] erately so long as there [illegible] one there to watch it. [illegible] criminal or a crazy [illegible] start a fire and then [illegible] own devices. It must be [illegible] bered that when you teach [illegible] to drink, you are starting [illegible] his passions that his [illegible] not always be on hand [illegible]

But why teach a child [illegible] at all? Drink was never [illegible] help a child. And we all [illegible] what it has done for [illegible]

I went forward as and a lady and child, accompanied by a nurse and court dame, then, was the Princess — the future empress of the Fatherland. I saw features, medium in height, with blonde hair and dark blue eyes. She had on a light pattern, covered with white lace. I saw she wore but one bracelet. at all like a princess — she was so unassuming and simple. My assistant made the preliminary the sittings began. We first took a number of the future Crown Prince. A lively little fellow, he the chair, shouted, and seemed to have no end of fun. I snapped my fingers, told him to look for the camera. Finally the Princess, taking a rattle, stood beside me and shook it while I When the Princess sat down, her lady-in-waiting primped her hair and smoothed out the folds in her dress. To be royal is not to be unfeminine.

"Is my face pleasant enough?" she asked. And again, "You see I must not smile too much!"

Altogether I took twenty-five exposures. The Princess asked me to bring proofs to her hotel. When I went there later she looked over the proofs and selected fourteen. I was informed that photographs showing her in a particularly smiling mood were religiously reserved for presentation only in her family, those designed for the public necessitating a seriousness and gravity of expression. Of those picked the Princess selected three which, she said, I might sell to the people. They showed her in a most austere mood. I later learned, from experience, that this is also a rule with the Kaiser; for all pictures designed for publication he assumes a stern, forbidding martial expression — any showing him laughing, in his opinion, would lessen his dignity and the sense of his authority.

THAT I had taken a photograph of royalty meant that I could command the patronage of army officers and the aristocracy. In September, at the close of the season at Norderney, I went to Berlin and opened a studio. In December, to my delight, I received a command from Count Mirbach to go to the royal palace at Pottsdam. This meant my work had proven exceptionally satisfactory. At eleven in the morning, on the day appointed, I waited at the door of one of the royal chambers. I was in full dress, my assistant, also in dress clothes, waiting outside in the hall. When the Princess appeared, I bowed.

"Are you ready, Herr Baumann?" she asked.

"Yes, your Royal Highness," I replied.

"Come," said she, "we will go into another room; there is better light."

Here a sofa was arranged in the full glare of an open window. The future Crown Prince, naked, was lying on the sofa. The Princess informed me she wished pictures of the child taken.

"They are to be a Christmas present to my husband — can you finish them by Christmas?" she asked.

While I arranged the poses of the child and focused the camera, the Princess spoke to me; she said she was happy to see me again, and hoped my business was good; she expressed great interest in Adelina Patti's performances in Berlin and asked whether I had had a chance to hear the prima donna.

"I was fortunate to take a photograph of Patti, Your Royal Highness," I said, "and she presented me with a ticket to a performance. There was a great demand for seats, Your Royal Highness, and I was offered three hundred marks ($75) for my seat. But I didn't sell the ticket — I went to hear Patti myself."

"That is fine, Herr Baumann," replied the Princess. "Art is above money, and Patti is wonderful. You did right — you can make money in another way." When the eight sittings were over her Royal Highness said, "You must have dinner here, Herr Baumann." I found this had already been ordered for me and my assistant in one of the officers' dining rooms. The Princess was so pleased with the pictures that she ordered twelve dozen, and I was told I might sell photographs to the stores. From a business standpoint this was profitable to me. In all my relations with royalty I made only the customary rates, the charges never at any time being discussed.

Professor Franz von Lenbach, who was then in favor as a painter of royalties, hearing that I had made successful photographs for the Crown Princess, sent for me. He was then painting Bismarck, and desired me to go to the palace to take various poses of the Chancellor which he might use as models in his work. These impressed him so favorably that Lenbach tried to persuade me to go to Munich, where he had his studio, and become his special photographer. There, he explained, he could introduce me to all the European royalties, and I could do a much better business. I accepted his invitation two years later. His promise proved true, for during the quarter of a century that I continued my headquarters there, I was appointed, after taking photographs of visiting royalties, court photographer to most of the kings and queens and ducal houses of Europe.

One of my first assignments with Lenbach was to get photographs showing him in various moods, of Pope Leo XIII., whose picture Lenbach was commissioned to paint. We went to Rome and I had ten sittings of the Pope in the library of the Vatican. His Holiness sat for Lenbach twenty-five times. Clothed in white pontifical robes, the Pope was enthroned in the episcopal chair, his right hand, covered with rings, on one knee. He impressed me as a man of tremendous intellect, and unbending rigidity of manner. He had a small, aristocratic face. He spoke little to us and sat with quiet, solemn dignity.

Once he asked me about Bavaria, and after I had told him of the country, and Munich in particular, he added: "I like Bavaria — it is good Catholic. I am also glad," he added, "that the Catholics are allowed such freedom in Germany."

He spoke of Ludwig II. of Bavaria.

"I am sorry, sorry that his mind is affected," declared the Pope. "It is a great misfortune. I believe his interest in this music of Wagner has affected his mind and driven him insane."

When the painting was finished His Holiness scrutinized it carefully. "I like it very much, Lenbach," he said. Before Lenbach and I left Rome, some of the Roman newspapers began making violent attacks upon Lenbach because of his close friendship with Bismarck. To his surprise Lenbach was summoned to the Vatican, where we were ushered into the presence of the Pope.

"I have examined this painting," said His Holiness. "I find different things I do not like."

"What are these, your Holiness?" asked the painter.

"Well, there is nothing special — but it does not please me. The face, for instance, is too thin."

Lenbach answered: "Your Holi- [illegible] Cases is [illegible] painted [illegible] I know [illegible] find fault [illegible]

"What's this? A letter! 'Pon my soul! How the deuce could anyone—" He got no further, for Miss Guile's action in pulling down her veil betrayed such an agitated state of mind that his own sensations were checked at the outset

RETROSPECTIVE—Prince Robin of Graustark, traveling about the world, arrives in the Catskills to visit the Truxton Kings. W. W. Blithers, self-made multimillionaire and doting father of an only daughter, Maude, prematurely decides on the Prince as a son-in-law. He knows that Graustark is financially embarrassed as a result of the Balkan wars, and with the Blithers millions in mind he confides his domestic ambition to his wife. Blithers calls at the King villa and meets the Prince. He decides to lend Graustark $16,000,000 and departs for New York to confer with Count Quinnox, the Graustark Minister of War. Meanwhile it is decided to give a ball at Blitherwood in honor of Prince Robin. Maude does not attend the ball, and Mr. Blithers, meeting the Prince the next day, apologizes and invites him to dinner and to be his son-in-law. Maude writes her parents that she and her former governess are going abroad, she under an assumed name, and expect to book passage on the Jupiter. Coincidently Prince Robin plans his return to Graustark, and sails under the name R. Schmidt, to avoid publicity. He meets a mysterious Miss Guile on board and is infatuated. She discovers that he is the Prince of Graustark. He wonders who she can be. Meanwhile they arrive in Paris and she disappears. The newspapers publish a denial by Miss Blithers of her engagement to Prince Robin. He gets a letter from Miss Guile.

ROBIN'S face was glowing with excitement. He put his hands in his trousers' pockets and nervously jingled the coins therein, all the while regarding his Minister of Police with speculative eyes. Then he turned to the window and continued to stare down into the Place Vendome for several minutes, obviously turning something over in his mind before coming to a deci-

"You wouldn't adopt that tone of suspicion if you knew Miss Guile," said Robin stiffly. "I am sure nothing could be more frank and above-board than her manner of treating the ——"

"And nothing so cock-sure and confident," put in the Baron. "It would serve her right if you ignored the letter altogether."

"If I were as old as you, Baron, I haven't the least doubt that I should do so," said Robin coolly. "And by the same token, if you were as young as I, you'd do precisely the thing that I intend to do. I'm going to St. Cloud with her."

"Oh, I haven't been in doubt about that for an instant," said Gourou. "At your age I greatly favored the clandestine. You will not pretend to assume that this is not a clandestine excursion."

"It's a jolly little adventure," was all that Robin could say, in his youthfulness.

THE Baron was thoughtful. "There is something behind this extraordinary behavior on the part of a lady generally accredited with sense and refinement," said he after a moment. "I think I have it, too. She is deliberately putting you to a rather severe test."

"Test? What do you mean?"

"She is trying you out, sir. Miss Guile,—or possibly Miss Blithers,—is taking a genuine risk in order to determine whether you are a real gentleman or only a make-believe. She is taking a chance with you. You may call it a jolly little adventure, but I call it the acid test. Young women of good breeding and refinement do not plan such adventures with casual, ship-board acquaintances. She intends to find out what, not who, you are. I must say she's exceedingly clever and courageous."

Robin laughed. "Thank you, Baron. Forewarned is forearmed. I shall remain a gentleman at any cost."

"She is so shrewd and resourceful that I am almost convinced she can be no other than the daughter of the amazing Mr. Blithers. I believe he achieved most of his success through sheer impudence, though it is commonly described as daring."

"In any case, Baron, I shall make it a point to find out whether she is the lady who defies the amazing Mr. Blithers, and goes into print about it."

"SHE has merely denied that she is engaged to the Prince of Graustark. Pray do not come back to us with the news that she is engaged to R. Schmidt," said Gourou significantly.

Robin smiled reflectively. "That would make a jolly adventure of it, wouldn't it?"

At three o'clock, a big limousine swung under the porte cochere at the Ritz and a nimble footman hopped down and entered the hotel. Robin was waiting just inside the doors. He recognized the car as the one that had taken Miss Guile away from the Gare St. Lazarre, and stepped forward instantly to intercept the man.

"For Mr. Schmidt?" he inquired.

"Oui, M'sieur."

THRILLED by a pleasurable sense of excitement, the Prince of Graustark entered the car. He was quick to observe that the curtains in the side windows were partially drawn across the glass. The fact that she elected to journey to the country in a limousine on this hot day did not strike him as odd, for he knew that the comfort loving French people prefer the closed vehicle to the wind-inviting, dust-gathering touring body of the Americans and British. He observed the single letter "L" in gold on the panel of the door, and made mental note of the smart livery of the two men on the front seat.

A delicate perfume lingered in the car, convincing proof that Miss Guile had left it but a few minutes before its arrival at the Ritz. As a matter of fact, she was nearer than he thought, for the car whirled into the Rue de la Paix and stopped at the curb not more than a hundred yards from the Place Vendome.

Once more the nimble footman hopped down and threw open the door. A slender swift-moving figure in a blue linen gown and a wide hat from which sprung two gorgeous blue plumes, emerged from the door of a diamond merchant's shop, and, before Robin could move from his corner, popped into the car and sat down beside him with a nervous little laugh on her lips — red lips that showed rose-like and tempting behind a thick chiffon veil, obviously donned for an excellent reason. The exquisite features of Miss Guile were barely distinguishable beneath the surface of this filmy barrier. The door closed sharply and, almost before the Prince had recovered from his surprise, the car glided off in the direction of the Place de l'Opera.

"Isn't it just like an elopement?" cried Miss Guile, and it was quite plain to him that she was vastly pleased with the sprightly introduction to the adventure. Her voice trembled slightly and she sat up very straight in the wide, comfortable seat.

"Is it really you?" cried Robin, and he was surprised to find that his own voice trembled.

"Oh," she said, with sudden diffidence, "how do you do? What must you think of me, bouncing in like that and never once speaking to you?"

"If I were to tell you what I think of you, you'd bounce right out again without speaking to me," said he, smiling. "How do you do?" He extended his hand, but it was ignored. She sank back into the corner and looked at him for a moment as if uncertain what to say or do next. The shadowy red lips were smiling and the big dark eyes were eloquent, even through the screen.

"I may as well tell you at the outset, Mr. Schmidt, that I've never — never — done a thing like this before," she said, an uneasy note in her voice.

"I am quite sure of that," said he, "and therefore confess to a vast wealth of satisfaction."

"What do you think of me?"

"I think that you are frightened almost out of your boots," said he boldly.

"No, I'm not," she said resolutely. "I am only conscious of feeling extremely foolish."

"I shouldn't feel that way about stealing off for a cup of tea," said he. "It's all quite regular, you know, and is frequently done in the very best circles when the cat's away."

"You see, I couldn't quite scrape up the courage to go directly to the hotel for you," she said. "I know several people who are stopping there and I — I — well, you won't think I'm a dreadful person, will you?"

"Not at all," he declared promptly. Then he resolved to put one of the questions he had made up his mind to ask at the first opportunity. "Do you mind telling me why you abandoned me so completely, so heartlessly on the day we landed?"

"Because there was no reason why I should act otherwise, Mr. Schmidt," she said, the tremor gone from her voice.

"And yet you take me to St. Cloud for tea," he said pointedly.

"Ah, but no one is to know of this," she cried warmly. "This is a secret, a very secret adventure."

He could not help staring. "And that is just why I am mystified. Why is today so different from yesterday?"

"It isn't," she said. "Doesn't all this prove it?"

His face fell. "Don't you want to be seen with me, Miss Guile? Am I not ——"

"Wait! Will you not be satisfied with things as they are and refrain from asking unnecessary questions?"

"I shall have to be satisfied," said he ruefully.

"I am sorry I said that, Mr. Schmidt," she cried, contrite at once. "There is absolutely no reason why I should not be seen with you. But won't you be appeased when I say that I wanted to be with you alone today?"

HE suddenly remembered the Baron's shrewd conjecture and let the opportunity to say something banal go by without a word. Perhaps it was a test, after all. He merely replied that she was paying him a greater compliment than he deserved.

"There are many things I want to speak about, Mr. Schmidt, and — and you know how impossible it is to — to get a moment to one's self when one is being watched like a child, as I am being watched over by dear Mrs. Gaston. She is my shield and armor, my lovely one-headed dragon. I placed myself in her care and — well, she is a very dependable person. You will understand, won't you?"

"Pray do not distress yourself, Miss Guile," he protested. "The last word is spoken. I am too happy to spoil the day by doubting its integrity. Besides, I believe I know you better than you think I do."

He expected her to reveal some sign of dismay, but she was suddenly on guard.

"Then you will not mind my eccentricities," she said calmly, "and we shall have a very nice drive, some tea and a — lark in place of the more delectable birds prescribed by the chef at the Pavillon Bleu."

As the car turned into the Boulevard des Capucines, Robin suppressed an exclamation of annoyance on beholding Baron Gourou and Dank standing on the curb almost within arm's length of the car as it passed. The former was peering rather intently at the two men on the front seat, and evinced little or no interest in the occupants of the tonneau.

"Wasn't that your friend, Mr. Dank?" inquired Miss Guile with interest. He felt that she was chiding him.

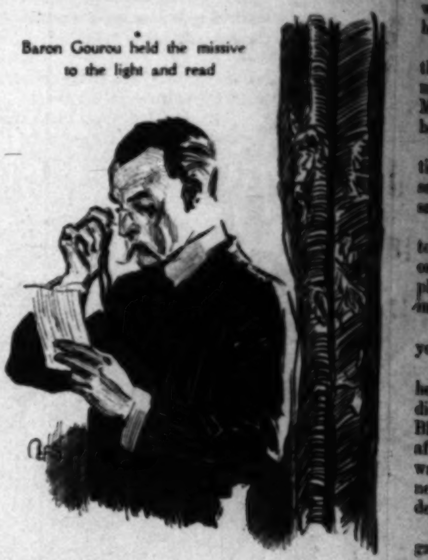
"Yes," said he, and then turned for another look at his compatriots. Gourou was jotting something down on his cuff-band. The Prince mentally promised him something for his pains. "But let us leave dull care behind," he went on gaily.

"He isn't at all dull," said she.

"But he is a care," said he. "He is always losing his heart, Miss Guile."

"And picking up some one else's, I fancy," said she.

"By the way, who was the good-looking chap that came to Cherbourg to meet you?"



Baron Gourou held the missive to the light and read

"A VERY old friend, Mr. Schmidt. I've known him since I was that high." (That high was on a line with her knee.)

"Attractive fellow," was his comment.

"Do you think so?" she inquired innocently, and he thought she overplayed it a little. He was conscious of an odd sense of disappointment in her. "Have you never been out to St. Cloud? No? I never go there without feeling a terrible pity for those poor prodigals who stood besides its funeral pyre and saw their folly stripped down to the starkest of skeletons while they waited. The day of glory is short, Mr. Schmidt, and the night that follows is bitterly long. They say possession is nine points of the law, but what do nine points mean to the lawless? The rich man of today may be the beggar of tomorrow, and the rich man's sons and daughters may be serving the beggars of yesterday. I have been told that in the lower east side of New York City there are children of men and women who were once princes and princesses, counts and countesses, dukes and duchesses. Why doesn't some one write a novel about the royalty that hides its beggary in the slums of that great city?"

"What's this? Epigrams and philosophy, Miss Guile?" he exclaimed wonderingly. "You amaze me. What are you trying to convey? That some day you may be serving yesterday's beggar?"

"Who knows?" she said cryptically. "I am not a philosopher, and I'm sorry about the epigrams. I loathe people who make use of them. They are a cheap substitution for wisdom. Do you take sugar in your tea?" It was her way of abandoning the topic, but he looked his perplexity. "I thought I'd ask now, just for the sake of testing my memory later on." She was laughing.

"Two lumps and cream," he said. "Won't you be good enough to take off that veil? It seriously obstructs the view."

She complacently shook her head. "It doesn't obstruct mine," she said. "Have you been reading what the papers are saying about your friend Mr. Blithers and his obstreperous Maude?"

Robin caught his breath. In a flash he suspected an excellent reason for keeping the veil in place. It gave her a distinct advantage over him.

"Yes. I see that she positively denies the whole business."

"Likewise the prospective [illegible]," she [illegible] "Isn't it sickening?"

"I wonder what Mr. Blithers is [illegible]," said he audaciously. "Poor old [illegible] as sore as a crab. By the way, it is [illegible] she crossed in the steamer with us."

"I am quite certain that she did, Mr. Schmidt," said she.

"You really think so?" he cried, regarding [illegible] keenly.

"The man who came to meet me knows her [illegible] well. He is confident [illegible] he saw her at Cherbourg."

"I see," said he, [illegible] thoroughly convinced. [illegible] may as well confess [illegible] Miss Guile, that I [illegible] her when I see her."

"But you told me [illegible] tively that you had [illegible] seen her, Mr. Schmidt," she said quickly.

"I had not seen her [illegible] to the second day [illegible] on the Jupiter," he explained, enjoying [illegible] immensely.

"It was after that [illegible] you ——"

"I know," he said, [illegible] hesitated, "but you [illegible] didn't know she was [illegible] Blithers until [illegible] after I had met you." [illegible] was a challenge in his [illegible] ner amounting almost [illegible] declaration.

She leaned forward [illegible] gard him more intently.

"Is it possible, [illegible] Schmidt, that you suspect me of being that [illegible] vulgar creature?"

Robin was not to be trapped. There was [illegible] thing in the shadowy eyes that warned him.

"At least, I may say that I do not suspect [illegible] being a horrid, vulgar creature," he said [illegible]

"What else can this Miss Blithers be if [illegible]

"You haven't answered my [illegible] Schmidt."

A Fable Concerning Advice

By Marguerite Wilkinson

ONCE, on a day when many problems rose up and encompassed me about as high walls my friend came to me with admonition in his eyes and advice on his tongue.

And, because of the love that was between us, I hearkened unto the words of my friend and did as he advised. But his advice brought me no good thing. Nay rather it led me deeper into my prison of questionings. And when I saw that my troubles were multiplied upon me I sought out my friend again to ask him why this should be. And I said,

"Lo! All that thou badest me do I have done, yet am I not released from my difficulty — rather is trouble multiplied upon me!"

And my friend lost patience with me and laughed me to scorn and said,

"If thou knewest that what I said would bring thee to no good end, why wast thou obedient to my voice? I advised for thy good — but thy life I cannot make for thee."

And at first I was wroth with my friend but later, when I had lain still a long time with my thoughts, I was thankful unto him.

For I said, "Henceforth I will ask advice only of my own mind, and the soul within me shall be a counsellor."

And when I had sought the advice of my mind and taken counsel with mine own soul, I saw a path between the walls and knew where my feet should tread. And by that path I began to climb from my prison.

Then came other friends with advice on their tongues and cried unto me,

"Not this way! Not this way!"

But I hearkened not unto them, for I felt that I was destined to be mine own deliverer. And at last there came a day when the walls of my prison lay below me and when I could smile upon my friends and say,

"Lo, it was the right path!"

But my friends only smiled back at me with right good will and said,

"You have had good luck. We are glad."

Queen Helena of Italy, on the contrary, proved vivacious and volatile; while she has great dignity, she is gracious, laughing, smiling. She is by far the best dressed queen in the world, the most chic, the most impeccably fashionable.

Bowing, I would show the Queen to the place before the camera where she was to sit. She assumed postures with indescribable grace. Holding a silver hand-mirror, she would smile, alter her expression, and study the attitudes she desired.

"Is my hair all right?" she would ask.

Then she would preen stray tresses of her dark hair, press her eyebrows, smooth out her dress.

I might say that, as is customary, I never spoke to royalties unless first addressed. While one might think it necessary to assume an humble attiture, I found early in my experience that any sort of exaggerated respect or subservience is disliked. Royalties generally like to be treated in an everyday friendly way. In fact, breaking away from court formalities, I think they found that having their pictures taken gave them an opportunity to be democratic.

"Do please tell me," Queen Helena would insist, "if my hands are placed well. You suggest." The Queen wished to look well in her pictures; and she was frank in saying so. After Queen Helena one of the most stunning of royal women is the Princess Gisella, daughter of the Emperor of Austria, and wife of Prince Leopold of Bavaria. Giving one's photograph as a Christmas present is a favorite custom with members of the royal families. With this purpose the Princess came to see me for her first sitting. I was struck by her appearance. Tall, graceful, willowy, she wears wonderful dresses, all of the latest Paris modes. You would not call her face pretty, but her figure is exceptional. You could span her waist with the fingers of two hands. The Princess Gisella has undoubtedly the thinnest waist of any of the queens or princesses of Europe.

PRINCE DR. LUDWIG FERDINAND, an uncle of the King of Spain, conducts a large hospital in Munich at his own expense. He explained once, when he sat for a picture, that medicine interested him more than anything else. "There is really no pleasure in the empty honors of being born to court — pleasure exists in service." Prince Ferdinand has made medicine a lifelong study, and is perhaps one of the best physicians in Europe. He is a tall, muscular, dignified man, with great world-love in his eyes — and something of a poet. He holds public clinics, treats hundreds of the poor, and gives his services and medicines without cost.

Her Highness, the Princess Theresa of Bavaria, came to me for a sitting immediately after she had returned from a long trip to the United States. She is a sister of the King, and one of the most intelligent princesses in Europe.

"I liked New York the best of the American cities, Herr Baumann," she said. "It is colossal, almost appalling in its magnitude. There you find all phases of European life mingled. It is American and yet it possesses vestiges of Europe. It reveals great imagination. As for the United States, it is going to be the greatest country in the world, the most powerful country; it will command commerce; it will go ahead of all of us. I like the American women, Herr Baumann. They are not imprisoned by formalities, not restricted as we are. They have brains, and they have had a chance to develop them. More — even if they don't have good figures, they know how to manage," she laughed.

"What Did Your Mama Give You at Night?"

Every night, in this summer of 1914, thousands of children enjoy Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice in milk.

It has come to be the "good-night dish."

The little ones delight in it, wait for it, count on it. Sometimes they wonder what children did before Puffed Grains were invented. And they ask their mothers what they used to eat.

Bowls of milk, in the olden days, were filled with bread or crackers—made of just the inner part of the wheat.

Now we have the whole Wheat, shaped just as it grew, but puffed to eight times normal size. It is four times as porous as bread. It has been subjected to terrific heat, so it tastes like toasted nuts.

Or we have the whole Rice, or the heart of the Corn, made into toasted bubbles. Into wafers that float, and that crush at a touch into most delicious morsels.

And we have every food granule blasted to pieces so digestion can instantly act. All this because Prof. A. P. Anderson learned how to explode these grains.

Puffed Rice, 15c

CORN PUFFS 15¢

In the morning these same grains are served with sugar and cream, or we mix them with our berries. At dinner we scatter them—like nut meats—over dishes of ice cream. We use them in candy making. And countless children, when at play, eat them dry like peanuts.

Stop and consider how many delights these Puffed Grains have brought to your home. Think what it means, morning, noon and night, to have them always ready to serve. How you use them as foods and confections.

You will wonder what you did without them. You will also wonder why you ever let the pantry stock run out. Go see if you have them—all three—on hand.

"Herr Baumann, of all countries I would prefer to live in America."

Looming out above all monarchs and personalities, that of the Kaiser stands distinct. He is always war lord and ruler. As Court Photographer to the Emperor and Empress I was often summoned to Berlin to take photographs. On all these occasions the Kaiser insisted on personally paying the hotel bills for myself and assistants.

My last experience in photographing the Kaiser is typical. I was peremptorily summoned to Berlin and informed that the Kaiser desired a number of sittings. At that time the Kaiser was sitting to two painters, one Fleishman, the other an artist whose name I do not remember. With three assistants, whom I got so as to work quickly, I went to the palace one morning. We waited for five minutes in one of the ante-rooms. The two artists sat before their easels. Finally the door opened. The Kaiser, in the uniform of Hungarian Hussars, entered.

"Good morning, gentlemen," he said. His voice was resonant, commanding. In every gesture he showed the perfection of military affectation.

His gaze devoured us. When the Kaiser speaks he looks direct and deeply into your eyes. You feel he reads your mind.

"Where is the Court Photographer?" he said. I came forward.

"Where shall I stand—where is the light best?" he asked. It was as if he were giving a military order.

THE KAISER took his place. When he is photographed he voluntarily assumes the poses desired; he alters his expression as he wills; then he commands. He refuses to be photographed sitting; this position, in his opinion, lacking dignity. He likes photographs which reveal him with a tense commanding expression. Before the camera, from what I have observed, his main thought is of the effect his picture shall have, first, upon the army, and then upon the people. Because of the two artists who had begun work at their easels I had difficulty in properly placing and focusing my camera. The Kaiser at once saw this.

"Baumann is nervous," said he. And addressing the artists, he commanded, "Gentlemen, please make place for the Court Photographer."

They retired. I moved the camera to various positions, working as quickly as possible, the three assistants handing me plates.

The Kaiser assumed one position after another, turning this way and that. He had already thought out the poses he desired; knew exactly what he wanted. Master of the situation even before the camera, he changed his posture and expression with the art of a consummate actor. He was very particular about the curl of his moustache, often between exposures giving the ends a stiff upward twirl with his fingers.

"All right: go ahead, Baumann." It was like taking a moving picture. Plates changed between me and my assistants with slight-of-hand agility.

"Enough!" finally declared the Kaiser. In forty minutes I had taken thirty-five different photographs, all in different positions.

"I hope the photographs will be the kind I like," he said. "I will then give you an order."

When I received the proofs back I found he had personally made the most painstaking directions for retouching. He was particularly fastidious that every vestige of creases be touched out from his clothes, especially the sleeves. Most of the photographs showed him serious and grim of visage. Evidently he was pleased. His order that time amounted to $1500. A number of enlargements were ordered for his regiments. Of all the photographs taken, those selected for this purpose represented him as being most rigidly commanding and formidably severe. Without question the Kaiser is a profound psychologist.

rushing into print, as you say. Extremely bad taste, I should call it."

Robin's ears burned. He could not defend himself. There was nothing left for him to do but to say that it "served him jolly well right, the way Miss Blithers came back at him."

"Still," she said, "I would be willing to make a small wager that the well-advertised match comes off in spite of all the denials. Given a determined father, an ambitious mother, a purse-filled daughter and an empty-pursed nobleman, and I don't see how the inevitable can be avoided."

His face was flaming. It was with difficulty that he restrained the impulse to put her right in the matter without further ado.

"Are you sure that the Prince is so empty of purse as all that?" he managed to say, without betraying himself irretrievably.

"There doesn't seem to be any doubt that he borrowed extensively of Mr. Blithers," she said scornfully. "He is under some obligations to his would-be-father-in-law, I submit, now isn't he?"

"I suppose so, Miss Guile," he admitted uncomfortably.

"And therefore owes him something more than a card in the newspapers, don't you think?"

"Really, Miss Guile, I — I——"

"I beg your pardon. The Prince's affairs are of no importance to you, so why should I expect you to stand up for him?"

"I confess that I am a great deal more interested in Miss Blithers than I am in the Prince. By the way, what would you have done had you been placed in her position?"

"I think I should have acted quite as independently as she."

"If your father were to pick out a husband for you, whether or no, you would refuse to obey the paternal command?"

"Most assuredly. As a matter of fact, Mr. Schmidt, my father has expressed a wish that I should marry a man who didn't appeal to me at all."

"And you refused?"

"Absolutely."

"More or less as Miss Blithers has done," he said pointedly.

"Miss Blithers, I understand, has the advantage of me in one respect. I am told that she wants to marry another man and is very much in love with him."

"A chap named Scoville," said Robin, unguardedly.

"You know him, Mr. Schmidt?"

"No. I've merely heard of him. I take it from your remark that you don't want to marry anybody — at present."

"Quite right. Not at present. Now let us talk of something else. A bas Blithers! Down with the plutocrats! Stamp out the vulgarians! Is there anything else you can suggest?" she cried gaily.

"Long live the Princess Maude!" said he, and doffed his hat. The satirical note in his voice was not lost on her. She started perceptibly, and caught her breath. Then she sank back into the corner with a nervous, strained little laugh.

"You think she will marry him?"

"I think as you do about it, Miss Guile," said he, and she was silenced.

CHAPTER XV.

THE MICE TRAPPED.

THEY had a table in a cool, shady corner of the broad porch overlooking the Place d'Armes and the Seine and its vociferous ferries. To the right runs the gleaming roadway that leads to the hills and glades through which pomp and pride once strode with such fatal arrogance. Blue coated servitors attended them on their arrival, and watched over them during their stay. It was as if Miss Guile were the fairy princess who had but to wish and her slightest desire was gratified. Her guest, a real prince, marveled not a little at the complete sway she exercised over this somewhat autocratic army of menials. They bowed and scraped, and fetched, and carried, and were not Swiss but slaves in Baghdad during the reign of its most illustrious Caliph, Al-haroun Raschid the great. The magic of Araby could have been no more potent than the spell this beautiful girl cast over the house of Mammon. She laid her finger upon a purse of gold and wished, and lo! the wonders of the magic carpet were repeated.

Robin remembered that Maude Applegate Blithers had spent the greater part of her life in Paris, and it was therefore not unreasonable to suppose that she had spent something else as well. At any rate, the Pavilion Bleu was a place where it had to be spent if one wanted the attention accorded the few.

She had removed her veil, but he was not slow to perceive that she sat with her back to the long stretch of porch.

"Do you prefer this place to Armenonville or the Paillard at Pre Catelan, Miss Guile?" he inquired, quite casually, but with a secret purpose.

"No, it is stupid here, as a rule, and common. Still every one goes to the other place in the afternoon and I particularly wanted to be as naughty as possible, so I came here today."

"It doesn't strike me as especially naughty," he remarked.

"But it was very, very naughty before you and I were born, Mr. Schmidt. The atmosphere still remains, if one possesses a comprehensive imagination."

"I daresay," said he, "but the imagination doesn't thrive on tea. Those were the days of burgundy and a lot of other red things."

"One doesn't need to be in shackles to expatiate on the terrors of the Bridge of Sighs," she said.

"Are you going to take me up to the park?"

"Yes. Into the shadows."

"Oh, that's good! I'm sure my imagination will work beautifully when it isn't subdued by all these blue devils. I — Que voulez vous?" The question was directed rather sharply to a particularly deferential "blue devil" who stood at his elbow.

"Monsier Schmidt?"

"Yes. What's this? A letter! 'pon my soul, how the deuce could any one — —" He got no further, for Miss Guile's action in pulling down her veil and the subsequent spasmodic glance over her shoulder betrayed such an agitated state of mind on her part that his own sensations were checked at the outset.

"There must be some one here who knows you, Mr. Schmidt," she said nervously. "See what it says, please,—at once. I — perhaps we should be starting home immediately."

ROBIN tore open the envelope. A glance showed him that the brief note was from Gourou. A characteristic G served as a signature. As he read, a hard line appeared between his eyes and his expression grew serious.

"It is really nothing, Miss Guile," he said, and prepared to tear the sheet into many pieces. "A stupid, alleged joke of a fellow who happens to know me, that's all."

"Don't tear it up!" she cried sharply. "What does it say? I have a right to know, Mr. Schmidt, even though it is only a joke. What has this friend of yours to say about me? What coarse, uncalled-for comment has he to make about — —"

"Let me think for a moment, Miss Guile," he interrupted, suddenly realizing that it was time for reflection. After a moment he said soberly: "I think it would be wise if we were to leave instantly. There is nothing to be alarmed about, I assure you, but — well, we'd better go."

"Will you allow me to see that letter?" she asked, extending her hand.

"I'd rather not, if you don't mind."

"But I insist, sir! I'll not go a step from this place until I know what all this is about."

"As it happens to concern you even more than it does me, I suppose you'd better see what it says." He passed the letter over to her and watched her narrowly as she read. Again the veil served as a competent mask.

"Who wrote this letter, Mr. Schmidt?" she demanded. Even through the veil he could see that her eyes were wide with — was it alarm or anger?

"A man named Gourou. He is a detective engaged on a piece of work for Mr. Totten."

"Is it a part of his duty to watch your movements?" she asked, leaning forward.

"No. He is my friend, however," said Robin steadily. "According to this epistle, it would appear that it is a part of his duty to keep track of you, not me. May I ask why you should be shadowed by two of his kind?"

She did not answer at once. When she spoke, it was with a determined effort to maintain her composure.

"I am sorry to have subjected you to all this, Mr. Schmidt. We will depart at once. I find that the cat is never away, so we can't be mice. What a fool I've been."

He laid a hand upon the small fingers that clutched the crumpled sheet of paper. To have saved his life, he could not keep the choked, husky tremor out of his voice.

"The day is spoiled for you. That is my only regret. As for me, Miss Guile, I am not without sin, so I may cast no stones. Pray regard me as a fellow culprit, and rest assured that I have no bone to pick with you. I too am watched and yet I am no more of a criminal than you. Will you allow me to say that I am a friend whose devotion cannot be shaken by all the tempests in the world?"

"Thank you," she said, and turned her hand under his to give it a quick, convulsive clasp. Her spirits seemed to revive under the responsive grip. "You might have said all the tempests in a tea pot, for that is really what it amounts to. My father is a very foolish man. Will you send for the car?"

He called an attendant and ordered him to find Miss Guile's footman at once. When he returned to the table, she was reading the note once more.

"It is really quite thrilling, isn't it?" she said, and there was still a quaver of indignation in her voice. "Are you not mystified?"

"Not in the least," said he promptly, and drew a chair up close beside hers. "It's as plain as day. Your father has found you out, that's all. Let's read it again," and they read it together.

"A WORD to the wise," it began. "Two men from a private detective concern have been employed since yesterday in watching the movements of your companion, for the purpose of safeguarding her against good-looking young men, I suspect. I have it from the most reliable of sources that her father engaged the services of these men almost simultaneously with the date of our sailing from New York. It may interest you to know that they followed you to St. Cloud in a high-power car and no doubt are watching you as you read this message from your faithful friend, who likewise is not far away."

"I should have anticipated this, Mr. Schmidt," she said ruefully. "It is just the sort of thing my father would do."

"You seem to take it calmly enough."

"I am quite used to it. I would be worth a great deal to any enterprising person who made it his business to steal me. There is no limit to the ransom he could demand."

"You alarm me," he declared. "No doubt these worthy guardians look upon me as a kidnapper. I am inclined to shiver."

"'All's well that ends well,'" quoth she, pulling on her gloves. "I shall restore you safely to the bosom of the Ritz and that will be the end of it."

"I almost wish that someone would kidnap you, Miss Guile. It would afford me the greatest pleasure in the world to snatch you from their clutches. Your father would be saved paying the ransom but I should have to be adequately rewarded. I fancy, however, that he wouldn't mind paying the reward I should hold out for."

"I am quite sure he would give you anything you were to ask for, Mr. Schmidt," said she gaily. "You would be reasonable, of course."

"I might ask for the most precious of his possessions," said he, leaning forward to look directly into eyes that wavered and refused to meet his.

"Curiosity almost makes me wish that I might be kidnapped. I should then find out what you consider to be his most precious possession," she said, and her voice was perilously low.

"I think I could tell you in advance," said he, his eyes shining.

"I — I prefer to find out in my own way, Mr. Schmidt," she stammered hurriedly. Her confusion was immensely gratifying to him. There is no telling what might have happened to the Prince of Graustark at that moment if an obsequious attendant had not intervened with the earthly information that the car was waiting.

THE MAGIC ISLE

By MINNA IRVING

Bang, whang, clatter and clang,
 Flash, crash, glitter and glare,
Sun, sand, ripple and splash,
 Trumpet's blare and the salt sea-air.
Foam—not all on the ocean-wave—
 Sizzling frankfurters hot and brown,
Candy, peanuts, merry-go-rounds,
 See-saw, up and down.

Fat folks, thin folks, tall and short,
 Pretty, homely, prosperous, poor;
Silk and cotton, gems and paste,
 Wheels and whistles and Fortune's lure,
Folly shaking her brazen bells;
 Age discarding his locks of gray;
Fun and frolic and waving flags;—
 Coney Island is under way.
